Winter's Impact Staggers Nation

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Many Kentucky schools are still closed, Florida and Georgia growers are counting crop losses and laying off workers, and Ohio's governor declared an energy emergency as the impact of one of the coldest winters on record is outlasting the subzero temperatures.

A General Motors assembly plant in Doraville, Ga., was closed until further notice because of a propane gas shortage, a company spokesman said Sunday. The shutdown laid off 4,500 workers.

In Ohio, Gov. James A. Rhodes met Sunday with fuel industry spokesmen and labor, business and government officials and then declared an energy emergency, but not an energy crisis as some groups had recommended.

Rhodes' action asks residential natural gas users to observe 65-degree temperature limits — the same level urged for all Americans by President Carter in an energy-saving plan announced Friday. The Ohio general assembly scheduled a special session for Tuesday to consider any legislation Rhodes may feel is necessary.

Florida's Freeze Damage Is Pegged At $120 Million

In Florida, agriculture experts were trying to calculate the damage from the state's worst freeze in 15 years, which some predicted at well over $120 million.

"Celery, lettuce and peppers were wiped out," said Frank Pope, chairman of the Florida Emergency Board. "They were ready to harvest. The growers can still replant but a lot of workers will be off for a while."

He said the tomato loss alone would probably hit $43 million.

Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, taking into consideration that more than 100,000 farm workers may be out of jobs, on Saturday declared a general state of disaster, opening the way for farm workers to get the unemployment compensation they normally could not receive.

In neighboring Georgia, Gene Dyson, president of the Georgia Business and Industry Association, said 50,000 workers have been laid off there. He said the figure could rise to 150,000 to 200,000 if cold weather and natural gas shortages continued through the next week or two.

Officials have said it could be a month before gas supplies are sufficient to reopen such plants closed due to energy shortages.

Although temperatures warmed in some areas over the weekend, numerous schools remained closed today.

About three dozen school systems in Kentucky still were closed, some on an extended holiday that began before Christmas. Most Dayton, Ohio, schools were open today but the Dayton superintendent told Gov. Rhodes that chances of remain-

Carter Seeking Halt To All Nuke Tests

By FRANK CORMIER and LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is calling for a halt to all nuclear testing, "instantly and completely," as part of a broader program to curb the spread of nuclear weapons and ultimately ban them from the earth.

In his first interview as President, conducted Sunday for publication today, Carter acknowledged that he did not know whether the Soviet Union would agree to his proposal for a quick halt that would stop even underground testing. But, he said, "They have sent an encouraging message back."

The fledgling President, meeting in his Oval Office with four reporters for The Associated Press and United Press International, also expressed optimism that there will be "fairly rapid ratification" of a new strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviets.

And he said his National Security Council is in agreement on the need to reduce overseas sales of American-made weapons, but that he does not anticipate "a moratorium" on such sales.

On strategic arms talks, Carter hinted that he might be willing to bypass for later consideration a longstanding East-West debate over how to deal with the U.S. cruise missile and Soviet Backfire bomber in any new strategic arms pact. He declared: "I would not let those two items stand in the way of some agreement."

Asserting that he "very deeply" meant what he said in his inaugural address about ultimately eliminating all nuclear weapons everywhere, Carter, in his most detailed national security-foreign policy statement to date, envisioned a three-step effort aiming toward that end.

—First, he said, the two superpowers would have to "put firm limits on ourselves," as the objective of a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT).

—Then the United States and the Soviet Union would go a step further and actually reduce their own stockpiles of atomic weapons which would, he said, "demonstrate to the world we are sincere."

—From that point he would seek "reductions including all nations, even those who have a relatively small inventory now."

"I would like to proceed quickly and aggressively with a comprehensive test ban treaty," he said. "I am in favor of eliminating the testing of all nuclear devices, instantly and completely." He said this included underground testing as well.

And, the President said, the United State will use "every means available to us" to keep nuclear arms from spreading to countries that do not have them now.

Carter's apparent optimism about prospects for negotiations with the Soviets was matched by an expression of confidence that a Middle East peace conference

Stockman Pushing Probe Of Donations By Korean

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michigan GOP Rep. David Stockman says he and other Republican freshmen will push for a select committee to probe campaign contributions from Korean businessman Tongsun Park to congressmen.

Stockman said the group is headed by Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa. He said the resolution will be introduced Thursday.

Stockman, representing Michigan's 4th District, said the House Ethics Committee is incapable of making a proper investigation because it cannot investigate dealings with former congressmen.

The Ethics Committee has been looking into Park's activities and has hired a former Watergate committee investigator.

At the same time, Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., Senate minority leader, asserted that investigators should be able to find as many as 50 members of Congress who have taken money from South Korean agents.

Baker said Sunday that not all of those involved are Democrats, and added that most are members of the House of Representatives.

Appearing on NBC's "Meet The Press," Baker declined to supply details or name his sources of information.

He said there are some proper activities for Korean agents in assessing the mood of Americans, but there is ample proof that there was "at least broad indiscretion" in efforts to influence Congress.

He said that these activities are being investigated by a congressional committee and by the Justice Department and there possibly will be prosecution in some cases.

Electrical Blackout Blamed On Freeze

BY NICK SMITH
Staff Writer

A power failure blamed on freezing drizzle caused lights in Benton Harbor to blink this morning and was responsible for the closing of Auto Specialties Manufacturing company's Riverside plant.

John P. Banyon, manager of Indiana & Michigan Electric company's Benton Harbor division, said part of the company's Riverside substation was knocked out of operation this morning.

The layer of ice that Twin City motorists found on their windshields this morning was similar to the coating of ice that temporarily curtailed operation of the Riverside substation, Banyon said.

Auto Specialties' Riverside plant is a main user of the power from the affected substation, Banyon said. It was the only industry forced to close, he added.

Banyon said I&M work crews began cleaning the ice from insulators, bushings and buses at daylight today. Some 33,000 volts were diverted from the Benton Harbor Main street station to the Riverside substation, causing an occasional blinking of lights in Benton Harbor, he explained.

Banyon expected the Riverside station to be in full operation as soon as the ice was removed from the electrical equipment, he said this morning.

Harold Vawter, a general manager of Auto Specialties, said operation of the company's Riverside plant will resume with the first shift Tuesday. The plant had no power today, he said.

Sanctifying The Draft Dodgers

During last year's Presidential campaign, one of the few points on which Jimmy Carter stated a clearly discernable position was that if elected, he would pardon the Vietnam draft dodgers.

True to that promise, Carter made the pardon his first official order of business as the newly installed Chief Executive. He signed the proclamation and its executive order spelling out the details upon finishing his first breakfast in the White House on Friday morning.

It is estimated close to 250,000 ducked the Vietnam war by various means. They included refusing to register for the draft, failing to report for induction, going over the hill following induction, burning draft cards, and sabotaging selective service records.

Of that number, something like 100,000 are eligible for Carter's clemency. These are the men who jumped the border to Canada or Sweden, the two most popular havens, or who managed to remain underground here at home.

The pardon does not, per its wording, extend to somebody who raided a Selective Service office to destroy its record, an SS employee who conspired to shield potential inductees, no less than honorable discharges from the armed forces. Carter did, however, order the military to speed up a case-by-case review of the latter category.

Neither does it affect several thousand draft dodgers who accepted Ford's earlier offer of amnesty in exchange for acknowledging their dodging the draft and accepting whatever conditions might be attached to their parole. These conditions, it might be pointed out, amounted to nothing more than, in manner of speaking, the draft dodger eating a little crow.

Also unaffected by Carter's action are 700 ex-servicemen whom Ford pardoned for desertion upon their showing of being wounded or decorated before taking off from their posts.

As might be expected, Friday's post prandial act of grace leaves a sharp division throughout the public.

There is a sharp reaction best expressed by Barry Goldwater who labelled the pardon a disgrace and a disservice to the nation.

The militant wing of the anti-Vietnam group badgers Carters for taking what it calls a half step.

Amnesty is an official finding, usually by the government's executive branch, that no crime was ever committed.

The militants contend it was no crime to refuse to support what they call a morally unjustified war.

In between are the parents and friends of the draft dodgers who could care less about the legal distinction between pardon and amnesty. They just want their boys to come back.

This third grouping probably represents at least the large plurality viewpoint within the citizenry.

While Goldwater may resort to purple prose in describing Carter's move, it does go far beyond a sensible approach or what might be necessary to deburring a thorny issue.

Carter acted as he did because having promised the pardon for its vote-catching purpose he had to follow through or else be taunted as just another politician or worse.

Draft dodging, desertion, mutiny even, have been common to every war in history, and pardon or amnesty have been equally prevalent once the fighting subsided. In our own country, starting with the Whiskey Rebellion in 1794 and up through Ford's last minute reprieve a few days ago, amnesty or pardon has been extended on 39 occasions. Lincoln issued six clemency orders to varying size groups during the Civil War. Two of them were pardons to Union deserters returning to duty within 60 days or the orders. He issued others to Confederate troops on condition they desert their colors.

Carter's decision, consequently, amounts to blessing a revolt against governmental movement in a particular zone.

We wonder if Jimmy would be as charitable if several thousand or several million Americans between now and April 15th declined to pay their income tax on the claim it is bureaucratic waste of their patrimony and the nation's substance.

Demand For 32-Hour Week Is Ridiculous

Calls for a shorter work week certainly are not new in the American labor movement. But the demand by steelworkers for a 32-hour work week without a reduction in pay sounds like more than a bargaining ploy. The shorter work week heads the list of demands the United Steelworkers Union will be pressing as new contract talks open in February.

"Lifetime income security," larger cost-of-living increases and other items are on the union's list, but there is little doubt the 32-hour week is the demand the union wants most of all. It is being promoted as a means of creating new jobs. Actually, it would likely have the opposite effect.

Paying the same salary for a 20 per cent reduction in man hours is another way of saying labor costs will rise 20 per cent. That is not an insignificant increase, especially for an industry already beset by insufficient business to operate at capacity because of stiff competition from overseas steel manufacturers.

If the union succeeds in forcing a 20 per cent increase in labor costs, the higher costs are most likely to result in more sluggish sales, layoffs and some mill closings. Pretending a cause will have an opposite effect does not make it so.

Turning In Lost $100 'No Big Deal,' He Says

By ALAN AREND
Staff Writer

COLOMA — It was "no big deal" for a Coloma man, but it was one of the best hands ever dealt to a young Benton Harbor man.

As a result, Charles Zabratanski, 23, of 1967 Benton Center road, got back $100 in a money clip that he lost here Saturday morning.

The money and clip were found by Lester Pumfrey, 77, 463 Church street, Coloma, who turned them into police. They were returned to Zabratanski by police who located him searching for money.

The money and clip were lost when Zabratanski reported he had left them on the trunk of his car when leaving a gas station in Coloma.

Zabratanski, a steel erector for Souers Construction Co., Eau Claire, had been working in Decatur for about an hour when he realized his mistake.

Fortunately for Zabratanski, Pumfrey happened to be making his daily walk into downtown Coloma when he spotted the money and clip in the snow along the shoulder of the road and brought it to the Coloma police station.

Zabratanski in the meantime had returned to Coloma, retracing his route from the Miami gas station to I-94 in search of his money. While he was searching a Coloma police officer came upon the scene and returned a few minutes later with Zabratanski's money and an explanation as to how it was found.

Zabratanski said he went to Pumfrey's home an offered him a reward, but Pumfrey wouldn't accept it.

Pumfrey told this newspaper it was "no big deal...returning someone's property."

Joining Carter Team

DETROIT (AP) — Several members of Mayor Coleman Young's staff are headed for Washington and jobs with the Carter administration, according to Deputy Mayor William Beckham. But, Beckham said, reports that he also would leave Detroit are premature. According to Beckham, Detroit finance director Dennis Green will be named associate director of the Office of Management and Budget, while the city's Washington lobbyist, Carl Reidy Jr., will become deputy assistant secretary in the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Chester Davenport, former Detroit lobbyist in Washington, will be named assistant secretary in the Department of Transportation, Beckham said. All three appointments will be announced within the next few days, he added. The deputy mayor said he has discussed taking a Washington position himself with Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, former chairman of the Southfield-based Bendix Corp. But Beckham said, "It's still open. I haven't got a firm offer."

The Benton Harbor city commission last night gave informal approval to sell 5.8 acres of Riverview drive property for $50,000 as the site for office buildings. If all plans materialize then the Kindergarten, first, second and third grades will be cared for on a 10-acre plot lying north of the Memorial Athletic Field by September of 1952. The election will be conducted on Tuesday, February 5, in the Village Council rooms.

When the summer season of 1927 rolls around, the twin cities will boast of one of the finest amusement parks in this part of the state. With the completion of the two new projects under way for the Drake & Wallace amusement company, proprietor of the Silver Beach, the largest dance hall on the southeastern shores of Lake Michigan will be among the facilities. Constructed at a cost of more than $50,000, the new hall is built following a unique design patented by John Miller, of Detroit and Chicago. The dance hall at Silver Beach is much nearer the lake waters than the older hall was. It is built in dome shape, much like the Mormon tabernacle at Salt Lake City, Utah. The old dance hall is now being altered, and will be converted into a "Crazy House" before the 1927 season opens. More than 25 stunts and features will be installed in the new set of thrills. At the present time, two gigantic slides are being installed, and will later form a part of the fun machinery in the new attraction.

You Can't Tell Census Man No

WASHINGTON — In 1790, when Congress authorized the first United States census, it also assumed the enumerators would have collection problems. Citizens in the young nation were not easily parted with personal and private information. So Congress decreed census cooperation on pain of criminal penalty.

The mandating law has not been used much over the years. The Census Bureau believes there were only four cases in the courts following the 1970 count. And too, the law is not as severe anymore; last year Congress revoked that part of the statute dealing with imprisonment, and only provisions for fines remain.

But the intent of the law, little known and seldom debated, still stands. Citizens do not have the right to refuse census information. If the form asked how many toilets one has, one had damn well better count them. It takes time, some of it seems silly, but the alternative to compliance is a rebuke from a judge.

This is somehow unjust. And yet the only test of the law in recent memory ended in failure. Defendant was one William Rickenbacker, the writer son of the legendary World War I pilot. It was 1980 and Rickenbacker was among the select Americans who received not one, but two, census forms. He refused to fill out the second.

Rickenbacker had no quarrel with the first form. He said it was a fair extension of the constitutional insistence that Americans regularly counted, so that seats in the House of Representatives may be apportioned according to population. A conservative, Rickenbacker feels the founders were wise in this as in other matters.

But the founders made no provisions for counting toilets, Rickenbacker insisted. He said the second form, the longer and more meddlesome of the pair, was an invasion of his privacy. He believed he was on ground provided by the Fourth Amendment (the right of people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects).

Rickenbacker used $7,000 of his own money to defend himself. He says the cost could easily have been many times that. In the end he was found guilty of violating federal law, fined $100, given 60 days probation, and lectured by the judge concerning the responsibilities of all Americans and especially those who are educated.

Today Rickenbacker remembers that the final admonishment was the most ironic moment of his trial. It was because he was educated, and because he was responsible that he refused to cooperate fully with the census. "I'm for liberty," he says, adding that if he gets the longer census form in 1990 he'll ignore it again.

Undoubtedly many Americans agree with the Rickenbacker view. Millions have refused to cooperate with some census questions in the past, and there is some early suggestion the numbers may grow in 1980. Recently, as example, enumerators held a test census in Travis County, Texas, and nearly 30 per cent of the residents refused to be questioned. The same thing has happened in a test at Camden, N.J.

Not only were many of the test citizens unenthusiastic about counting their toilets, they were infuriated when told that their cooperation was mandatory. Far from being cowed, hundreds of citizens in Travis County instead complained noisily to Congress; one engaged fellow ran an enumerator off his property with a shovel.

And so it may be time, while there still is time, to listen to that dangerous felon, William Rickenbacker. He believes the census should be voluntary, and that greater use of extrapolation procedures be made to assure accuracy. Why not? As of next decade the census will be held every five years — thus the snooping will double — and we may find a government request at least as productive as a government demand.

Must The Public Be Conned?

WASHINGTON — A California woman who believed assurances made by Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley during a television broadcast that traveling in Mexico was safe for American tourists angrily says she's going to sue the mayor.

Soothed by Bradley's efforts to help the tourist industry of the economically troubled neighboring country, she and her fiance set out to drive the length of Mexico. They were attacked by bandits, she says, and he was killed; it was the 18th bandit attack on U.S. tourists in eight months.

Her notion of holding a government official individually responsible for the consequences of his public statements is unique. It is also probably on shaky legal ground.

But the idea has wonderful possibilities. If such civil suits became widespread, we might be spared all kinds of official puffery and misleading rhetoric, from local civic promotions to personally publicity humbug.

If he knew the muggees ight sue himfor damages, the mayor of the nation's capital, Walter Washington, might stop his reckless insistence that the city's streets are safe at night. Similarly, New York's Mayor Abe Beame might stop pretending that Manhattan offer decent places to live which ordinary working stiffs can afford.

Florida's Chamber of Commerce might have to stop claiming that it never rains or gets chily there, lest it wind up paying for the medical bills of those who catch cold while vacationing in the state.

Oh, it is easy to get carried away with this idea. Currently the only way of holding public figures accountable for misleading or irresponsible statements is to defeat them at the polls, a highly unreliable process (unless, of course, criminal acts or defamation are involved).

The public sensibly takes most political hyperbole with a grain of salt. We have become used to exaggeration and omission as basic techniques of public dialogue. We have become used to officials making statements on subjects they have made no effort to research themselves. We have become used to being conned.

Nobody, for instance, really believes Carter isn't going to lie to us, just because he says he won't. We know that we have to interpret what he says, not take it literally; what he means is that he will try to do it as seldom as possible and only when really necessary — for our own good, of course.

In fact, he has already lied to us, if you hold him strictly to the promises he held forth during the campaign which are now being rephrased and retimed and retooled.

But there's no reason, when you stop to think about it, that we should meekly have to accept this system of sloppy communication as the way it has to be. A few serious law suits aimed where it hurts the most — the pocketbook — might at least shake up public officials enough to get some of the baloney cut out of our lives.

Sanctifying The Draft Dodgers

During last year's Presidential campaign, one of the few points on which Jimmy Carter stated a clearly discernable position was that if elected, he would pardon the Vietnam draft dodgers.

True to that promise, Carter made the pardon his first official order of business as the newly installed Chief Executive. He signed the proclamation and its executive order spelling out the details upon finishing his first breakfast in the White House on Friday morning.

It is estimated close to 250,000 ducked the Vietnam war by various means. They included refusing to register for the draft, failing to report for induction, going over the hill following induction, burning draft cards, and sabotaging selective service records.

Of that number, something like 100,000 are eligible for Carter's clemency. These are the men who jumped the border to Canada or Sweden, the two most popular havens, or who managed to remain underground here at home.

The pardon does not, per its wording, extend to somebody who raided a Selective Service office to destroy its record, an SS employee who conspired to shield potential inductees, no less than honorable discharges from the armed forces. Carter did, however, order the military to speed up a case-by-case review of the latter category.

Neither does it affect several thousand draft dodgers who accepted Ford's earlier offer of amnesty in exchange for acknowledging their dodging the draft and accepting whatever conditions might be attached to their parole. These conditions, it might be pointed out, amounted to nothing more than, in manner of speaking, the draft dodger eating a little crow.

Also unaffected by Carter's action are 700 ex-servicemen whom Ford pardoned for desertion upon their showing of being wounded or decorated before taking off from their posts.

As might be expected, Friday's post prandial act of grace leaves a sharp division throughout the public.

There is a sharp reaction best expressed by Barry Goldwater who labelled the pardon a disgrace and a disservice to the nation.

The militant wing of the anti-Vietnam group badgers Carters for taking what it calls a half step.

Amnesty is an official finding, usually by the government's executive branch, that no crime was ever committed.

The militants contend it was no crime to refuse to support what they call a morally unjustified war.

In between are the parents and friends of the draft dodgers who could care less about the legal distinction between pardon and amnesty. They just want their boys to come back.

This third grouping probably represents at least the large plurality viewpoint within the citizenry.

While Goldwater may resort to purple prose in describing Carter's move, it does go far beyond a sensible approach or what might be necessary to deburring a thorny issue.

Carter acted as he did because having promised the pardon for its vote-catching purpose he had to follow through or else be taunted as just another politician or worse.

Draft dodging, desertion, mutiny even, have been common to every war in history, and pardon or amnesty have been equally prevalent once the fighting subsided. In our own country, starting with the Whiskey Rebellion in 1794 and up through Ford's last minute reprieve a few days ago, amnesty or pardon has been extended on 39 occasions. Lincoln issued six clemency orders to varying size groups during the Civil War. Two of them were pardons to Union deserters returning to duty within 60 days or the orders. He issued others to Confederate troops on condition they desert their colors.

Carter's decision, consequently, amounts to blessing a revolt against governmental movement in a particular zone.

We wonder if Jimmy would be as charitable if several thousand or several million Americans between now and April 15th declined to pay their income tax on the claim it is bureaucratic waste of their patrimony and the nation's substance.

Demand For 32-Hour Week Is Ridiculous

Calls for a shorter work week certainly are not new in the American labor movement. But the demand by steelworkers for a 32-hour work week without a reduction in pay sounds like more than a bargaining ploy. The shorter work week heads the list of demands the United Steelworkers Union will be pressing as new contract talks open in February.

"Lifetime income security," larger cost-of-living increases and other items are on the union's list, but there is little doubt the 32-hour week is the demand the union wants most of all. It is being promoted as a means of creating new jobs. Actually, it would likely have the opposite effect.

Paying the same salary for a 20 per cent reduction in man hours is another way of saying labor costs will rise 20 per cent. That is not an insignificant increase, especially for an industry already beset by insufficient business to operate at capacity because of stiff competition from overseas steel manufacturers.

If the union succeeds in forcing a 20 per cent increase in labor costs, the higher costs are most likely to result in more sluggish sales, layoffs and some mill closings. Pretending a cause will have an opposite effect does not make it so.

Turning In Lost $100 'No Big Deal,' He Says

By ALAN AREND
Staff Writer

COLOMA — It was "no big deal" for a Coloma man, but it was one of the best hands ever dealt to a young Benton Harbor man.

As a result, Charles Zabratanski, 23, of 1967 Benton Center road, got back $100 in a money clip that he lost here Saturday morning.

The money and clip were found by Lester Pumfrey, 77, 463 Church street, Coloma, who turned them into police. They were returned to Zabratanski by police who located him searching for money.

The money and clip were lost when Zabratanski reported he had left them on the trunk of his car when leaving a gas station in Coloma.

Zabratanski, a steel erector for Souers Construction Co., Eau Claire, had been working in Decatur for about an hour when he realized his mistake.

Fortunately for Zabratanski, Pumfrey happened to be making his daily walk into downtown Coloma when he spotted the money and clip in the snow along the shoulder of the road and brought it to the Coloma police station.

Zabratanski in the meantime had returned to Coloma, retracing his route from the Miami gas station to I-94 in search of his money. While he was searching a Coloma police officer came upon the scene and returned a few minutes later with Zabratanski's money and an explanation as to how it was found.

Zabratanski said he went to Pumfrey's home an offered him a reward, but Pumfrey wouldn't accept it.

Pumfrey told this newspaper it was "no big deal...returning someone's property."

Joining Carter Team

DETROIT (AP) — Several members of Mayor Coleman Young's staff are headed for Washington and jobs with the Carter administration, according to Deputy Mayor William Beckham. But, Beckham said, reports that he also would leave Detroit are premature. According to Beckham, Detroit finance director Dennis Green will be named associate director of the Office of Management and Budget, while the city's Washington lobbyist, Carl Reidy Jr., will become deputy assistant secretary in the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Chester Davenport, former Detroit lobbyist in Washington, will be named assistant secretary in the Department of Transportation, Beckham said. All three appointments will be announced within the next few days, he added. The deputy mayor said he has discussed taking a Washington position himself with Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, former chairman of the Southfield-based Bendix Corp. But Beckham said, "It's still open. I haven't got a firm offer."

If all plans materialize then the Kindergarten, first, second and third grades will be cared for on a 10-acre plot lying north of the Memorial Athletic Field by September of 1952. The election will be conducted on Tuesday, February 5, in the Village Council rooms.

When the summer season of 1927 rolls around, the twin cities will boast of one of the finest amusement parks in this part of the state. With the completion of the two new projects under way for the Drake & Wallace amusement company, proprietor of the Silver Beach, the largest dance hall on the southeastern shores of Lake Michigan will be among the facilities. Constructed at a cost of more than $50,000, the new hall is built following a unique design patented by John Miller, of Detroit and Chicago. The dance hall at Silver Beach is much nearer the lake waters than the older hall was. It is built in dome shape, much like the Mormon tabernacle at Salt Lake City, Utah. The old dance hall is now being altered, and will be converted into a "Crazy House" before the 1927 season opens. More than 25 stunts and features will be installed in the new set of thrills. At the present time, two gigantic slides are being installed, and will later form a part of the fun machinery in the new attraction.

You Can't Tell Census Man No

WASHINGTON — In 1709, when Congress authorized the first United States census, it also assumed the enumerators would have collection problems. Citizens in the young nation were not easily parted with personal and private information. So Congress decreed census cooperation on pain of criminal penalty.

The mandating law has not been used much over the years. The Census Bureau believes there were only four cases in the courts following the 1970 count. And too, the law is not as severe anymore; last year Congress revoked that part of the statute dealing with imprisonment, and only provisions for fines remain.

But the intent of the law, little known and seldom debated, still stands. Citizens do not have the right to refuse census information. If the form asked how many toilets one has, one had damn well better count them. It takes time, some of it seems silly, but the alternative to compliance is a rebuke from a judge.

This is somehow unjust. And yet the only test of the law in recent memory ended in failure. Defendant was one William Rickenbacker, the writer son of the legendary World War I pilot. It was 1960 and Rickenbacker was among the select Americans who received not one, but two, census forms. He refused to fill out the second.

Ricknbacker had no quarrel with the first form. He said it was a fair extension of the constitutional insistence that Americans regularly counted, so that seats in the House of Representatives may be apportioned according to population. A conservative, Rickenbacker feels the founders were wise in this as in other matters.

But the founders made no provisions for counting toilets, Rickenbacker insisted. He said the second form, the longer and more meddlesome of the pair, was an invasion of his privacy. He believed he was on ground provided by the Fourth Amendment (the right of people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and efects).

Rickenbacker used $7,000 of his own money to defend himself. He says the cost could easily have been many times that. In the end he was found guilty of violating federal law, fined $100, given 60 days probation, and lectured by the judge concerning the responsibilities of all Americans and especially those who are educated.

Today Rickenbacker remembers that the final admonishment was the most ironic moment of his trial. It was because he was educated, and because he was responsible that he refused to cooperate fully with the census. "I'm for liberty," he says, adding that if he gets the longer census form in 1980 he'll ignore it again.

Undoubtedly many Americans agree with the Rickenbacker view. Millions have refused to cooperate with some census questions in the past, and there is some early suggestion the numbers may grow in 1980. Recently, as example, enumerators held a test census in Travis County, Texas, and nearly 30 per cent of the residents refused to be questioned. The same thing has happened in a test at Camden, N.J.

'Whaleback' Ships Fade From Lakes Scene

Unusual Craft Drew Crowds In St. Joe

By GEORGE VARGO

He had come a long way, a hard way, from the small log cabin where he lived as a small lad watching the ships as they sailed Georgian Bay. "Some day am going sailin' and command a ship," he said.

Alexander McDougall was a sailor at the age of 16. He stayed with the ships he loved and worked himself to Captain. He not only sailed ships but was the inventor and engineer of the whaleback which came out in the 80's. He was a shipbuilder, also and tried to interest shipping interests in his highly imaginative mind, but was met with mockery and abuse.

On June 23, 1888, his first "whaleback" barge was launched at Duluth, named simply No. 101. It was small — 191 feet long, with only a 21-foot beam, and measured 620 gross tons — but she carried 1,200 tons of iron ore. He used all the money he had to put this ship on the waters of the Great Lakes. As she struck the water, his wife remarked to her sister-in-law, "there goes our last dollar."

On the ways, before launching, remarks by spectators filled the air "you call that damn thing a boat, why it looks more like a pig, and sure will roll over, having no masts to hold her up."

It did no good to get his dander up. So he went to New York for capital to start a shipyard. He interested an associate of John D. Rockefeller in his whaleback concept. Several friends were interested and the American Steel Barge company was incorporated. Ore prices climbed, and the whalebacks kept coming off the ways. Later the shipyard was moved to Superior because of business.

In 1891, the barge works launched 10 hulls, three steamers and six barges of whaleback design. Alexander McDougall was on the verge of creating an empire, with a Rockefeller as king and a McDougall as prince. But business started to taper off, as shops began to layoff, help around the country.

Then the panic of 1893 struck, and the walls came tumbling down. Shipbuilding all over the lakes suffered following the panic. The year 1896 was only a little better. Three vessels were launched, but two of them were steamers. The Barge Alexander Holley was the last hull constructed with whaleback design. A steamer was built with whaleback lines, but a conventional design, a lake freighter bow. It was fitting that she carried her builder's name, Alexander McDougall. She was the largest of this type of vessel built, being 413 feet long, 50 feet wide, and 3,672 gross tons.

Considerable interest was aroused when the whaleback steamer Charles Westmore arrived at Liverpool, England in 1891 with a cargo of wheat. The idea of a sealed-up cigar shaped ship to throw off the worst of the seas was not unique, but the British were interested and the advantages for this design were cheapness of construction due to simplified hull form, self-trimming and greater safety at sea because water could not lie on the upper deck.

Contracts were readily signed and several came out in the British yards. They were traveling all over on all the oceans. On the horizon they looked like a whale or submarine with turrets on top of the hull, especially when a mirage atmosphere prevailed.

One whaleback is used at Superior, Wisc., as a museum. She is the Meteor, which hauled petroleum products to the Thiesen-Clemens dock at St. Joseph. She was built at Superior and found a safe haven in her new assignment where she was built. Many whalebacks hauled new cars and also were crane ships, equipped with moving machinery hauling steel shavings and borings from local foundries and machine shops. They unloaded steel castings for local shops, also.

Only one passenger ship was built, the Steamer Christopher Columbus No. 128, which was built at Superior, Wis., in 1892 for the World's Fair Steamship Company. Her dennisions were 360 feet long by 42 feet beam; her speed was 20 miles per hour; her capacity 5,600 persons. She was used between downtown Chicago and grounds of the World's Columbian Exposition at Jackson Park.

She had one stack and two masts and originally had two decks. From 1894 to 1898 the Columbus ran day excursions to Milwaukee in competition with the fast Goodrich liner Virginia. In 1898 Goodrich bought the ship, and added a third deck for more room. She was then painted in the Goodrich colors. She was the pride of the Goodrich Line.

Postcards by the thousands were sold during the summer months on her trips. A photographer walked her decks daily taking photos of people who mailed them to friends. Her whistle was used at the City Of Manitowoc as a raid siren after she was scrapped.

Sailors loved that ship, except for the boiler room with the heat which knocked them out on those hot and sultry days when the temperature was 100 ashore, and they had to go down into the hold. Ventilators were on both sides of her rounded hull giving the firemen and coal passers some relief.

She took to the water like a duck, and no matter what storms came up, she rode them smoothly as waves washed her decks.

U.S. Steel had a number of whaleback barges and whaleback steamers which towed them all over the lakes. They would drop the barges off at South Chicago, and the steamer would go on to Gary, coming back to South Chicago to pick up the barges by signal from the steamers whistle.

The master of the Columbus was Captain Charles Moody, who at one time sailed the Ann Arbor carferries. The Captain had one of the best licenses ever issued by the U.S. government, and during the first war he piloted new shipping board vessels built here on the lakes from Chicago-Duluth to the sea.

One of these ships was the steamer Corapeak. She was built in Manitowoc, Wis. Loaded with flour out of Milwaukee, she was bound for Hamburg, Germany. In the Welland canal she had squeezed on all possible cargo, the draft being restricted to 14 feet and no more. Just below the Lachine Rapids in the St. Jawrence River there was a quick turn, not very well marked and in real fast water.

"Cap" used to know when to make this turn — by counting the times she hit the bottom. When nearing this point he always broke out a fresh package of Honest Scrap chewing tobacco and on the first count he would take a chew, also on the second count. When he would feel the jar of the third hit, he would stuff the balance of the package into his mouth, saying, "Put your wheel hard down and let her come around, lively now, my lad, lively."

On June 8, 1919, when a tug was winding the Columbus around in Milwaukee Harbor, her long narrow bow overlapped the dock, knocking the legs out from under a large water tank. Captain Moody jumped off the flying bridge to safety with the wheelsman under his arm just as the tank hit where they been standing. Eighteen people were killed by this falling tank. A number were sent to hospitals. It was the only mishap which befell the shop.

When the Eastland rolled over in the Chicago river with 820 lives lost; the Goodrich Company loaded the Columbus with thousands of sacks of sand and had tugs tow her into Lake Michigan, to try to roll her over. Nothing happened to the lively lady. The Captain stuck by his ship as if nothing happened.

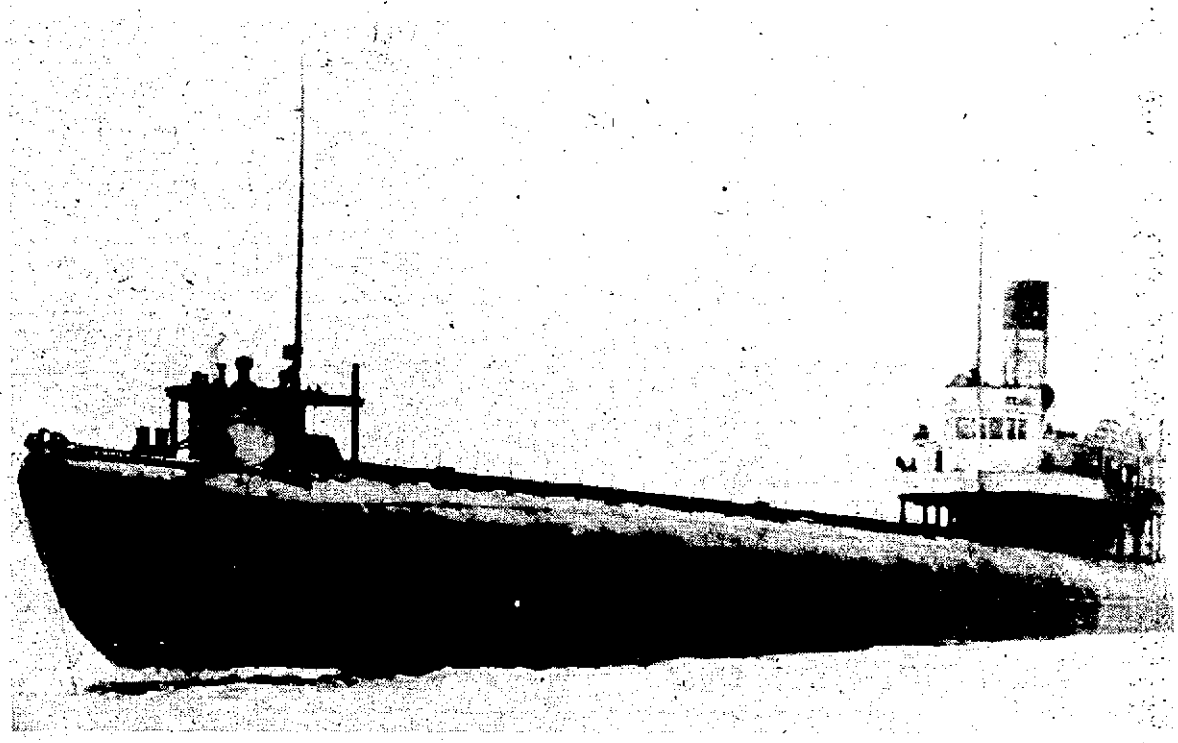

On her trips to St. Joseph she drew crowds from as far as Flint and Detroit and surrounding towns and villages to see the unusual ship. They went aboard for souveniers and photos of the ship.

The Columbus laid at Manitowoc, during the depression and was sold at auction for $3,500 — a ship which when built cost over $300,000.

Another Vargo Saga

George Vargo, 1499 Jennings, Benton township, is a former sailor and historian of the early days of sailing on the Great Lakes. In this article he writes of the "whaleback" design ships pioneered by Alexander McDougall.

WHALEBACK DESIGN: The whaleback design of lake ship pioneered by Alexander McDougall had admirable sailing characteristics even in heavy storms and were fair ice-breakers in the winter. Still, the ships often drew derisive labels of "pigs" or "cigars" because of their unusual rounded hull and low freeboard when loaded. Shown above is the Steamer James B. Colgate, which later sank during a fierce storm on Lake Erie one of the few whalebacks to meet such a fate.

EXCURSION STEAMER: Steamer Christopher Columbus, shown docked at Milwaukee, was pride of "whaleback" excursion steamers on Great Lakes. Originally built for Columbian Exposition in Chicago, she had capacity of 5,600 passengers even before third deck was added in 1898 after being purchased by Goodrich line. White vents on side of hull were to reduce unsufferable temperatures in boiler room.

Dr. Clayton Emery Dies Early Today

Dr. Clayton S. Emery, 82, who delivered more than 5,000 babies in nearly a half century of medical practice in St. Joseph and Ohio, died at 6:50 a.m. today in Shoreham Terrace nursing home.

Dr. Emery, formerly of 1329 Lake boulevard, St. Joseph, retired because of ill health in 1967 when he was the oldest practitioner in the Twin Cities. He had practiced in St. Joseph 37 years and 10 years previously in Ohio.

Dr. Emery was a general practitioner and obstetrician.

He was born June 11, 1894, in Kenton, Ohio, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Willard C. Emery. He was graduated from University of Michigan Medical school in 1918 and returned to Ohio to practice. Dr. Emery married the former Sarah Firestone April 28, 1921, in Wooster, Ohio.

Dr. Emery and his family moved to St. Joseph in 1929 where he joined the staff of St. Joseph Sanitarium, the forerunner of Memorial hospital.

He is survived by his widow, three sons, William K., M.D., St. Joseph; Robert F., Ph.D., Washington, D.C., and Richard C. South Bend; and a stepsister, Mrs. Paul (Jean) Van Fossen, Wilmington, Del. Three sisters and a brother preceded him death.

The three generations of Emerys, Willard C., Clayton S. and William K., have a total of 98 years in medical practice.

Dr. Emery was a member of the Memorial medical staff until retirement, the Berrien County Medical society and First Congregational United Church of Christ, St. Joseph.

Services will be held Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. at Kerley and Starks funeral home with Dr. George W. Fisk officiating. Burial will be in Riverview cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home after 7 this evening.

Memorials may be made to Memorial hospital.

'WHERE THE ACTION IS:' That was topic of sermon Sunday by Dr. Carlos Page, pastor of Peace Temple United Methodist church, Benton Harbor. This picture taken Saturday shows smoke coming from church as stairway to basement burned causing an estimated $5,000 to $8,000 damage. 'Whaleback' Ships Fade From Lakes Scene

Unusual Craft Drew Crowds In St. Joe

By GEORGE VARGO

He had come a long way, a hard way, from the small log cabin where he lived as a small lad watching the ships as they sailed Georgian Bay. "Some day am going sailin' and command a ship," he said.

Alexander McDougall was a sailor at the age of 16. He stayed with the ships he loved and worked himself to Captain. He not only sailed ships but was the inventor and engineer of the whaleback which came out in the 80's. He was a shipbuilder, also and tried to interest shipping interests in his highly imaginative mind, but was met with mockery and abuse.

On June 23, 1888, his first "whaleback" barge was launched at Duluth, named simply No. 101. It was small — 191 feet long, with only a 21-foot beam, and measured 420 gross tons — but she carried 1,200 tons of iron ore. He used all the money he had to put this ship on the waters of the Great Lakes. As she struck the water, his wife remarked to her sister-in-law, "there goes our last dollar."

On the ways, before launching, remarks by spectators filled the air "you call that damn thing a boat, why it looks more like a pig, and sure will roll over, having no masts to hold her up."

It did no good to get his dander up. So he went to New York for capital to start a shipyard. He interested an associate of John D. Rockefeller in his whaleback concept. Several friends were interested and the American Steel Barge company was incorporated. Ore prices climbed, and the whalebacks kept coming off the ways. Later the shipyard was moved to Superior because of business.

In 1891, the barge works launched 10 hulls, three steamers and six barges of whaleback design. Alexander McDougall was on the verge of creating an empire, with a Rockefeller as king and a McDougall as prince. But business started to taper off, as shops began to layoff, help around the country.

Then the panic of 1893 struck, and the walls came tumbling down. Shipbuilding all over the lakes suffered following the panic. The year 1896 was only a little better. Three vessels were launched, but two of them were steamers. The Barge Alexander Holley was the last hull constructed with whaleback design. A steamer was built with whaleback lines, but a conventional design, a lake freighter bow. It was fitting that she carried her builder's name, Alexander McDougall. She was the largest of this type of vessel built, being 413 feet long, 50 feet wide, and 3,672 gross tons.

Considerable interest was aroused when the whaleback steamer Charles Westmore arrived at Liverpool, England in 1891 with a cargo of wheat. The idea of a sealed-up cigar shaped ship to throw off the worst of the seas was not unique, but the British were interested and the advantages for this design were cheapness of construction due to simplified hull form, self-trimming and greater safety at sea because water could not lie on the upper deck.

Constracts were readily signed and several came out in the British yards. They were traveling all over on all the oceans. On the horizon they looked like a whale or submarine with turrets on top of the hull, especially when a mirage atmosphere prevailed.

One whaleback is used at Superior, Wisc., as a museum. She is the Meteor, which hauled petroleum products to the Thiesen-Clemens dock at St. Joseph. She was built at Superior and found a safe haven in her new assignment where she was built. Many whalebacks hauled new cars and also were crane ships, equipped with moving machinery hauling steel shavings and borings from local foundries and machine shops. They unloaded steel castings for local shops, also.

Only one passenger ship was built, the Steamer Christopher Columbus No. 128, which was built at Superior, Wis., in 1892 for the World's Fair Steamship Company. Her deminsions were 360 feet long by 42 feet beam; her speed was 20 miles per hour; her capacity 5,600 persons. She was used between downtown Chicago and grounds of the World's Columbian Exposition at Jackson Park.

She had one stack and two masts and originally had two decks. From 1894 to 1898 the Columbus ran day excursions to Milwaukee in competition with the fast Goodrich liner Virginia. In 1898 Goodrich bought the ship, and added a third deck for more room. She was then painted in the Goodrich colors. She was the pride of the Goodrich Line.

Sailors loved that ship, except for the boiler room with the heat which knocked them out on those hot and sultry days when the temperature was 100 ashore, and they had to go down into the hold. Ventilators were on both sides of her rounded hull giving the firemen and coal passers some relief.

She took to the water like a duck, and no matter what storms came up, she rode them smoothly as waves washed her decks.

U.S. Steel had a number of whaleback barges and whaleback steamers which towed them all over the lakes. They would drop the barges off at South Chicago, and the steamer would go on to Gary, coming back to South Chicago to pick up the barges by signal from the steamers whistle.

The master of the Columbus was Captain Charles Moody, who at one time sailed the Ann Arbor carferries. The Captain had one of the best licenses ever issued by the U.S. government, and during the first war he piloted new shipping board vessels built here on the lakes from Chicago-Duluth to the sea.

One of these ships was the steamer Corapeak. She was built in Manitowoc, Wis. Loaded with flour out of Milwaukee, she was bound for Hamburg, Germany. In the Welland canal she had squeezed on all possible cargo, the draft being restricted to 14 feet and no more. Just below the Lachine Rapids in the St. Jawrence River there was a quick turn, not very well marked and in real fast water.

"Cap" used to know when to make this turn — by counting the times she hit the bottom. When nearing this point he always broke out a fresh package of Honest Scrap chewing tobacco and on the first count he would take a chew, also on the second count. When he would feel the jar of the third hit, he would stuff the balance of the package into his mouth, saying, "Put your wheel hard down and let her come around, lively now, my lad, lively."

On June 8, 1919, when a tug was winding the Columbus around in Milwaukee Harbor, her long narrow bow overlapped the dock, knocking the legs out from under a large water tank. Captain Moody jumped off the flying bridge to safety with the wheelsman under his arm just as the tank hit where they been standing. Eighteen people were killed by this falling tank. A number were sent to hospitals. It was the only mishap which befell the shop.

When the Eastland rolled over in the Chicago river with 820 lives lost; the Goodrich Company loaded the Columbus with thousands of sacks of sand and had tugs tow her into Lake Michigan, to try to roll her over. Nothing happened to the lively lady. The Captain stuck by his ship as if nothing happened.

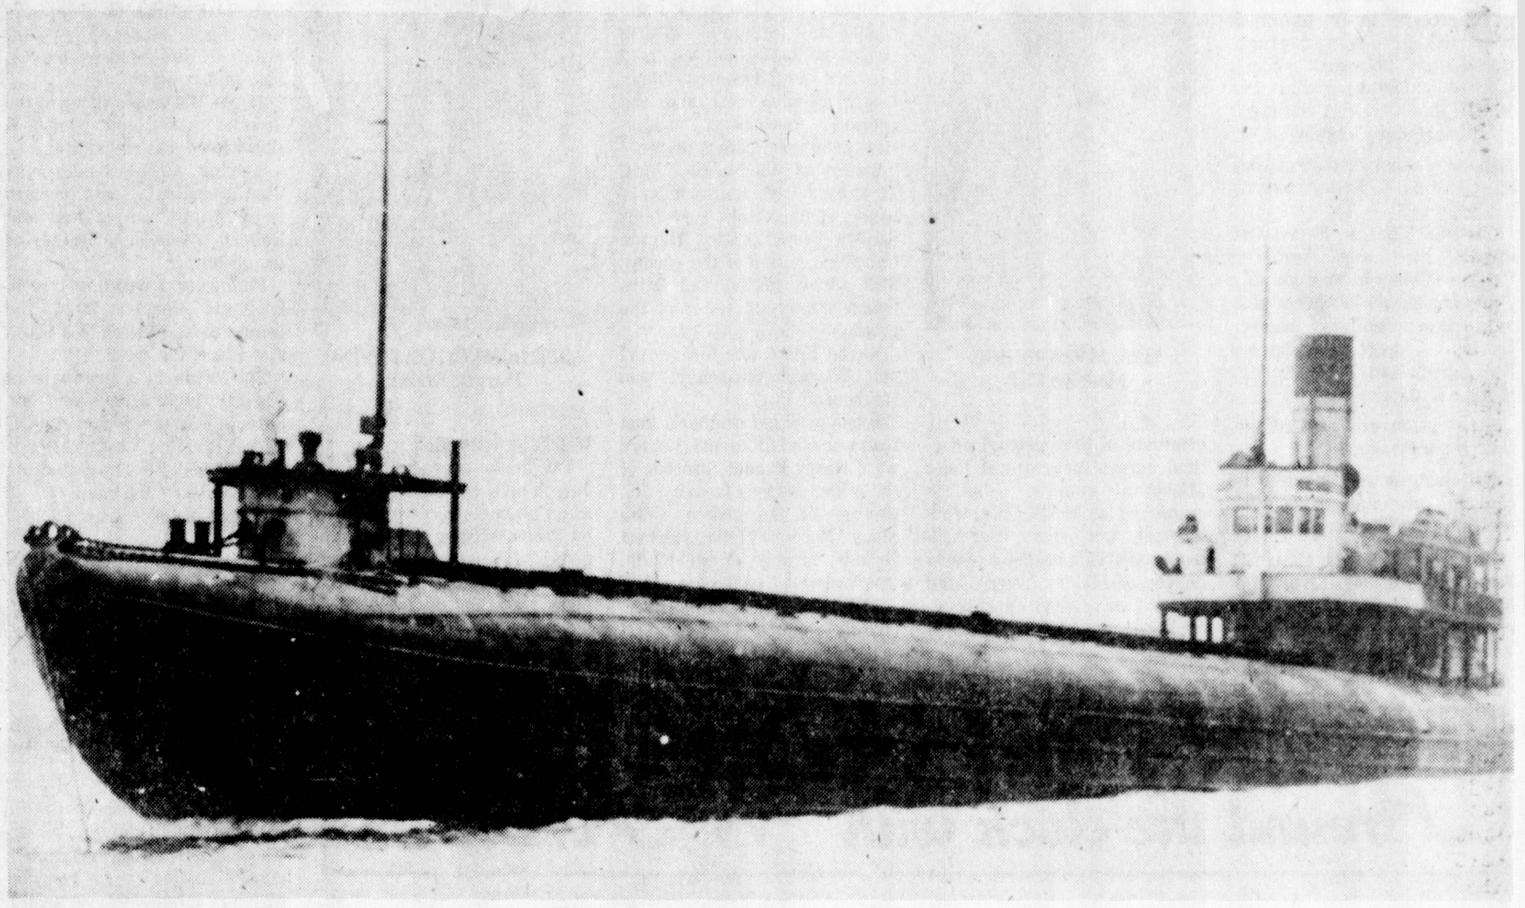

On her trips to St. Joseph she drew crowds from as far as Flint and Detroit and surrounding towns and villages to see the unusual ship. They went aboard for souveniers and photos of the ship.

The Columbus laid at Manitowoc, during the depression and was sold at auction for $3,500 — a ship which when built cost over $300,000.

Another Vargo Saga

George Vargo, 1499 Jennings, Benton township, is a former sailor and historian of the early days of sailing on the Great Lakes. In this article he writes of the "whaleback" design ships pioneered by Alexander McDougall.

WHALEBACK DESIGN: The whaleback design of lake ship pioneered by Alexander McDougall had admirable sailing characteristics even in heavy storms and were fair ice-breakers in the winter. Still, the ships often drew derisive labels of "pigs" or "cigars" because of their unusual rounded hull and low freeboard when loaded. Shown above is the Steamer James B. Colgate, which later sank during a fierce storm on Lake Erie one of the few whalebacks to meet such a fate.

EXCURSION STEAMER: Steamer Christopher Columbus, shown docked at Milwaukee, was pride of "whaleback" excursion steamers on Great Lakes. Originally built for Columbian Exposition in Chicago, she had capacity of 5,600 passengers even before third deck was added in 1898 after being purchased by Goodrich line. White vents on side of hull were to reduce unsufferable temperatures in boiler room.

Around the clock with WOMEN

Fashion Sense From A Salesgirl

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

NEW YORK (NEA) — She had a masters degree from Columbia University in public law and government, so it was bizarre when Clara Pierre happily sought a job as a salesgirl in Valentino's boutique in Manhattan in 1970.

"I'd left a very demanding job doing international legal research and I'd gotten married and was working on the apartment, when I saw this enormous sign in Valentino's for sales people. I thought, well, as a total lark maybe for a month it would be fun."

"I found myself taking notes on breaks and lunch hours on things I observed there," she explains, "because as a sales person you work very closely with women in a way I hadn't been aware of before. You're a psychologist, a mirror, a general advisor."

And sometimes, a trendsetter's trendsetter. "Jackie Onassis came in one time — she bought five suede jackets in different colors — and she asked me how much my suede boots were and where I got them."

Other customers sought advice, did this fit, did that look good. "Consequently I saw how insecure women are, especially women who have a lot of money. People who came in off the street very often had more assurance and knew what they wanted. They'd buy on a smaller scale."

Then there were some who came in every season "for the handful of clothes covered with Valentino's initials. That doesn't always indicate insecurity, but I do think much of it rests on that because it's an identification with a way of life."

AUTHOR: Clara Pierre, a salesgirl, who wrote the book, "Looking Good," says she found herself taking notes on breaks and lunch hours.

But it's all changing now, she says. "The pill, women's lib, women's active participation in the life of this country, they've all bolstered women's confidence. And this has been reflected in clothes."

The single standard of fashion and beauty is, if not dead, moribund.

"My sense is that women are looking less to the media for a sense of guidance and there's not that slavish desire to follow what other people say is fashion."

Look at the fashion magazines, which never quite recovered from the stout blow to the knees they received in 1970 with the midi crisis. "It was the disaster of Seventh Avenue and the magazines drew back after that. They've expanded, there's a great deal more general interest stuff in them and women don't take them as seriously. I don't know anyone shooting over to Bendel's the minute Vogue says gold accessories are in."

But, she concedes, our passion for thinness and youth still simmers. "We're not yet grown up enough to accept growing old or to accept truly our bodies as they were supposed to be, whether that's thin or fat. We're still pushing ourselves into a mold, but I think other factors are diluting that."

Back in the '60s, "when the youth cult took over, Twiggy was an icon of what everyone should be like. Well, recently she gained 20 pounds and that was front page news. In a sense, it's symbolic of a coming of age. It says she's through with being an adolescent; she's becoming a woman. And we've all outgrown that certain look because the buying public is statistically older. She's more upper 20s and 30s and in the '60s she was a teenager and her buying power was buoyed up by the economy."

Now, she maintains, the icons are not quite as thin. "The emphasis in clothes is not on the stick-like look. St. Laurent's peasant clothes, for instance, cinch the waist but there's fullness there."

And we've weathered that confusion of sexual roles. "When unisex clothes were very strong, that represented a mixed up feeling of sexual roles. Now our clothes are more feminine."

Still, there are women who aren't sure of themselves and what's important for them is to become sure. "Security isn't going to happen through buying new clothes which is what the women at Valentino were trying to do," she says, "but I do think part of it can happen by trying on a lot of looks, testing your reactions and other people's. But the really important means of gaining confidence is the business of personal growth, through analysis or self-help or whatever. We have a whole panoply of things available to us and whatever works is good."

Provided all this works and you know who you are, what your body is and how you'd prefer to clothe it, the end result should be looking good.

Even At Current Prices--
Coffee Still Low-Cost Beverage

Coffee may well seem like a necessity of life to Americans who consume almost 400 million cups of coffee every day, but coffee is not vital to your health and the world will not stop if you go without or cut down, according to Maryann Beckman, District Extension Consumer Marketing Information Agent.

Mrs. Beckman also says:

Even at current coffee prices, coffee is still a relatively low-cost beverage, surprising as it may seem. The Coffee Institute figures one pound of regular ground coffee gives 50 six-ounce cups. At current prices of around $3 a pound and over, cost is 4½ to seven cents per cup, depending on whether you buy the one, two or three-pound cans.

An eight-ounce jar of instant coffee gives 120 cups, so at current average costs of $4.50 per jar, cost per cup is only three to four cents. When compared with other similar beverages, only tea is less expensive ataround two cents per cup. Should you or should you not boycott coffee? The answer is up to you, but a coffee boycott will not change the total amount of coffee available, which is down 25 per cent from normal. A boycott or rationing yourself will spread out available supplies and make them last longer, until the damaged trees can be brought back into production.

Trees and harvests were damaged; of that there is no doubt. In July, 1975, Brazil, the largest supplier of coffee beans, was struck by killing frosts which destroyed millions of trees and resulted in an estimated crop loss of about 50 per cent. A civil war and damaging weather, in August, 1975, disrupted Angola's coffee harvest, resulting in a 25-30 per cent smaller crop than the year before.

Then, in November, 1975, severe rains flooded coffee plantations in Colombia, America's second largest supplier of green coffee beans. Losses there were 10 to 20 per cent. The devastating earthquake in Guatemala in February, 1976, caused widespread destruction of transportation facilities, which drastically impeded coffee shipments. —

All this adds up to a 25 per cent smaller crop, but current prices are an over-reaction to this total situation.

Many coffee growing countries, who rely heavily on coffee exports for their national income, have held back shipments of beans in anticipation of higher prices. Six months ago, coffee beans were very scarce. Today, they are available at a price.

In July, 1975, green coffee beans sold for 60 cents a pound, but in December, 1976, cost was $2.27 a pound. A coffee boycott or rationing-out system would thusly slow coffee use, slow demand and therefore slow further price increases as roasters compete for available supplies.

Rationing is probably a better word to use than boycott, because most coffee drinkers seem to be switching to lower cost brands or reducing the total amount of coffee consumed, rather than completely rejecting coffee.

Coffee is still the number one beverage in the United States, even though total consumption is down 32 per cent since 1962. Excessively high coffee prices could drive consumers to break the coffee habit and switch to other beverages, but it doesn't seem too likely. Tea sales were up five per cent in 1976, but the industry doesn't foresee any big increase this year as a result of high coffee prices.

Yes, coffee prices will probably continue to increase, for several reasons. First, grocery buyers were well aware of the world crop situation and they bought heavily last winter and spring, at lower prices. As a result, a lot of coffee that has been sold, even recently, has not truly reflected current costs.

Second, coffee has notoriously for many years been a loss leader item for retailers where they have sold at below their back-door costs and it continues to be much the same. Someone, other than the consumer, is taking the loss.

Based on actual costs to the retailer now, a two-pound can of one major brand should be selling for $5.69, but is selling for $5.09. This price level will probably hold for several months at least, for retailers are reluctant to increase prices as much as current costs suggest.

Coffee roasters claim that costs for labor and processing have also risen, but are not being passed on at this time either. Sooner or later, these costs, too, will also have to be reflected at retail and the only way to go is up.

Should you hoard coffee then? No, because that won't help much either; it will simply push prices up more rapidly.

Probably the best answer is to ration your use by consuming somewhat less and/or buying lower cost brands.

Also, do take advantage of coupons and specials and there seem to be plenty around. At this time, most coupons offer 30 to 50 cents off regular price, rather than the 15 to 30 cents off seen in the past few months.

Loyal To Valentine's Day

Through the centuries, lovers have been loyal to Valentine's Day.

It is a lighthearted day and its spirit can spread beyond ordinarily insurmountable barriers.

Its spell has reached even beyond prison walls: one of the earliest known valentines was the handiwork of the Duke of Orleans when he was a prisoner at Agincourt in the 15th century. His creation can still be seen at the British Museum.

But even if valentines are not fashioned under such dramatic conditions, the ingenuity of their creation and delivery is no less interesting. In Elizabethan England, a valentine was attached to an apple or an orange and thrown in at the window of some eligible young lady.

Meanwhile, the young lady was active along romantic lines, too. She ate a hard boiled egg and went to bed with bay leaves fastened to her pillow, there to dream of her future husband.

America, too, was early loyal to St. Valentine. In 1849 Esther Howard became the first United States publisher of valentines.

She began her life-time career when she printed "Leap Year Valentines" for her schoolmates at Mt. Holyoke college in Massachusetts.

By 1857, valentines had really caught on; for over three million were mailed in the United States. They ranged from three cents to $30 each. Half were comic and the other half, sentimental.

But for a true valentine for someone special, learn the valentine language: a rose on a valentine means love; a fan means "open your heart" and a ribbon requests a promise.

Whether you send a rose or a fan or a ribbon on your valentine, you will a have a better chance of receiving a favorable reply if you include a gift of fragrance. Choose perfume, spray, cologne or body fragrance.

Diet A Major Factor

What can you do about it?

The report of the Inter-Society Commission for Heart Disease Resources recommends the following modifications in diet for the general public and especially those high risk individuals:

— Achieve and maintain your ideal weight.

— Reduce dietary intake of cholesterol to less than 300 mg. per day.

Fashion Sense From A Salesgirl

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

NEW YORK (NEA) — She had a masters degree from Columbia University in public law and government, so it was bizarre when Clara Pierre happily sought a job as a salesgirl in Valentino's boutique in Manhattan in 1970.

"I'd left a very demanding job doing international legal research and I'd gotten married and was working on the apartment, when I saw this enormous sign in Valentino's for sales people. I thought, well, as a total lark maybe for a month it would be fun."

"I found myself taking notes on breaks and lunch hours on things I observed there," she explains, "because as a sales person you work very closely with women in a way I hadn't been aware of before. You're a psychologist, a mirror, a general advisor."

And sometimes, a trendsetter's trendsetter. "Jackie Onassis came in one time — she bought five suede jackets in different colors — and she asked me how much my suede boots were and where I got them."

Other customers sought advice, did this fit, did that look good. "Consequently I saw how insecure women are, especially women who have a lot of money. People who came in off the street very often had more assurance and knew what they wanted. They'd buy on a smaller scale."

Then there were some who came in every season "for the handful of clothes covered with Valentino's initials. That doesn't always indicate insecurity, but I do think much of it rests on that because it's an identification with a way of life."

AUTHOR: Clara Pierre, a salesgirl, who wrote the book, "Looking Good," says she found herself taking notes on breaks and lunch hours.

But it's all changing now, she says. "The pill, women's lib, women's active participation in the life of this country, they've all bolstered women's confidence. And this has been reflected in clothes."

The single standard of fashion and beauty is, if not dead, moribund.

"My sense is that women are looking less to the media for a sense of guidance and there's not that slavish desire to follow what other people say is fashion."

Look at the fashion magazines, which never quite recovered from the stout blow to the knees they received in 1970 with the midi crisis. "It was the disaster of Seventh Avenue and the magazines drew back after that. They've expanded, there's a great deal more general interest stuff in them and women don't take them as seriously. I don't know anyone shooting over to Bendel's the minute Vogue says gold accessories are in."

But, she concedes, our passion for thinness and youth still simmers. "We're not yet grown up enough to accept growing old or to accept truly our bodies as they were supposed to be, whether that's thin or fat. We're still pushing ourselves into a mold, but I think other factors are diluting that."

Back in the '60s, "when the youth cult took over, Twiggy was an icon of what everyone should be like. Well, recently she gained 20 pounds and that was front page news. In a sense, it's symbolic of a coming of age. It says she's through with being an adolescent; she's becoming a woman. And we've all outgrown that certain look because the buying public is statistically older. She's more upper 20s and 30s and in the '60s she was a teenager and her buying power was buoyed up by the economy."

Now, she maintains, the icons are not quite as thin. "The emphasis in clothes is not on the stick-like look. St. Laurent's peasant clothes, for instance, cinch the waist but there's fullness there."

And we've weathered that confusion of sexual roles. "When unisex clothes were very strong, that represented a mixed up feeling of sexual roles. Now our clothes are more feminine."

Still, there are women who aren't sure of themselves and what's important for them is to become sure. "Security isn't going to happen through buying new clothes which is what the women at Valentino were trying to do," she says, "but I do think part of it can happen by trying on a lot of looks, testing your reactions and other people's. But the really important means of gaining confidence is the business of personal growth, through analysis or self-help or whatever. We have a whole panoply of things available to us and whatever works is good."

Provided all this works and you know who you are, what your body is and how you'd prefer to clothe it, the end result should be looking good.

Even At Current Prices-- Coffee Still Low-Cost Beverage

Coffee may well seem like a necessity of life to Americans who consume almost 400 million cups of coffee every day, but coffee is not vital to your health and the world will not stop if you go without or cut down, according to Maryann Beckman, District Extension Consumer Marketing Information Agent.

Mrs. Beckman also says:

Even at current coffee prices, coffee is still a relatively low-cost beverage, surprising as it may seem. The Coffee Institute figures one pound of regular ground coffee gives 50 six-ounce cups. At current prices of around $3 a pound and over, cost is 4½ to seven cents per cup, depending on whether you buy the one, two or three-pound cans.

An eight-ounce jar of instant coffee gives 120 cups, so at current average costs of $4.50 per jar, cost per cup is only three to four cents. When compared with other similar beverages, only tea is less expensive ataround two cents per cup. Should you or should you not boycott coffee? The answer is up to you, but a coffee boycott will not change the total amount of coffee available, which is down 25 per cent from normal. A boycott or rationing yourself will spread out available supplies and make them last longer, until the damaged trees can be brought back into production.

Trees and harvests were damaged; of that there is no doubt. In July, 1975, Brazil, the largest supplier of coffee beans, was struck by killing frosts which destroyed millions of trees and resulted in an estimated crop loss of about 60 per cent. A civil war and damaging weather, in August, 1975, disrupted Angola's coffee harvest, resulting in a 25-30 per cent smaller crop than the year before.

Then, in November, 1975, severe rains flooded coffee plantations in Colombia, America's second largest supplier of green coffee beans. Losses there were 10 to 20 per cent. The devastating earthquake in Guatemala in February, 1976, caused widespread destruction of transportation facilities, which drastically impeded coffee shipments. —

All this adds up to a 25 per cent smaller crop, but current prices are an over-reaction to this total situation.

Many coffee growing countries, who rely heavily on coffee exports for their national income, have held back shipments of beans in anticipation of higher prices. Six months ago, coffee beans were very scarce. Today, they are available at a price.

In July, 1975, green coffee beans sold for 60 cents a pound, but in December, 1976, cost was $2.27 a pound. A coffee boycott or rationing-out system would thusly slow coffee use, slow demand and therefore slow further price increases as roasters compete for available supplies.

Rationing is probably a better word to use than boycott, because most coffee drinkers seem to be switching to lower cost brands or reducing the total amount of coffee consumed, rather than completely rejecting coffee.

Coffee is still the number one beverage in the United States, even though total consumption is down 32 per cent since 1962.

Excessively high coffee prices could drive consumers to break the coffee habit and switch to other beverages, but it doesn't seem too likely. Tea sales were up five per cent in 1976, but the industry doesn't foresee any big increase this year as a result of high coffee prices.

Yes, coffee prices will probably continue to increase, for several reasons. First, grocery buyers were well aware of the world crop situation and they bought heavily last winter and spring, at lower prices. As a result, a lot of coffee that has been sold, even recently, has not truly reflected current costs.

Second, coffee has notoriously for many years been a loss leader item for retailers where they have sold at below their back-door costs and it continues to be much the same. Someone, other than the consumer, is taking the loss.

Based on actual costs to the retailer now, a two-pound can of one major brand should be selling for $5.69, but is selling for $5.09. This price level will probably hold for several months at least, for retailers are reluctant to increase prices as much as current costs suggest.

Coffee roasters claim that costs for labor and processing have also risen, but are not being passed on at this time either. Sooner or later, these costs, too, will also have to be reflected at retail and the only way to go is up.

Should you hoard coffee then? No, because that won't help much either; it will simply push prices up more rapidly.

Probably the best answer is to ration your use by consuming somewhat less and/or buying lower cost brands.

Also, do take advantage of coupons and specials and there seem to be plenty around. At this time, most coupons offer 30 to 50 cents off regular price, rather than the 15 to 30 cents off seen in the past few months.

Loyal To Valentine's Day

Through the centuries, lovers have been loyal to Valentine's Day.

It is a lighthearted day and its spirit can spread beyond ordinarily insurmountable barriers.

Its spell has reached even beyond prison walls: one of the earliest known valentines was the handiwork of the Duke of Orleans when he was a prisoner at Agincourt in the 15th century. His creation can still be seen at the British Museum.

But even if valentines are not fashioned under such dramatic conditions, the ingenuity of their creation and delivery is no less interesting. In Elizabethan England, a valentine was attached to an apple or an orange and thrown in at the window of some eligible young lady.

Meanwhile, the young lady was active along romantic lines, too. She ate a hard boiled egg and went to bed with bay leaves fastened to her pillow, there to dream of her future husband.

America, too, was early loyal to St. Valentine. In 1840 Esther Howard became the first United States publisher of valentines.

She began her life-time career when she printed "Leap Year Valentines" for her schoolmates at Mt. Holyoke college in Massachusetts.

By 1857, valentines had really caught on, for over three million were mailed in the United States. They ranged from three cents to $30 each. Half were comic and the other half, sentimental.

But for a true valentine for someone special, learn the valentine language: a rose on a valentine means love; a fan means "open your heart" and a ribbon requests a promise.

Whether you send a rose or a fan or a ribbon on your valentine, you will a have a better chance of receiving a favorable reply if you include a gift of fragrance. Choose perfume, spray, cologne or body fragrance.

Diet A Major Factor

What can you do about it?

The report of the Inter-Society Commission for Heart Disease Resources recommends the following modifications in diet for the general public and especially those high risk individuals:

— Achieve and maintain your ideal weight.

— Reduce dietary intake of cholesterol to less than 300 mg. per day.

KISSING FISH

Management Seminar Feb. 12

EAST LANSING — "As a career woman, don't bank on staying much longer on the protected species list," advises Eugene Jennings, a Michigan State university professor of management.

"With today's financial pressures, the business world can no longer be a world of tokenism, where women get a better-than-even chance."

Such is the job environment Jennings will discuss at a Career Management Seminar, Feb. 12, in The Kellogg Center for Continuing Education on the MSU campus.

The aim of the seminar is to help women improve their effectiveness on the job. Sponsors are the MSU Faculty Women's association, Graduate School of Business Administration, and Continuing Education Service.

"So far, most women have escaped the weeding out of managers who haven't grown with their jobs — who virtually retired on the job," Jennings says. "But with today's economy, women are under fire to earn their jobs each year, for the same reasons men are."

"If you have any degree of autonomy or responsibility on the job, you're managing outcomes, and that makes you a manager," Jennings explains.

Jennings is a widely recognized expert on executive behavior. A pioneer in administrative counseling, he has advised top management in such major corporations as IBM, Chase Manhatten Bank, Touche Ross and Gillette.

The advice he offers, he explains, is "how to deal with the reality of the world of management — whether you're a man or a woman."

The program begins at 9:15 a.m., with lunch and a question-and-answer period at 1 p.m. For registration information, interested persons may contact the Conference Registration Desk at Kellogg Center.

Prune Taste Teasers

Thread sun-sweetened pitted prunes and cherry tomatoes with a half bacon strip on thin wooden skewers. Guests can do the cooking on a small hibachi or you can broil them in the oven.

Delicious Walnut Pastry

Mix with two tablespoons granulated sugar and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Grease eight-by-nine inch pie pan, press mixture over bottom and sides, and bake at 400 degrees for seven to 10 minutes, or until edges are lightly browned. Cool.

For a great quick treat, fill pie shell with ice cream and top with your favorite topping and a festive sprinkle of chopped walnuts.

Extend 'Bankers' Hours'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An increasing number of banks are using "talking" telephone answering systems that allow customers to make deposits when the banks are closed.

Customers calling a bank here talk to four programmable cassette recorders that ask questions. Unlike traditional answering equipment that asks a limited number of structured questions and then records the responses, the machines carry on a simulated conversation with the customer, asking, for example, for the caller's name and waiting for a response before asking the next question.

Jerry Klein, vice president of Dictaphone Corp., said nearly 100 banks now use programmable answering systems for such telephone services as after-hours fund transfers, loan applications and bill paying.

U.S. Meat Records Set

United States red meat production was 37.9 billion pounds in 1974, a new record.

The old record was 37.8 billion pounds in 1972. Beef set the pace, with 23.1 billion pounds produced, also a new record; followed by pork, 13.8 billion; veal, 456 million and lamb, 465 million. Only lamb showed a decline compared to 1973 production.

Delicious Walnut Pastry

Mix with two tablespoons granulated sugar and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Grease eight-by-nine inch pie pan, press mixture over bottom and sides, and bake at 400 degrees for seven to 10 minutes, or until edges are lightly browned. Cool.

For a great quick treat, fill pie shell with ice cream and top with your favorite topping and a festive sprinkle of chopped walnuts.

Extend 'Bankers' Hours'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An increasing number of banks are using "talking" telephone answering systems that allow customers to make deposits when the banks are closed.

Customers calling a bank here talk to four programmable cassette recorders that ask questions. Unlike traditional answering equipment that asks a limited number of structured questions and then records the responses, the machines carry on a simulated conversation with the customer, asking, for example, for the caller's name and waiting for a response before asking the next question.

Jerry Klein, vice president of Dictaphone Corp., said nearly 100 banks now use programmable answering systems for such telephone services as after-hours fund transfers, loan applications and bill paying.

U.S. Meat Records Set

United States red meat production was 37.9 billion pounds in 1974, a new record.

The old record was 37.8 billion pounds in 1972. Beef set the pace, with 23.1 billion pounds produced, also a new record; followed by pork, 13.8 billion; veal, 486 million and lamb, 465 million. Only lamb showed a decline compared to 1973 production.

Management Seminar Feb. 12

EAST LANSING — "As a career woman, don't bank on staying much longer on the protected species list," advises Eugene Jennings, a Michigan State university professor of management.

"With today's financial pressures, the business world can no longer be a world of tokenism, where women get a better-than-even chance."

Such is the job environment Jennings will discuss at a Career Management Seminar, Feb. 12, in The Kellogg Center for Continuing Education on the MSU campus.

The aim of the seminar is to help women improve their effectiveness on the job. Sponsors are the MSU Faculty Women's association, Graduate School of Business Administration, and Continuing Education Service.

"So far, most women have escaped the weeding out of managers who haven't grown with their jobs — who virtually retired on the job," Jennings says. "But with today's economy, women are under fire to earn their jobs each year, for the same reasons men are."

"If you have any degree of autonomy or responsibility on the job, you're managing outcomes, and that makes you a manager," Jennings explains.

Jennings is a widely recognized expert on executive behavior. A pioneer in administrative counseling, he has advised top management in such major corporations as IBM, Chase Manhatten Bank, Touche Ross and Gillette.

The advice he offers, he explains, is "how to deal with the reality of the world of management — whether you're a man or a woman."

The program begins at 9:15 a.m., with lunch and a question-and-answer period at 1 p.m. For registration information, interested persons may contact the Conference Registration Desk at Kellogg Center.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers

Mother Nature Will Fool You

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I are expecting our first child. Lila swears she has been pregnant for ten months. I don't believe this is possible.

How does one figure when the baby is supposed to arrive? Some of Lila's friends have been given "due dates" by their doctors and they have been off by as much as three weeks. What system do doctors use? Is there any 100-per-cent-sure method of calculation? — Pink Or Blue — Either Will Do

Dear P. Or B.: There is no such thing as a sure-fire method of calculating the arrival of a baby. Nature sometimes plays little tricks for which there is no explanation.

Here is how the doctors figure: Circle the first day of the last menstrual period. Count backwards three months. For example, if the date was October 1st, go back to July 1st. Then count forward seven days. That brings you to July 7th. The baby should arrive between July 7th and July 10th. But don't bet the rent.

She Won't Tell

Dear Ann Landers: I've been reading your column for as long as I have been able to read. The Confidentials at the end have always intrigued me. Sometimes I can figure out what the question was and sometimes I can't. Do you intentionally couch the language to pique the curiosity of your readers? Why not print the complete letter?

Please explain. I'll bet others are as curious as I. — Puzzled in Paducah

Dear Padook: Those Confidentials at the foot of my column are neither teasers nor guessing games. They are messages for readers who would prefer not to receive letters at home. ("My wife opens my mail," or, "My mother is very inquisitive.")

Sometimes the writer doesn't want to reveal his identity but needs guidance, so he requests a Confidential.

Frequently "interested," parties write and ask for information about the Confidentials, such as, "What city did the letter come from?" It goes without saying, I never betray a confidence.

A Poor Bet 14

Dear Ann Landers: I am 25 years of age and madly in love with a guy 27. I wish you'd tell me what to do about him because I don't trust my own head any more.

Rudy and I have been dating steadily for 15 months. He said he wanted to marry me but couldn't afford a ring, so I gave him $50 for the down payment on one we saw in a store window on a Sunday night. That was three weeks ago. He seems to have disappeared into thin air. I called Rudy's boarding house five days straight and his landlady told me he was in good health and has been going to work every day.

ANN LANDERS

He had asked me never to call him at work, so I was reluctant to do so. But after a week of not hearing anything I decided to do it anyway. Well, Rudy said he was ashamed to face me. He put the $50 on a horse and the nag is still at the gate.

He told me to forget about him and go with other guys because he's not good enough for me.

I really love this jerk, Ann, but I need to know what to do about him. Please advise. — Nutty Ella

Dear Ella: The jerk is right. He's NOT good enough for you. Take his advice and go out with others.

If you should succeed in getting Rudy to the altar, you will probably be a steady contributor to this column.

Is alcoholism ruining your life? Know the danger signals and what to do. Read the booklet, "Alcoholism — Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Sanity-Defying Hum

The younger generation talks a great game of peace. They want no more wars, no military stockpile, and no involvements with anyone whose peace is threatened.

As a mother of three whose children pay dues in that generation, let me tell you they'll never pull it off. You know why? Someone will "hum" and it'll be World War III. In 20 years of child raising, I have discovered "humming" is the one sin children cannot tolerate and never outgrow.

Hitting, biting, scratching, shoving, taking records, hogging the phone, locking doors, using up all the hot water, failing to repay bad debts, forgetting to pick them up at the gym . . . all that they can handle, but "humming" will drive them up the wall.

As small children they used to sit around the dinner table and suddenly one of them would drop his fork and implore, "Mom! Make her stop it!"

The silence was deafening. "Make her stop what?"

"Humming!"

"I don't here anything."

"You never hear it. She's humming just so I can hear it."

I'd lean over, my hair resting on her lips, and listen. Nothing. Then, I'd stare at her neck to make sure it wasn't moving. It got to the point where I used to feel the veins in her neck to see if they were still warm.

They hummed in the back seat of the car, nearly causing their father to crash into a tree with their fighting. They hummed on the playground one day and happily were near someone who knew pressure points. They hummed one Sunday in church and ended up having a water fight in the vestibule — with holy water yet.

Twenty years I put up with humming. I couldn't hear. Twenty years of recriminations, retaliations, and general rottenness. Once, one of them became so incensed over an inaudible hum that he leaned over and yelled into his brother's ear, causing him to read lips throughout an entire summer.

I'd love to think this generation would live in peace and harmony with the rest of the world forever, but one of these days — I don't know when it will be — a Russian or perhaps a Chinese nationalist will hum . . . not a hum that a normal ear could hear . . . but one of those aggravating, sanity-defying hums that only a bionic ear could pick up and then . . .

I hope I won't be around to see it.

Opening lead — J ♥

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Jim: "Speak for yourself, Dad. Malcolm Brachman who captained this year's Reisinger winners has just celebrated his 50th birthday."

Oswald: "Right! However, the total age of the other five — Mike Passell, Bobby Goldman, Paul Soloway, Bill Eisenberg and Eddy Kantar is well under 200 so the team average is under 40 years. How about some hands from the event?"

Jim: "Here's a simple one. Malcolm sat South and opened with the artificial forcing two-club bid used by almost all American experts. Mike's two-spade response was positive and showed a decent spade suit."

Oswald: "Since the game was board-a-match, Malcolm took full charge and went into Blackwood. When Mike showed one ace he bid six notrump."

Jim: "This bid would be just as correct in IMPs as in board-a-match. With one ace missing and South holding ace-queen of clubs it was most important for South to be declarer."

Oswald: "Malcolm won the heart lead in dummy and led a low diamond on the theory that if East held the ace he might duck, whereupon Malcolm would collect what might be a most important extra trick. That didn't work, but it was unnecessary. The opposing North-South pair bid to six spades. Kantar led his singleton diamond and six spades went down one."

Ask the Jacobys

The answer is a decided "Yes." Easley Blackwood invented it back in 1934 right in Indianapolis where Easley still lives.

(Do you have a question for the experts? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The Jacobys will answer individual questions if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are enclosed. The most interesting questions will be used in this column and will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.)

Young Help Old

DETROIT (AP) — "We want to show that young people do care about old people," says 14-year-old Jill Daniels.

So about a dozen Pierson school ninth graders have been spending their afternoons fixing up and painting the home of Alma Ruehle, an 85-year-old widow.

Mrs. Ruehle admits, "This is a blessing to me." The youngsters decided to fix up the aging, tiny frame house as a project for their sociology class. "They wanted to do something right in the neighborhood," explained their teacher, Mary Baldwin.

Parents and neighbors donated materials.

Dr. Lester Coleman

Physicians rarely see patients who, in addition to their physical symptoms, do not also have some overtones of anxiety.

This combination of fear and illness can be severely debilitating. Far too often, the anxieties are more destructive than the diseases which bring the patients to the doctors, offices.

Sometimes, even mature people consider it to be a sign of weakness if they give vent to their emotional problems. Yet once they begin to express their fears to the doctor and relieve themselves of hidden anxieties, the basic problems of their physical health can more readily be understood.

Physicians now know that the art of medicine is to recognize anxiety and to stimulate their patients to reveal their fears.

There is no shame, in this hectic world of ours, to be burdened by neurotic tendencies. In fact, it is remarkable that so many people are able to cope with their problems, produce a good day's work and carry on their family and social obligations.

There are others, however, who are unable to be serviceable to themselves, to their families and to their community, because Dr. Coleman they continue to allow fear to luxuriate in darkness.

The expression of anxiety to a doctor opens up new horizons for personal happiness and for emancipation from the burdens of fear. Physicians have learned that when they help patients to cope with the stresses of living there is greater ease of adjusting to both the physical and the emotional problems that surround them.

The need for psychological guidance, if it is suggested by the doctor, should not be stubbornly resisted by the patient. Many are too vain to accept such a suggestion and state that they would "rather work it out" themselves.

Deep-seated emotional problems are rarely worked out in this way. The kind, solicitous suggestions of family and friends may seem to be beneficial. The chances are greater, however, that emotional conflicts will continue to flourish in the absence of professional guidance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't borrow anything from friends today unless it's absolutely necessary to your well-being. Harsh feelings could otherwise result.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't attempt to lord it over people today. It's far better to play up to them a little. You'll create much ill will by being too bossy.

How does one figure when the baby is supposed to arrive? Some of Lila's friends have been given "due dates" by their doctors and they have been off by as much as three weeks. What system do doctors use? Is there any 100-per cent-sure method of calculation? — Pink Or Blue — Either Will Do

Dear P. Or B.: There is no such thing as a sure-fire method of calculating the arrival of a baby. Nature sometimes plays little tricks for which there is no explanation.

Here is how the doctors figure: Circle the first day of the last menstrual period. Count backwards three months. For example, if the date was October 1st, go back to July 1st. Then count forward seven days. That brings you to July 7th. The baby should arrive between July 7th and July 10th. But don't bet the rent.

She Won't Tell

Dear Ann Landers: I've been reading your column for as long as I have been able to read. The Confidentials at the end have always intrigued me. Sometimes I can figure out what the question was and sometimes I can't. Do you intentionally couch the language to pique the curiosity of your readers? Why not print the complete letter?

Please explain. I'll bet others are as curious as I. — Puzzled in Paducah

Dear Padook: Those Confidentials at the foot of my column are neither teasers nor guessing games. They are messages for readers who would prefer not to receive letters at home. ("My wife opens my mail," or, "My mother is very inquisitive.")

Sometimes the writer doesn't want to reveal his identity but needs guidance, so he requests a Confidential.

Frequently "interested,' parties write and ask for information about the Confidentials, such as, "What city did the letter come from?" It goes without saying, I never betray a confidence.

A Poor Bet 14

Dear Ann Landers: I am 25 years of age and madly in love with a guy 27. I wish you'd tell me what to do about him because I don't trust my own head any more.

Rudy and I have been dating

steadily for 15 months. He said he wanted to marry me but couldn't afford a ring, so I gave him $50 for the down payment on one we saw in a store window on a Sunday night. That was three weeks ago. He seems to have disappeared into thin air. I called Rudy's boarding house five days straight and his landlady told me he was in good health and has been going to work every day.

He had asked me never to call him at work, so I was reluctant to do so. But after a week of not hearing anything I decided to do it anyway. Well, Rudy said he was ashamed to face me. He put the $50 on a horse and the nag is still at the gate.

He told me to forget about him and go with other guys because he's not good enough for me.

I really love this jerk, Ann, but I need to know what to do about him. Please advise. — Nutty Ella

Dear Ella: The jerk is right. He's NOT good enough for you. Take his advice and go out with others.

If you should succeed in getting Rudy to the altar, you will probably be a steady contributor to this column.

Sanity-Defying Hum

The younger generation talks a great game of peace. They want no more wars, no military stockpile, and no involvements with anyone whose peace is threatened.

As a mother of three whose children pay dues in that generation, let me tell you they'll never pull it off. You know why? Someone will "hum" and it'll be World War III. In 20 years of child raising, I have discovered "humming" is the one sin children cannot tolerate and never outgrow.

Hitting, biting, scratching, shoving, taking records, hogging the phone, locking doors, using up all the hot water, failing to repay bad debts, forgetting to pick them up at the gym . . . all that they can handle, but "humming" will drive them up the wall.

As small children they used to sit around the dinner table and suddenly one of them would drop his fork and implore, "Mom! Make her stop it!"

The silence was deafening. "Make her stop what?"

"Humming!"

"I don't here anything."

"You never hear it. She's humming just so I can hear it."

I'd lean over, my hair resting on her lips, and listen. Nothing. Then, I'd stare at her neck to make sure it wasn't moving. It got to the point where I used to feel the veins in her neck to see if they were still warm.

They hummed in the back seat of the car, nearly causing their father to crash into a tree with their fighting. They hummed on the playground one day and happily were near someone who knew pressure points. They hummed one Sunday in church and ended up having a water fight in the vestibule — with holy water yet.

Twenty years I put up with humming I couldn't hear. Twenty years of recriminations, retaliations, and general rottenness. Once, one of them became so incensed over an inaudible hum that he leaned over and yelled into his brother's ear, causing him to read lips throughout an entire summer.

I'd love to think this generation would live in peace and harmony with the rest of the world forever, but one of these days — I don't know when it will be — a Russian or perhaps a Chinese nationalist will hum . . . not a hum that a normal ear could hear . . . but one of those aggravating, sanity-defying hums that only a bionic ear could pick up and then . . .

I hope I won't be around to see it.

Opening lead — J ♥

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Jim: "Speak for yourself, Dad. Malcolm Brachman who captained this year's Reisinger winners has just celebrated his 50th birthday."

Oswald: "Right! However, the total age of the other five — Mike Passell, Bobby Goldman, Paul Soloway, Bill Eisenberg and Eddy Kantar is well under 200 so the team average is under 40 years. How about some hands from the event?"

Jim: "Here's a simple one. Malcolm sat South and opened with the artificial forcing two-club bid used by almost all American experts. Mike's two-spade response was positive and showed a decent spade suit."

Oswald: "Since the game was board-a-match, Malcolm took full charge and went into Blackwood. When Mike showed one ace he bid six notrump."

Jim: "This bid would be just as correct in IMPs as in board-a-match. With one ace missing and South holding ace-queen of clubs it was most important for South to be declarer."

Oswald: "Malcolm won the heart lead in dummy and led a low diamond on the theory that if East held the ace he might duck, whereupon Malcolm would collect what might be a most important extra trick. That didn't work, but it was unnecessary. The opposing North-South pair bid to six spades. Kantar led his singleton diamond and six spades went down one."

Young Help Old

DETROIT (AP) — "We want to show that young people do care about old people," says 14-year-old Jill Daniels.

So about a dozen Pierson school ninth graders have been spending their afternoons fixing up and painting the home of Alma Ruehle, an 85-year-old widow.

Mrs. Ruehle admits, "This is a blessing to me." The youngsters decided to fix up the aging, tiny frame house as a project for their sociology class. "They wanted to do something right in the neighborhood," explained their teacher, Mary Baldwin.

Parents and neighbors donated materials.

Dr. Lester Coleman

Physicians rarely see patients who, in addition to their physical symptoms, do not also have some overtones of anxiety.

This combination of fear and illness can be severely debilitating. Far too often, the anxieties are more destructive than the diseases which bring the patients to the doctors, offices.

Sometimes, even mature people consider it to be a sign of weakness if they give vent to their emotional problems. Yet once they begin to express their fears to the doctor and relieve themselves of hidden anxieties, the basic problems of their physical health can more readily be understood.

Physicians now know that the art of medicine is to recognize anxiety and to stimulate their patients to reveal their fears.

There is no shame, in this hectic world of ours, to be burdened by neurotic tendencies. In fact, it is remarkable that so many people are able to cope with their problems, produce a good day's work and carry on their family and social obligations.

There are others, however, who are unable to be serviceable to themselves, to their families and to their community, because () Coleman they continue to allow fear to luxuriate in darkness.

The expression of anxiety to a doctor opens up new horizons for personal happiness and for emancipation from the burdens of fear. Physicians have learned that when they help patients to cope with the stresses of living there is greater ease of adjusting to both the phyical and the emotional problems that surround them.

The need for psychological guidance, if it is suggested by the doctor, should not be stubbornly resisted by the patient. Many are too vain to accept such a suggestion and state that they would "rather work it out" themselves.

Deep-seated emotional problems are rarely worked out in this way. The kind, solicitous suggestions of family and friends may seem to be beneficial. The chances are greater, however, that emotional conflicts will continue to flourish in the absence of professional guidance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't borrow anything from friends today unless it's absolutely necessary to your well-being. Harsh feelings could otherwise result.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In your one-to-one dealings today, try to keep your wits about you. You could become involved with one who is unreasonably hostile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't attempt to lord it over people today. It's far better to play up to them a little. You'll create much ill will by being too bossy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone you're very close to may be extremely extravagant today. Their profligacy could hurt you, too.

Dead State Girl Not Sexually Molested

HOPE SHATTERED: Deborah Ashcroft, 29, mother of 10-year-old Kristine Mihelich, whose frozen body was found in snowbank Friday, said she was still hoping body was not her daughter when police officer arrived at her home. Kristine Mihelich had disappeared on Jan. 2 and was found Friday, dead, in a ditch along a remote residential road in Franklin about four miles from her home. (AP Wirephoto)

BERKLEY, Mich. (AP) — Preliminary autopsy results indicate that 10-year-old Kristine Mihelich, whose frozen body was found in a snowbank Friday, was not sexually molested.

The Oakland County medical examiner, who conducted the autopsy, said Sunday it revealed only a slight bruise on the girl's left cheek. Officials have not determined the official cause of death, but they believe Kristine, who disappeared near her home Jan. 2, was murdered.

"I don't imagine she wandered out in the field by herself," Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson said Sunday.

Kristine's body was found in a ditch in Franklin Village by a mail carrier. She was wearing the same clothes she wore when she disappeared while walking home from a neighborhood store.

Patterson and other police officials would only make general comments on the case.

But the prosecutor said a special group of 35 officers from nine suburban police forces, the Detroit homicide unit, the FBI, Michigan State Police and Oakland County Sheriff's Department met Sunday to discuss the case.

The task force is also investigating the disappearance and death of five other youngsters in Oakland county within the past year. Four of the other victims were girls, and all were aged 16 years or younger.

Police said there is no evidence linking Kristine's death with the others.

Patterson said the task force is "awaiting eagerly" the results of fingerprint tests conducted Saturday by Bud Hines.

Hines, a 20-year veteran of the Toronto Provincial police, attempted to lift fingerprints chemically from the girl's body. He said results could be expected in a few days.

The prosecutor said the FBI probe will focus on the death of Jane Allen, 13, of Royal Oak. Her body was found near Dayton, Ohio, three days after she vanished while hitchhiking along Interstate 75 in Pontiac Township Aug. 7. She died of carbon monoxide poisoning, police said.

Spanish Official Kidnaped

MADRID (AP) — The president of the Supreme Court of Military Justice, Lt. Gen. Emilio Villaescusa Quilis was kidnaped today, the news agency Europa Press reported.

Four armed men seized the general about 10 a.m. on his doorstep as he was leaving for his office, pulled him into a waiting car and sped away with him, the news agency's report said.

The abduction occurred a few blocks from the office from which an adviser of King Juan Carlos, Antonio Maria de Oriol, was kidnaped six weeks ago by a leftist group demanding the release of 15 political prisoners. The government has refused to release the prisoners, and Oriol is still missing.

There was no immediate indication of the identity of the general's kidnapers or their motive. The Supreme Court of Military Justice rules on appeals against court-martial convictions and other army legal matters.

Meanwhile, ultra-rightists were blamed for the killing of a 19-year-old during a leftist demonstration Sunday, and police questioned several members of the neo-fascist strongarm organization called Guerrillas of Christ the King.

Saginaw Auto Walkout Ending

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Striking workers at General Motors' key Saginaw Steering Gear plant returned work today, ending a walkout that threatened to shut down the giant automaker.

The workers, members of United Auto Workers Local 699, ratified a proposed new local contract overwhelmingly on Sunday after a three-day strike.

The threat of a second strike in Saginaw was delayed when the local representing two Chevrolet casting plants postponed its strike deadline until 11:00 a.m. Thursday, GM officials said.

The 7,700 members of UAW Local 668 had threaten to walk off the job today at 11:00 a.m. if no agreement had been reached on a new local contract.

Kenneth Pretzer, president of the Local 699, said the approval margin came with nearly 100 per cent of the plant's 6,800 workers voting.

Pretzer said the new pact covers both skilled trades and production workers.

"The vote in favor of ratification was 92 per cent among production workers and 88½ per cent with the skilled," Pretzer said.

The workers are covered under the master national UAW agreement with GM, but the Saginaw plant was among those which had not resolved local differences on such issues as production speed and plant safety.

The walkout, which began Thursday when negotiators failed to reach an agreement on contract terms before an 11 a.m. deadline, had threatened GM's entire U.S. production network, since the Saginaw plant is the firm's only producer of steering gear components.

Meanwhile, both GM and Chrysler were threatened with more strikes this week over local contract issues.

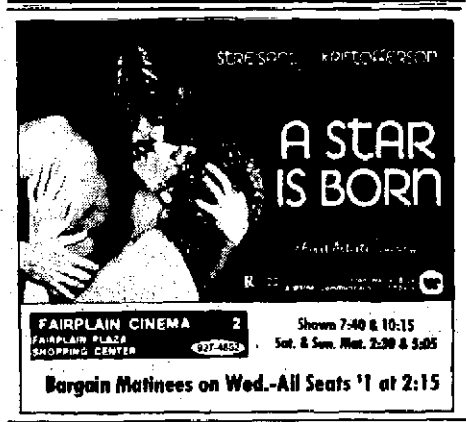

With the Saginaw settlement, 43 of GM's 143 local bargaining units were still without local contracts.

Military Pension Costs Soaring

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon will pay more to retired military personnel this year than the Army pays to all active duty soldiers.

This growing pension expense is more than the Air Force has budgeted this year to buy planes and missiles.

And it is more than this year's Navy budget for shipbuilding.

Since 1962, the total defense budget has almost doubled, rising from $51.1 billion to this year's $100.1 billion. But the cost of military pensions has grown nearly tenfold to $8.2 billion.

In 1962, military pensions amounted to 1¾ per cent of the Defense Department budget. For 1977, the pensions amount to 8.2 per cent of the defense budget.

In the next fiscal year, the cost will probably reach $9 billion, and it will be pushing $10 billion in the year after that.

Unless changes are made in the system, the annual pension cost could exceed $30 billion by the year 2000, according to an estimate by the congressional General Accounting Office. That estimate is based on holding inflation to 5 per cent a year until then.

The GAO also estimated that the nation would spend a total of $424 billion on military pensions between now and the end of the century. That's more than the current annual federal budget and almost equal to two-thirds of the national debt.

The costs of military pensions have grown rapidly because they are pegged to active-duty pay, which has been increased to attract an all-volunteer force.

The number of military pensioners also has more than doubled since before the Vietnam war. There now are more than 1 million persons getting Pentagon pensions, and the number is expected to increase to 1.3 million by 1980.

This year's $8.23 billion pension bill tops the $8.19 billion budgeted for pay, allowances and travel for all Army personnel, the $8.19 billion for Navy shipbuilding and the $7.92 billion for Air Force missile and aircraft procurement.

The military pension system is more generous than the federal government's civilian retirement system and all major private pension plans. By some calculations, it is several times more generous.

Today, a typical career E-7 sergeant retires at age 41 after 22 years of service. He or she would draw $534 a month in retirement pay, starting immediately, for life.

Club Starts Deer Feeding Program

MUNISING, Mich. (AP) — A private feeding program for deer in the Upper Peninsula's Beaver Basin got under way Sunday without the expected hassle with federal officials.

Conservationists brought food for the animals onto U.S. Park Service land, but federal agents did not attempt to interfere.

The incident was the latest in a controversy which grew out of a plan by state Department of Natural Resources to allow a special hunting season in the area because the deer reportedly faced starvation due to heavy snow and a lack of natural feed.

But the DNR plan was challenged in court, and earlier this month the Alger County Sportsmen's Club agreed to mortgage its holdings to pay for a feeding program as an alternative to the special hunting season.

Private feeding programs in wilderness areas are against federal national park policy, and officials had said no exception would be made for the sportsmen's club. But the club went ahead anyway.

President Charles Wilderspin said more than 200 men aboard snowmobiles participated. He said the effort attracted not only club members, but sportsmen from all over Michigan.

REVIVAL OF CALLUP LOTTERY URGED

Pentagon Seeking New Standby Draft

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department is recommending that President Carter create new standby draft machinery, including revival of an annual lottery for young men, to determine the callup order in case of a national emergency mobilization.

The recommendation was sent to the White House in the final days of the Ford administration for consideration by Carter's National Security Council.

A year ago, then-President Gerald R. Ford reduced the Selective Service System to a small Washington planning staff and ended registration of 18-year-olds. He also halted the annual lottery, which determined the callup order based on birth dates.

The lottery had been continued for contingency purposes after the end of the draft in 1973.

In a confidential document, the Defense Department said the nation needs a new standby "wartime draft system," which could produce 650,000 trained men within six months after mobilization.

The document estimated that more than 450,000 casualties might have to be replaced in that period if a major war begins in Europe. It assumes at least three months to prepare a draftee for combat.

"Rapidity is the primary feature needed in a wartime draft system," the Pentagon document said. "Performance rates in previous wars are too slow to provide the manpower needed to generate and sustain the wartime capability of the force structure. These manpower demands cannot be met with a leisurely schedule for activating and bringing to full operational capability the wartime draft. Actions that formerly took weeks must be accomplished in hours."

The Pentagon said the proposed system is not suitable for peacetime.

"It is specifically designed to work only under conditions of full mobilization — during a grave national emergency," said the document.

Among other features, it calls for an annual draft lottery of 20-year-olds in peacetime. Sequence numbers would be assigned by birth date and the results would be widely publicized.

"The idea is to let each member of the 20-year-old cohort know in advance that he is liable to be drafted early or secure from early call by a wartime draft," the document said.

The plan provides for draft deferments, but says these "must be tightly controlled."

The concept departs from the traditional structure of World War II and later years, based on local draft boards made up of civilians.

Instead, the new system would be built around 66 area offices, staffed by about 1,700 national guard and reserve personnel selected and trained in peacetime for wartime draft duty. The area offices would be activated promptly at mobilization.

Pot Smokers Get 'Medical Drydock'

LONDON (AP) — Nine young sailors from the crew of the U.S. nuclear submarine Casimir Pulaski are being sent home for medical care which the Navy hopes will cure them of smoking marijuana.

The sailors, who are 19 and 20, are going into "medical drydock," said Cmdr. Gene Wentz, spokesman for Navy's European headquarters. He refused to make public their names. The men were taken off their ship during the weekend at the nuclear sub base at Holy Loch, Scotland.

Wentz said the sailors were found in possession of marijuana and admitted using the drug. The Navy exempts drug users from disciplinary proceedings if they agree to receive medical help.

Draft Evaders Cautious

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

United States draft evaders in Canada apparently are in no great rush to take advantage of President Carter's pardon, or else they are just being cautious.

U.S. Immigration Service officials at Detroit, Port Huron and Sault Ste. Marie say that as of late Saturday none identified as a draft evader had yet crossed the border.

A spokesman for the immigration office at the Detroit and Windsor Tunnel said only one telephone inquiry on the subject has been received.

Immigration officials said they have been instructed by Washington to process any persons claiming to be draft evaders and entitled to entry under the presidential pardon.

New President Seeks Test Ban

Asked if he would approve Palestinian representation at such a meeting, the President said the matter has not been decided but that Palestinian participation "would probably be as part of one of the Arab delegations."

In a relaxed mood, Carter spoke softly, discussing these other topics, ranging from personnel problems to a self-confessed awe at finding himself living in the home of presidential giants of history:

—"I feel quite at ease about the percentage of blacks" named to high administration posts, he said, but declared, "I wish that we could get more women, in particular, in the top levels of government.

"I am not completely satisfied with what we have done but I am satisfied about the effort we have made," he said, promising he "will try to compensate" for not having named more women "as we go along."

—He expressed no surprise at the reaction both for and against his blanket pardon Friday of Vietnam-era draft evaders who were not guilty of violent acts. Carter said: "It is something that should have been done. I was very grateful to be the one to do it."

Asked about the likely result of a Pentagon study he has ordered of the status of deserters and others not covered by the pardon, Carter said there might be a bloc upgrading of less-than-honorable discharges given to alcoholics, mental incompetents and some others whose violation of military rules related only to their personal lives, not their military conduct.

Saying he would let most other cases be handled under existing Defense Department procedures, Carter said: "I don't have any inclination to upgrade those who received a bad conduct discharge or a dishonorable discharge. They have been tried in a military court. They have been convicted of a crime."

—"Within the next week or two," he said, "I will make my first report to the American people on what we have already achieved and the time schedule for additional proposals."

He predicted that a comprehensive welfare overhaul plan will be ready by May 1 and promised a comprehensive energy proposal within 90 days. In addition, he said he will be proposing "very shortly" legislation authorizing a reorganization of the federal bureaucracy.

—Scoffing at reports that he has gone too far to accommodate Congress in recent weeks, Carter acknowledged "I want to get along with Congress" and said he is "not searching for ways to demonstrate that I am obstinate in dealing with the Congress."

However, he said that "on something where I am committed because of conviction or because of a commitment to the American people, I will be very strong and very aggressive and very adamant about pursuing my position."

He expressed confidence that clashes with Congress can be minimized by consulting its leaders in "initial stages of proposed change." But, Carter said, "I am the leader of our country, elected as President. I have got my promises to fulfill and I intend to fulfill them."

—He defended his "economic stimulus" plan, which could cost as much as $30 billion over two years, and indicated there could be room for some give-and-take with Congress, particularly if economic circumstances should change in the next few months.

But he said if Congress tried to drastically alter what he is proposing "it would delay the beneficial impact of the economic stimulus package and hurt our country."

ing open beyond this week were "bleak."

But in Indiana, more than 200,000 pupils returned to classes in the Indianapolis area after being out for one week. Parents were advised their children should dress warmly because thermostats would be turned down in classrooms.

Many of Georgia's 189 school systems, closed last week, were reopening today with thermostats set at the 65-degree mark.

Although moderating weekend temperatures eased demands on North Carolina's strained energy resources, Forrest Collier, a Piedmont Natural Gas spokesman, said the state's gas outlook won't really improve until March.

"We have a winter entitlement of gas that has to last us through March," he said. "The entitlement of gas has to be managed."

Piedmont has cut off about 165 commercial and industrial customers and curtailed 20,000 others by 35 per cent. The curtailments are to be enforced with spot policing and beefed up meter-reading beginning Wednesday.

In New York, Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. on Sunday ordered its industrial and commercial natural gas customers, including schools, to cut back usage by 10 per cent. The utility last week had asked for a voluntary reduction.

A company spokesman said shortages of natural gas at its supplier, Consolidated Gas Corp. of West Virginia, and continued cold led to the order for reduced use.

Niagara Mohawk, the largest upstate New York utility, has 549 industrial and about 20,000 commercial users among its 415,000 customers. The order did not affect residential users.

Ice on several rivers continued to slow or block navigation.

Ohio River traffic was halted Sunday at two dams at Golconda, Ill., where the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said water in reservoirs had been lowered to prevent damage when ice starts to melt.

Chuck Schumann, a Corps spokesman, said that although barge traffic was reported at only 10 to 15 per cent of normal, channels did not appear to be freezing as quickly as they had in past days after towboats broke the ice.

The frozen Ohio drew several hundred strollers on Sunday near Cincinnati, and their promenading blocked the progress of a 12-barge tow being pushed upriver by a towboat.

State Tells Phone Firms To Make Cuts, Refunds

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state today ordered General Telephone Co. to reduce its rates by $2.3 million and told Michigan Bell it would have to refund $3 million in two rate cases.

General Telephone Co. of Muskegon had applied in December 1975 for a $10.2 million increase in annual revenue. But the Public Service Commission said rates for the state's second largest phone company should be cut, not increased.

The reduction, the first ordered for telephone companies since the mid-1960's when the economy was on the upswing, means the one-party residential service of the utility's 371,000 customers will drop 56 cents a month.

Customers with this service now pay from $7.45 to $10.25 a month. Customers are scattered throughout the state from Three Rivers in the southwest corner to L'Anse in the Upper Peninsula.

In finding that General Telephone has an annual revenue excess of $2.3 million, the commission applied the so-called "leverage theory" of determining the rate of return on common equity when a company is a subsidiary of another firm. Leverage relates to the investment of funds bearing a fixed cost in projects that earn at a higher rate of return than that of fixed cost.

In the Michigan Bell case, the PSC admitted it made $6 million in arithmetical errors in computing rates for the period May to November 1975.

Residential customers of the phone company during that period will receive a maximum 55-cent credit on their next bill.

The PSC errors meant the utility would have collected $5.9 million more than it should have during a 12-month period. However, the excess rate figures were in effect only six months before they were discovered.

The state ordered Bell to apply the credit to customer bills within 45 hours and complete the refunds within 37 days.

'Dangerously Close'

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — While oil tankers continue efforts to navigate through ice-clogged Grand Traverse Bay, police are on the lookout for ice fishermen who might get in the way. Police said some fishermen came dangerously close to the tanker Amoco Illinois on Saturday when it broke through the ice cover to deliver oil to Traverse City. Ice fishermen heckled the crew the next morning, and refused to move for a while when the ship attempted to back out of its dock on West Grand Traverse Bay.

Ships Go Through Soo

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — Four freighters sailed downbound through the Soo Locks over the weekend after a broken ice boom had delayed an unofficial end to winter navigation in Lake Superior. The boom, which broke loose last week, was repaired by divers late Saturday in temperatures just above zero. Coast Guard officials had delayed passage of the ships through the St. Mary's River, fearing further damage to the boom.

New President Seeks Test Ban

Asked if he would approve Palestinian representation at such a meeting, the President said the matter has not been decided but that Palestinian participation "would probably be as part of one of the Arab delegations."

In a relaxed mood, Carter spoke softly, discussing these other topics, ranging from personnel problems to a self-confessed awe at finding himself living in the home of presidential giants of history:

—"I feel quite at ease about the percentage of blacks" named to high administration posts, he said, but declared, "I wish that we could get more women, in particular, in the top levels of government.

"I am not completely satisfied with what we have done but I am satisfied about the effort we have made," he said, promising he "will try to compensate" for not having named more women "as we go along."

—He expressed no surprise at the reaction both for and against his blanket pardon Friday of Vietnam-era draft evaders who were not guilty of violent acts. Carter said: "It is something that should have been done. I was very grateful to be the one to do it."

Asked about the likely result of a Pentagon study he has ordered of the status of deserters and others not covered by the pardon, Carter said there might be a bloc upgrading of less-than-honorable discharges given to alcoholics, mental incompetents and some others whose violation of military rules related only to their personal lives, not their military conduct.

Saying he would let most other cases be handled under existing Defense Department procedures, Carter said: "I don't have any inclination to upgrade those who received a bad conduct discharge or a dishonorable discharge. They have been tried in a military court. They have been convicted of a crime."

—"Within the next week or two," he said, "I will make my first report to the American people on what we have already achieved and the time schedule for additional proposals."

He predicted that a comprehensive welfare overhaul plan will be ready by May 1 and promised a comprehensive energy proposal within 90 days. In addition, he said he will be proposing "very shortly" legislation authorizing a reorganization of the federal bureaucracy.

State Tells Phone Firms To Make Cuts, Refunds

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state today ordered General Telephone Co. to reduce its rates by $2.3 million and told Michigan Bell it would have to refund $3 million in two rate cases.

General Telephone Co. of Muskegon had applied in December 1975 for a $10.2 million increase in annual revenue. But the Public Service Commission said rates for the state's second largest phone company should be cut, not increased.

The reduction, the first ordered for telephone companies since the mid-1960's when the economy was on the upswing, means the one-party residential service of the utility's 371,000 customers will drop 56 cents a month.

Customers with this service now pay from $7.45 to $10.25 a month. Customers are scattered throughout the state from Three Rivers in the southwest corner to L'Anse in the Upper Peninsula.

In finding that General Telephone has an annual revenue excess of $2.3 million, the commission applied the so-called "leverage theory" of determining the rate of return on common equity when a company is a subsidiary of another firm. Leverage relates to the investment of funds bearing a fixed cost in projects that earn at a higher rate of return than that of fixed cost.

In the Michigan Bell case, the PSC admitted it made $6 million in arithmetical errors in computing rates for the period May to November 1976.

Residential customers of the phone company during that period will receive a maximum 55-cent credit on their next bill.

The PSC errors meant the utility would have collected $5.9 million more than it should have during a 12-month period. However, the excess rate figures were in effect only six months before they were discovered.

The state ordered Bell to apply the credit to customer bills within 48 hours and complete the refunds within 37 days.

'Dangerously Close'

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — While oil tankers continue efforts to navigate through ice-clogged Grand Traverse Bay, police are on the lookout for ice fishermen who might get in the way. Police said some fishermen came dangerously close to the tanker Amoco Illinois on Saturday when it broke through the ice cover to deliver oil to Traverse City. Ice fishermen heckled the crew the next morning, and refused to move for a while when the ship attempted to back out of its dock on West Grand Traverse Bay.

Ships Go Through Soo

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — Four freighters sailed downbound through the Soo Locks over the weekend after a broken ice boom had delayed an unofficial end to winter navigation in Lake Superior. The boom, which broke loose last week, was repaired by divers late Saturday in temperatures just above zero. Coast Guard officials had delayed passage of the ships through the St. Mary's River, fearing further damage to the boom.

WSAM Bids Farm Chiefs To 'Summit'

Working for an agriculturally united front, the state executive committee of Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Michigan (WSAM) will host a Michigan agricultural "Summit Conference" with the presidents of Michigan's four major farm organizations on Feb. 17. The meeting will be in the Kellogg Center at Michigan State university.

According to WSAM State President Eileen Nutting, of rural Bangor, organizational presidents invited to the meeting are: Elton R. Smith, Farm Bureau; Ralph Wood, Michigan Farmers' Union; Gene Frost, Michigan National Farmers Organization (NFO); and Richard Carneross, Michigan State Grange.

Cooperation between these farm organizations in the past has not been particularly noteworthy.

Additional invitations have been extended to State Senators Charles O. Zollar and John C. Hertel; State Representatives Paul Porter and Bela Kennedy; Dr. Daniel Kruger and Frank Madaski of Michigan State university; and Rebecca Tompkins, of the Michigan Agricultural Commission.

Discussion will center on various agriculturally important issues, including the single business tax, effective land use planning, pesticide regulations and transportation problems.

"The farm organizations do work together on many issues," Mrs. Nutting said, "but, cooperation usually comes about after the fact in a reaction to legislation. WSAM wants the farming community to present a united front so governmental regulatory agencies can benefit by input from the food producers."

WSAM was founded in August, 1971, in Van Buren county. Organization of the group led in 1974 to the founding of a national organization, American Agri-Women (AAW), to further their aims to work for better channels of communication with the consumer and educational public and to promote further development of food research programs, in addition to working for a group cooperation in legislative planning.

No Surprise On Michigan Tax Forms

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — State tax officials say persons who pay Michigan income tax won't be hit with any big surprises on the forms this year. But up to 9 per cent of the annual returns contain a mathematical mistake, officials point out, adding that this only delays the processing of returns. Workers who had income tax withheld from their paychecks, likely will get something back.

Missing State Man Found In Nashville

Emaus had been missing since Friday night, when he left work at the Federal Express Co. offices at the Kent County Airport.

In a collect call to his father Saturday morning, Emaus said he had picked up a hitchhiker after leaving work and had been forced to drive south. The father said his son apparently was released near Nashville and called police from a service station.

Carter's Cabinet Given Free Rein

By RICHARD E. MEYER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is sitting down to business for the first time with his newly installed Cabinet, "a superb group" of secretaries, each to be master of his own domain.

The Cabinet, short three members yet to be approved by the Senate, meets with Carter today.

"The secretaries will run their departments," Carter said as a dozen of his Cabinet-level officers took the oath of office Sunday in a White House ceremony.

"There will never be an instance, while I am President, when the members of the White House staff dominate or act in a superior position to the members of our Cabinet," the President said. "When a directive is relayed from the White House to members of the Cabinet, it will indeed come directly from me."

Although Carter reserved major decisions as his constitutional prerogative and responsibility, he declared that otherwise he believes in "a Cabinet administration of our government."

"I have always heard about the advise and consent role of the Congress," he said. "So far they have been a little stronger on the advice than they have on the consent ... I hope that there will be a very rapid move toward completing our leadership group."

Still to be confirmed are Joseph Califano, nominated for secretary of health, education and welfare; F. Ray Marshall, secretary of labor, and Griffin B. Bell, attorney general.

Theodore Sorensen, Carter's nominee for CIA director, withdrew a week ago in the face of stiff Senate opposition. The President says Army Lt. Gen. James J. Gavin has been suggested to him for the job.

Sworn in during Sunday's East Room ceremony were:

—Cyrus R. Vance, secretary of state. "I guess of all the Cabinet members recommended to me, he had the closest to a unanimous recommendation," Carter said.

—W. Michael Blumenthal, secretary of treasury. Carter said "he is going to be the one to make sure we stay on a sound basis in making decisions on economics and finance."

—Harold Brown, secretary of defense. The California Institute of Technology, which Brown headed, is "second only, I guess, to Georgia Tech," Carter quipped.

—Cecil D. Andrus, secretary of interior. Carter said he was "the only Cabinet member I never had to hesitate at all about."

—Bob Bergland, secretary of agriculture. "(He) is the one with whom I have the deepest sense of mutual sympathy," said Carter, a peanut farmer. "He makes his living on a 600-acre farm."

—Juanita M. Kreps, secretary of commerce. Carter said he believes "she is the first woman to ever attend a National Security Council meeting as a full participant."

—Brock Adams, secretary of transportation. "As chairman of the (House) Budget Committee, he was instrumental in evolving ... a much more sound and businesslike way to handle budget and appropriations questions," Carter said.

—Patricia Roberts Harris, secretary of housing and urban development. Carter said: "She has been in the forefront of carving out a proper role for minority groups and for women."

—Thomas B. Lance, budget director. Carter described him as "one of the closest friends I have in the world."

—James R. Schlesinger, chief energy adviser. "I hope we can create without much delay a new energy department," Carter said. "He will be head of that department."

—Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers and "my closest person in shaping basic economic policy."

—Zbigniew Brzezinski, national security adviser. "(He) is the one who, among all others, has helped me most to learn about foreign policy," Carter said. "He ... is one who has caused a great deal of consternation already among the typesetters of our country."

Some Inner Thoughts On A Duodenal Ulcer

There are a number of popular misconceptions about peptic ulcers that are interesting, if not true. For instance, some believe the real cause is not known; some say ulcers affect only those individuals under constant strain, and still others say they can be remedied only with complete relaxation and strict dieting.

Dr. Vince Ackerman

We asked Dr. Ackerman, of the Ackerman Chiropractic Center, to give us his opinion.

"It is generally conceded that the most common cause of stomach ulcers is a high level of stomach acidity," the good Doctor stated. "The level of stomach acidity is regulated by the nerves that supply the stomach. When an imbalance in these nerves exist, the stage is set for the development of an ulcer.

"Irritation of the nerves going to the stomach causes excessive muscular movement of the walls of the stomach, and excessive secretion of hydrochloric acid into the stomach," he continued. "These two factors, then, will combine to creat irritation to the mucous lining of the inner wall of the stomach. The stomach then becomes ulcerated after a short time. The unnaturally high level of acid in the stomach has now literally eaten its way into the inner layers of the muscular wall of the stomach itself. This is also true of duodenal ulcers."

From the foregoing statements it is obvious that dietary indiscretion and emotional stress are not primarily responsible for the formation of an ulcer, although these factors will aggravate an ulcerated condition once it exists. It is then logical to state that a permanent cure for an ulcer will not be found in relaxation and dietary regimen alone, but that permanent cure can only be achieved by normalizing the nerve supply to the stomach. It is the licensed Doctor of Chiropractic alone who is specialized in the maintenance and restoration of normal nerve function - a necessary prerequisite to health. He will direct his efforts accurately to the certain speedy restoration of normal nerve transmission, knowing that the results will be permanent when the underlying cause is corrected.

Carter's Cabinet Given Free Rein

By RICHARD E. MEYER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is sitting down to business for the first time with his newly installed Cabinet, "a superb group" of secretaries, each to be master of his own domain.

The Cabinet, short three members yet to be approved by the Senate, meets with Carter today.

"The secretaries will run their departments," Carter said as a dozen of his Cabinet-level officers took the oath of office Sunday in a White House ceremony.

"There will never be an instance, while I am President, when the members of the White House staff dominate or act in a superior position to the members of our Cabinet," the President said. "When a directive is relayed from the White House to members of the Cabinet, it will indeed come directly from me."

Although Carter reserved major decisions as his constitutional prerogative and responsibility, he declared that otherwise he believes in "a Cabinet administration of our government."

"I have always heard about the advise and consent role of the Congress," he said. "So far they have been a little stronger on the advice than they have on the consent ... I hope that there will be a very rapid move toward completing our leadership group."

Still to be confirmed are Joseph Califano, nominated for secretary of health, education and welfare; F. Ray. Marshall, secretary of labor, and Griffin B. Bell, attorney general.

Theodore Sorensen, Carter's nominee for CIA director, withdrew a week ago in the face of stiff Senate opposition. The President says Army Lt. Gen. James J. Gavin has been suggested to him for the job.

Sworn in during Sunday's East Room ceremony were:

—Cyrus R. Vance, secretary of state. "I guess of all the Cabinet members recommended to me, he had the closest to a unanimous recommendation," Carter said.

—W. Michael Blumenthal, secretary of treasury. Carter said "he is going to be the one to make sure we stay on a sound basis in making decisions on economics and finance."

—Harold Brown, secretary of defense. The California Institute of Technology, which Brown headed, is "second only, I guess, to Georgia Tech," Carter quipped.

—Cecil D. Andrus, secretary of interior. Carter said he was "the only Cabinet member I never had to hesitate at all about."

—Bob Bergland, secretary of agriculture. "(He) is the one with whom I have the deepest sense of mutual sympathy," said Carter, a peanut farmer. "He makes his living on a 600-acre farm."

—Juanita M. Kreps, secretary of commerce. Carter said he believes "she is the first woman to ever attend a National Security Council meeting as a full participant."

—Brock Adams, secretary of transportation. "As chairman of the (House) Budget Committee, he was instrumental in evolving ... a much more sound and businesslike way to handle budget and appropriations questions," Carter said.

—Patricia Roberts Harris, secretary of housing and urban development. Carter said: "She has been in the forefront of carving out a proper role for minority groups and for women."

—Thomas B. Lance, budget director. Carter described him as "one of the closest friends I have in the world."

—James R. Schlesinger, chief energy adviser. "I hope we can create without much delay a new energy department," Carter said. "He will be head of that department."

—Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers and "my closest person in shaping basic economic policy.

—Zbigniew Brzezinski, national security adviser. "(He) is the one who, among all others, has helped me most to learn about foreign policy," Carter said. "He ... is one who has caused a great deal of consternation already among the typesetters of our country."

Some Inner Thoughts On A Duodenal Ulcer

There are a number of popular misconceptions about peptic ulcers that are interesting, if not true. For instance, some believe the real cause is not known; some say ulcers affect only those individuals under constant strain, and still others say they can be remedied only with complete relaxation and strict dieting.

Dr. Vince Ackerman

We asked Dr. Ackerman, of the Ackerman Chiropractic Center, to give us his opinion.

"It is generally conceded that the most common cause of stomach ulcers is a high level of stomach acidity," the good Doctor stated. "The level of stomach acidity is regulated by the nerves that supply the stomach. When an imbalance in these nerves exist, the stage is set for the development of an ulcer.

"Irritation of the nerves going to the stomach causes excessive muscular movement of the walls of the stomach, and excessive secretion of hydrochloric acid into the stomach," he continued. "These two factors, then, will combine to creat irritation to the mucous lining of the inner wall of the stomach. The stomach then becomes ulcerated after a short time. The unnaturally high level of acid in the stomach has now literally eaten its way into the inner layers of the muscular wall of the stomach itself. This is also true of duodenal ulcers."

From the foregoing statements it is obvious that dietary indiscretion and emotional stress are not primarily responsible for the formation of an ulcer, although these factors will aggravate an ulcerated condition once it exists. It is then logical to state that a permanent cure for an ulcer will not be found in relaxation and dietary regimen alone, but that permanent cure can only be achieved by normalizing the nerve supply to the stomach. It is the licensed Doctor of Chiropractic alone who is specialized in the maintenance and restoration of normal nerve function - a necessary prerequisite to health. He will direct his efforts accurately to the certain speedy restoration of normal nerve transmission, knowing that the results will be permanent when the underlying cause is corrected.

'Toots' Shor Dead At 73

FAMED SALOONKEEPER: Legendary New York saloonkeeper Bernard "Toots" Shorr, died Sunday at age 73. Shorr's career began in the speakeasys of Prohibition and continued until he was hospitalized in December. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernard "Toots" Shor, a saloonkeeper who served strong drinks and good stories to celebrities, has died at age 73.

Shor died shortly before midnight Sunday of an undisclosed illness. He had been hospitalized since Dec. 13 at New York University Medical Center. At the time of his death, Shor was running two mid-Manhattan saloons.

He always said he ran his watering holes for his pals and didn't care that people he didn't like — he called them "crumb bums" — found him somewhat abrupt.

An acquaintance once said, "He's exactly the kind of guy he'd throw out of his place." Despite his disregard for most accepted rules of good customer relations, Shor attracted a wide and loyal following, including such avowed partisans as writer Ernest Hemingway, baseball great Joe DiMaggio, boxing heavyweight Jack Dempsey — who had his own bar — and the late actor Paul Douglas.

Called "Toots" for as long as he could remember, he was born in Philadelphia on May 6, 1903. His mother died when he was 15, his father five years later.

Shor said his first legitimate job was selling shirts — "I was a hell of a good salesman" — after an apprenticeship in Philadelphia's pool halls. In his 20's he tok a job in a Prohibition-era speakeasy where he mdt and was fascinated by high-living celebrities and show people.

During this period, Shor met and married a diminutive chorus girl, Marian Volk, whom he always called "Husky." They had three daughters and a son. Shor was a host at various bars and nightspots through the 1930s. In 1940, he opened his own place on West 51st Street in Manhattan, reportedly with considerable financial help from friends.

That establishment was sold for a reported $1.5 million in 1958 to make way for a luxury hotel.

One of Shor's personality traits was a winning self-effacement. For example, he refused to be called a "restaurateur." "I'm just a creepy saloonkeeper," he insisted, "and I ain't ashamed of it." Shor had lived for years at a fashionable Park Avenue address. He is survived by his widow and four children.

As an administrative assist, the individual chosen will work with the division of student services under the direction of Arthur Crump, dean of that division.

Applications for the position should be submitted to the office of the executive vice-president by not later than Feb. 11. Starting date for the job is Feb. 28, according to Dr. Browe.

Parents Accuse GM

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — A Saginaw family has gone t, court to try to collect $500,000 damages from General Motors Corp., charging the automaker's negligence was responsible for their daughter's death. In the opening day of a civil suit trial in Saginaw County Circuit Court Thursday, Franklin H. Specht told the jury GM was at fault in his daughter's death because it failed to notify car owners of an allegedly hazardous defect in some of its cars. Jacqueline Specht, 19, was killed in a traffic accident Dec. 29, 1971. She was driving her sister's 1967 Chevrolet Camaro. The suit charges the car had a defective motor mount which broke, jamming the throttle open and causing the car to go out of control and crash into a tree. An attorney representing GM, Joe Walker, told the court he would prove the alleged motor mount failure did not cause the crash.

ROBERT G. NICHOLS

Robert G. Nichols, former Benton Harbor resident, has been elected chairman of the Greater Pittsburgh, Pa., Chamber of Commerce.

Nichols is managing partner for the Midwest region of Price Waterhouse accounting firm. He and his wife, the former Nancy Oelz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Oelz Sr., Benton Harbor, live in Upper St. Clair, a suburb of Pittsburgh.

Nuke Dump Bill On Way

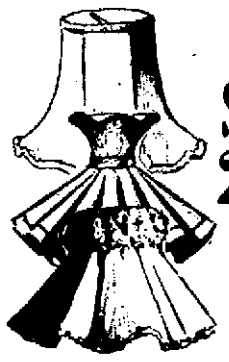

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A northern Michigan lawmaker says he will introduce legislation to give Michigan veto power over any federal plans to establish a nuclear waste dump in the state. State Rep. E. Dan Stevens, R-Atlanta, said the measure would ban the construction of a dump for radioactive wastes without state approval. A similar bill was introduced last year but did not see action before the legislature adjourned. The federal Energy Research and Development Administration, which has been investigating the possibility of using Michigan sites for such a dump, has assured Gov. William Milliken he would be able to veto their plans. But Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley said this week he believes the state has the constitutional authority to pass its own laws to veto such projects without asking the federal government's permission.

Lynne Bruehlman, history instructor who joined the faculty in 1974, was promoted to assistant professor. She holds a bachelor of arts degree from McGill university, a master of arts degree from the University of Wisconsin, and is a doctoral candidate at the latter school.

Sylvia Coleman, who joined the LMC faculty in 1974 as a counselor, was advanced to assistant professor. Mrs. Coleman, an LMC alumna, holds bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from Western Michigan university.

Joyce Summerfeldt, secretarial science instructor who joined the college faculty in 1973, was promoted to assistant professor. She holds bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from Western Michigan university.

The recent promotions bring to sx the number of LMC full professors. Eighteen faculty members are associate professors, 10 assistant professors, and 23 are instructors.

Members of the Ranking Selection committee include, in addition to Dr. Browe: Dr. Donald Moely, professor of music; Dr. Paul Stright, professor of chemistry; Dr. K. Sundaram, associate professor of philosophy; Nancy Taylor, associate professor of mathematics; and Edward Stern, assistant professor or psychology.

LMC Creates New Assistant Position

A new position has been created at Lake Michigan college to assist with financial aids, admissions, and student recruitment, according to Dr. Walter F. Browe, LMC executive vice president.

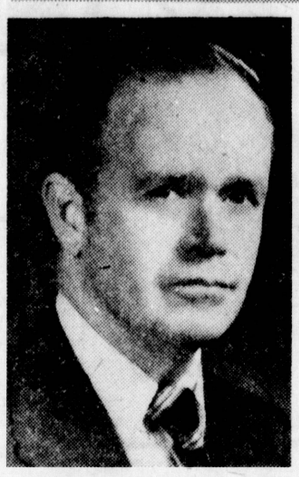

"We are looking for a person, preferably with a bachelor's degree and some related experience, to assist in making contacts with prospective students and arranging financial aid for them when necessary," Dr. Browe said.

As an administrative assist, the individual chosen will work with the division of student services under the direction of Arthur Crump, dean of that division.

Applications for the position should be submitted to the office of the executive vice-president by not later than Feb. 11. Starting date for the job is Feb. 28, according to Dr. Browe.

Parents Accuse GM

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — A Saginaw family has gone t, court to try to collect $500,000 damages from General Motors Corp., charging the automaker's negligence was responsible for their daughter's death. In the opening day of a civil suit trial in Saginaw County Circuit Court Thursday, Franklin H. Specht told the jury GM was at fault in his daughter's death because it failed to notify car owners of an allegedly hazardous defect in some of its cars. Jacqueline Specht, 19, was killed in a traffic accident Dec. 29, 1971. She was driving her sister's 1967 Chevrolet Camaro. The suit charges the car had a defective motor mount which broke, jamming the throttle open and causing the car to go out of control and crash into a tree. An attorney representing GM, Joe Walker, told the court he would prove the alleged motor mount failure did not cause the crash.

Nuke Dump Bill On Way

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A northern Michigan lawmaker says he will introduce legislation to give Michigan veto power over any federal plans to establish a nuclear waste dump in the state. State Rep. E. Dan Stevens, R-Atlanta, said the measure would ban the construction of a dump for radioactive wastes without state approval. A similar bill was introduced last year but did not see action before the legislature adjourned. The federal Energy Research and Development Administration, which has been investigating the possibility of using Michigan sites for such a dump, has assured Gov. William Milliken he would be able to veto their plans. But Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley said this week he believes the state has the constitutional authority to pass its own laws to veto such projects without asking the federal government's permission.

KNOWS SLOT MACHINES: Barry Bellaire of Ann Arbor knows the one-armed bandits inside and out. The sporting goods company manager not only collects the gambling devices but restores and repairs antique slot machines as well, many which he finds rusting away at garage sales. (AP Wirephoto)

Old Slot Machines Were Sneaky

BY BILL DALTON

But when it comes to those money guzzlers called slot machines, Barry Bellaire is no gambler.

He knows them inside and out. And take the advice of an expert — they're going to get you, says the Ann Arbor collector who's one of the few restorers of antique slot machines in the state.

"The old machines were greedy, with a 50-50 chance of winning," says Bellaire, manager of a sporting goods company. "It was awful."

The machines with the worst odds, he contends, are in Nevada airports. He says it's the best place to throw away that loose change in your pocket while waiting for your flight.

But many people, unfortunately, also are throwing away those famous nickel bandits of yesteryear — the Mills, Jennings, Watlings and Cailles that filled the back rooms, speakeasys and country clubs of America after Fey's "Liberty Bell" slot machine was introduced in 1895.

Most of today's antique slot machines are found at garage sales, says Bellaire. One such device was Bellaire's 1934 Pace "three-quarter Bellaire has owned 60 machines over the years. Now his collection numbers only three.

But Bellaire has found the history of slot machines almost as colorful as the persons surrounding them and the places they were found. He has spent hours talking with the last remaining oldtime slot runners in Michigan who worked territories whose success often depended on who you knew in the underworld as well as the local police department.

"They were a band of thieves," says Bellaire, a former industrial machine repairman. "They stole each other's designs and ideas. Some parts on different brands made 15 years apart are interchangeable."

But when players who didn't have any luck started drilling into the sides of the old wooden machines and inserting wires to trip the payout mechanisms, slot machine manufacturers became wily.

Slot machine fanciers' finest moments came when devising ways around the law after gambling increasingly came to be viewed as a vice and not entertainment.

The trick was to pretend that all that tugging on the arm of the machine and shoving nickels into it wasn't really gambling at all.

Bellaire's rarest machine, a 1934 Watling Treasury, has a stern disclaimer printed almost where the nickel is inserted: "No Gambling Allowed on This Machine."

The Detroit-made 1899 Caille machines, hand-carved ornate monstrosities, often contained a music box that played a tune for a mere nickel — a one-armed juke box of sorts.

The 1927 Evans Slot Vendor dispensed a mint with each nickel to get around the law and federal taxes. The mints reportedly tasted awful, but no one seemed to care.

Nessen Will Address Hope Community Hour

HOLLAND — Ron Nessen, press secretary to former President Ford, will address the Hope college community hour Thursday, Jan. 27 at 11 a.m. in Dimnent Memorial chapel here.

The Hope college community hour is a weekly period in which guest speakers are invited to campus. While intended primarily for Hope students and faculty the public is invited, a college spokesman said. Nessen, an award-winning news and television correspondent prior to becoming President Ford's press secretary, will offer reflections on his two years in the White House. Nessen was an NBC television correspondent for 12 years prior to becoming White House press secretary in September, 1974.

Calculator Used As Math 'Tool'

By LORRIE LYNCH

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — Those minimath machines called calculators are multiplying in numbers these days. But at the same time, they're dividing educators.

The little mechanical brains, which turn complex computations into simple arithmetic, are creating a quiet controversy that just doesn't add up.

They are confusing parents, who don't know whether they are a plus or a minus to their child's education. They are challenging educators, who realize they are here to stay. And in some ways, they are making life easier for the students.

Don Buckeye, an Eastern Michigan University mathematics professor, thinks calculators will become more prevalent in the classroom, and he doesn't think that's all bad.

Paul Kacanek, coordinator-evaluator of special projects for Ypsilanti schools, foresees the calculator becoming an aid to mathematics learning.

Buckeye, acting as consultant, and Kacanek, whose background is in math education, are working together to develop a mathematics program for Ypsilanti schools, and the calculator figures in their plans.

Both educators agree students must continue to learn mathematical concepts. But they think that can be achieved with a calculator within reach of any student.

If Johnny can't add, can he use the calculator? Or will he use the mechanical brain instead of his own?

On the contrary, both Kacanek and Buckey say the calculator doesn't take away from the need to learn math concepts.

"The calculator is only as accurate as the person who uses it," Buckeye says.

In other words, to use the calculator one must know how to add, subtract, multiply or divide — just as to use a typewriter to put words together, one must know how to spell.

Neither Kacanek nor Buckeye deny that the calculator makes life easier, but they believe teachers can still teach students "thinking" skills and the calculator may prove to be an inspiration.

Both Buckeye and Kacanek agree the calculator is here to stay, but that doesn't mean they are encouraging students to whiz through their math homework with the machines.

MIND-BOGGLING MATH: Lugene Campbell, 7-year-old Ypsilanti school student, ponders use of pencil or calculator as he works on his arithmetic. The little mechanical brains may become more prevalent in classrooms. (AP Wirephoto)

II-P SCHOOL PROGRAM

Filmstrip Traces Presidential Race

George Washington was elected President of the United States — unanimously — on February 4, 1789. There were no primaries, no political parties, no national conventions and very little of the hoopla we currently recognize as part of the presidential election process.

Today, the election of a president follows many months of political activity. Area students this month are examining the campaign events that led to the election and the inauguration of President Jimmy Carter, through an educational program of The Herald-Palladium.

The Herald-Palladium has provided area schools with an educational filmstrip study called "The U.S. Elects — 1976." The filmstrip study traces that year's presidential race from the events that kicked off the 1976 campaign through Election Day on Nov. 2.

The inauguration this month of America's 39th President provides the backdrop for the filmstrip's in-depth examination of these events. The filmstrip study is the third in a series of Election Year film-strip reports provided to area schools as part of The Herald-Palladium's comprehensive news program for participating area schools. The program is designed to increase students' awareness of news events; to improve their critical thinking, reading and discussion skills, and to encourage newspaper readership.

Colonial Cash Picking Up In Value Nowadays

WASHINGTON — During Revolutionary War years, paper money became worthless. But its value is picking up.

At a recent auction in New York, collectors paid $800 for a 20-shilling note printed by New Hampshire in 1775 and $300 for a $2 bill issued by Virginia in 1781.

KNOWS SLOT MACHINES: Barry Bellaire of Ann Arbor knows the one-armed bandits inside and out. The sporting goods company manager not only collects the gambling devices but restores and repairs antique slot machines as well, many which he finds rusting away at garage sales. (AP Wirephoto)

Old Slot Machines Were Sneaky

BY BILL DALTON

But when it comes to those money guzzlers called slot machines, Barry Bellaire is no gambler.

He knows them inside and out. And take the advice of an expert — they're going to get you, says the Ann Arbor collector who's one of the few restorers of antique slot machines in the state.

"The old machines were greedy, with a 50-50 chance of winning," says Bellaire, manager of a sporting goods company. "It was awful."

The machines with the worst odds, he contends, are in Nevada airports. He says it's the best place to throw away that loose change in your pocket while waiting for your flight.

But many people, unfortunately, also are throwing away those famous nickel bandits of yesteryear — the Mills, Jennings, Watlings and Cailles that filled the back rooms, speakeasys and country clubs of America after Fey's "Liberty Bell" slot machine was introduced in 1895.

Most of today's antique slot machines are found at garage sales, says Bellaire. One such device was Bellaire's 1934 Pace "three-quarter Bellaire has owned 60 machines over the years. Now his collection numbers only three.

But Bellaire has found the history of slot machines almost as colorful as the persons surrounding them and the places they were found. He has spent hours talking with the last remaining oldtime slot runners in Michigan who worked territories whose success often depended on who you knew in the underworld as well as the local police department.

"They were a band of thieves," says Bellaire, a former industrial machine repairman. "They stole each other's designs and ideas. Some parts on different brands made 15 years apart are interchangeable."

But when players who didn't have any luck started drilling into the sides of the old wooden machines and inserting wires to trip the payout mechanisms, slot machine manufacturers became wily.

Slot machine fanciers' finest moments came when devising ways around the law after gambling increasingly came to be viewed as a vice and not entertainment.

The trick was to pretend that all that tugging on the arm of the machine and shoving nickels into it wasn't really gambling at all.

Bellaire's rarest machine, a 1934 Watling Treasury, has a stern disclaimer printed almost where the nickel is inserted: "No Gambling Allowed on This Machine."

The Detroit-made 1889 Caille machines, hand-carved ornate monstrosities, often contained a music box that played a tune for a mere nickel — a one-armed juke box of sorts.

The 1927 Evans Slot Vendor dispensed a mint with each nickel to get around the law and federal taxes. The mints reportedly tasted awful, but no one seemed to care.

Calculator Used As Math 'Tool'

By LORRIE LYNCH

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — Those minimath machines called calculators are multiplying in numbers these days. But at the same time, they're dividing educators.

The little mechanical brains, which turn complex computations into simple arithmetic, are creating a quiet controversy that just doesn't add up.

They are confusing parents, who don't know whether they are a plus or a minus to their child's education. They are challenging educators, who realize they are here to stay. And in some ways, they are making life easier for the students.

Don Buckeye, an Eastern Michigan University mathematics professor, thinks calculators will become more prevalent in the classroom, and he doesn't think that's all bad.

Paul Kacanek, coordinator-evaluator of special projects for Ypsilanti schools, foresees the calculator becoming an aid to mathematics learning.

Buckeye, acting as consultant, and Kacanek, whose background is in math education, are working together to develop a mathematics program for Ypsilanti schools, and the calculator figures in their plans.

Both educators agree students must continue to learn mathematical concepts. But they think that can be achieved with a calculator within reach of any student.

If Johnny can't add, can he use the calculator? Or will he use the mechanical brain instead of his own?

On the contrary, both Kacanek and Buckey say the calculator doesn't take away from the need to learn math concepts.

"The calculator is only as accurate as the person who uses it," Buckeye says.

In other words, to use the calculator one must know how to add, subtract, multiply or divide — just as to use a typewriter to put words together, one must know how to spell.

Neither Kacanek nor Buckeye deny that the calculator makes life easier, but they believe teachers can still teach students "thinking" skills and the calculator may prove to be an inspiration.

Both Buckeye and Kacanek agree the calculator is here to stay, but that doesn't mean they are encouraging students to whiz through their math homework with the machines.

MIND-BOGGLING MATH: Lugene Campbell, 7-year-old Ypsilanti school student, ponders use of pencil or calculator as he works on his arithmetic. The little mechanical brains may become more prevalent in classrooms. (AP Wirephoto)

Q. Are we crazy or is it fare that Mary Hartman's husband, Tom, on the TV show has gained an amount of weight? — R.O., Brooklyn

A. No, Tom, played by Greg Mullavey, hasn't gained an ounce but Louise Lasser, who plays Mary, seems to be melting away. She's down to 85 pounds, which is why her husband looks so plump.

INSIDE STORY: We hear that Burt Reynolds is in a Palm Beach hospital suffering from nervous exhaustion. Now what do you suppose got old Burt so worn out?

Q: I've read Dean Martin has decided not to make any more record albums. Can this be true? — J.K., Detroit

A: Dean wants to keep recording and collecting those royalties from all his middle-aged fans but at the present has sued Warner Bros. Records for $1.5 million. He claims they have lost interest in his work and his audience and won't let him cut any new albums. He says his WB deal still calls for five more albums at $150,000 per, plus a percentage. If Dean wins his case, you'll be able to buy his records again.

Q: Did Rosalind Russell finish the autobiography she was working on before her death? — O.E., Salt Lake City

A: Working with writer Chris Chase, Rox fortunately completed her book several months before her death. From advance reports, her book is up-beat on life. Ironically, it was done during some of her sickest and most painful ordeals with arthritis and cancer.

Q: We happen to know that Jackie Onassis is only a fair skier. How does she rate as a horseback rider? — E.L., Boulder, Colo.

A: No question about it — she's a better rider than she is a skier. Jackie is an ardent and extremely able member of the tally-ho set in Bedminster, N.J. She's always spurring her mount to be up near the front of the hunt — not far behind the fox. And that's a dangerous place to be because the rider up front hits all the obstacles first.

Q: I saw Jean Peters' comeback in "The Moneychangers" on TV and I'm wondering if she had made claims on the Howard Hughes estate. — W.A., Hays, Kansas

A: When Jean was allowed to get her divorce from Hughes, a financial settlement was arranged. Like everything else connected with the mystery man, the financial details were never made public. Speculation is that the divorce deal called for at least $50,000 per year for the rest of Jean's life.

A: Working with writer Chris Chase, Rox fortunately completed her book several months before her death. From advance reports, her book is up-beat on life. Ironically, it was done during some of her sickest and most painful ordeals with arthritis and cancer.

Q: We happen to know that Jackie Onassis is only a fair skier. How does she rate as a horseback rider? — E.L., Boulder, Colo.

A: No question about it — she's a better rider than she is a skier. Jackie is an ardent and extremely able member of the tally-ho set in Bedminster, N.J. She's always spurring her mount to be up near the front of the hunt — not far behind the fox. And that's a dangerous place to be because the rider up front hits all the obstacles first.

Q: I saw Jean Peters' comeback in "The Moneychangers" on TV and I'm wondering if she had made claims on the Howard Hughes estate. — W.A., Hays, Kansas

A: When Jean was allowed to get her divorce from Hughes, a financial settlement was arranged. Like everything else connected with the mystery man, the financial details were never made public. Speculation is that the divorce deal called for at least $50,000 per year for the rest of Jean's life.

Now You Can Buy Fido Diet Dinners Of His Own

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Fido can diet right along with the other members of the family these days.

Pet food manufacturers have introduced products designed to help overweight animals slim down and stay healthy.

You could, of course, simply feed an overweight dog less. Like the diet foods for humans, the pet products are designed to overcome a lack of will power.

The first entry in the market — General Foods "Cycle" brand — isn't billed as a diet food. Instead, it concentrates on what are called the different life cycles of a dog and stresses that animals of different ages often have different nutritional needs.

A growing puppy, for example, needs twice as much protein as an adult dog. One variety of "Cycle" was aimed at inactive, adult animals.

Cycle is a canned dog food, but Advertising Age, the trade publication, reported in September that General Foods also was testing a dry variety of the same product.

Meanwhile, Ralston Purina Co. announced plans for its own diet food — "Fit & Trim" — a dry variety advertised as "lower in calories, lower in fat." Purina statistics quoted by Advertising Age show that 72 per cent of dog-owning households have animals three years and older; 41 per cent say their dogs are overweight; and 62 per cent say they have inactive dogs who get little exercise.

Americans spend almost $2 billion a year on dog food, and that doesn't count the value of table scraps.

A survey by the Pet Food Institute shows that in 1974, the industry used approximately 2.2 pounds of by-products from meat, poultry and seafood and 2.5 billion pounds of feed grains and grain by-products.

Dry dog food, which is generally the cheapest, is the biggest seller — $861 million worth in 1975 — and has increased its share of the market as consumers tried to cut food budgets.

Canned dog food accounted for about $642 million in sales in 1975, moist dog food was worth $290 billion and biscuits accounted for $82.5 million.

Veterinarians and other pet experts say deciding which type of product to feed your dog — dry, moist or canned — is a matter of human preference and the animal's taste. There is no nutritional difference.

Cornell University's Consumer Education Program even has some advice on how to make dry food appealing to dogs who are used to the canned variety.

"Mix the two together," the university suggests. "Gradually use more of the dry product and less of the canned until the dry food is fully accepted. The crunchy texture of dry food appeals for many dogs. And the dry type is easy to digest and helps clean the dogs' teeth."

The university also says that it is not necessary to give dogs mineral and vitamin supplements if you choose a food that already provides the required amount of nutrients.

"Look for the words, 'complete and balanced diet' on the package labels," the university says. "In most cases, this claim is based on recommended nutritional standards of the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council."

If you're in doubt about whether to supplement your dog's diet, or what to feed a pregnant or sick dog, ask your veterinarian.

The Food and Drug Administration requires manufacturers to list ingredients in pet food on the label in decreasing order of prominence. They do not have to list the amounts, however.

"The wholesome nutritious ingredients should appear at the top of the list," said one veterinarian. "Anything that appears after the first few ingredients is likely to be present in very small quantities."

The manufacturers do not have to put water in its proper place. The FDA had proposed that water be listed in order of prominence and set Oct. 12 as a deadline for manufacturers to comply, but it has delayed the rule until next June.

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Julius Erving is ready to bury the Boston Celtics, even though he has played against the National Basketball Association's defending champions only three times.

"The Celtics' domination seems over," the Philadelphia superstar said Sunday after the 76ers defeated Boston for the third time 91-83 before a capacity crowd of 15,000 and a regional television audience.

Although he was making his first Boston Garden appearance, the high-salaried refugee from the defunct American Basketball Association was not impressed by the Celtics' 13 NBA championship flags hanging from the rafters.

Elsewhere in the NBA Sunday, the San Antonio Spurs beat the Portland Trail Blazers 123-118, the Los Angeles Lakers defeated the Indiana Pacers 121-104, the Golden State Warriors topped the Atlanta Hawks 104-97, the New York Nets tripped the Chicago Bulls 95-88, the Phoenix Suns beat the Seattle SuperSonics 98-88, the Washington Bullets defeated the Detroit Pistons 119-108, and the Milwaukee Bucks downed the Kansas City Kings 119-111.

Erving topped Philadelphia with 19 points as the 76ers built an 18-point lead in the second period, then fought off repeated Boston challenges for their seventh consecutive victory and a sweep of a home-and-home weekend series.

Jo Jo White and Fred Saunders, filling in for injured Charlie Scott, led Boston with 18 points each.

San Antonio guard George Gervin had the kind of scoring day players dream about — 41 points on 14 of 15 shooting from the field, 13 of 14 from the free throw line.

Los Angeles posted its 16th consecutive home-court victory and 17th triumph in its last 21 games as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 25 points and reserves Earl Tatum and C.J. Kupec added career highs of 20 and 13 points, respectively.

Jamaal Wilkes scored 24 points and Phil Smith scored nine of Golden State's final 12, offsetting a brilliant effort by Atlanta's John Drew, who had a season-high 42 points and 18 rebounds despite being hampered by a bad back.

Ricky Sobers scored 11 points and Paul Westphal 10 in the fourth quarter as Phoenix broke away from the Sonics and posted its eighth straight victory. Westphal finished with a game-high 24 points.

The Nets snapped a 13-game losing streak, shooting 54 per cent from the field to 36 per cent for Chicago. The catalyst was reserve guard Bubbles Hawkins, who scored 18 points and hit all seven of his shots in the second quarter when New York outscored the Bulls 37-21. Hawkins led all scorers with 24 points.

Pete Maravich scored 38 points and reserve forward Nate Williams netted 10 in the fourth quarter as New Orleans handed the Knicks their fifth loss on the final stop of a six-game road trip. Bob McAdoo scored 36 points for New York.

Washington won its 11th game in the last 13 starts behind Elvin Hayes, who scored 30 points on 11-for-19 shooting. Phil Chenier added 23 points and Kevin Grevey, making only his second start, had a seasonhigh 18 points.

Milwaukee snapped a six-game losing streak behind Junior Bridgeman's 27 points and Fred Carter's 24. The Bucks built a 23-point lead in the second quarter, then held off a rally by the Kings behind Bill Robinzine, who scored a season-high 27 points.

UCLA Gets Even With Irish, 70-65

Johnson Hero This Time

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Marques Johnson, UCLA's classy forward, knew in the second half he was "either going to be the hero or the goat," in the Bruins' dramatic rematch with Notre Dame.

The 6-foot-7 senior blamed himself, in part, for the 10th-ranked Bruins' three-point loss to the Irish last month, and he was determined not to let it happen again in Sunday's nationally televised showdown.

"If I had asserted myself down the stretch like I did here, we might not have lost at home," he said after leading UCLA to a 70-65 victory, scoring 23 points and nearly single-handedly choking off a furious Irish rally.

Notre Dame trailed by 12 points midway through the final period but charged into the lead with three minutes to go as Duck Williams and Bill Paterno returned the momentum to the Irish.

At that point, Johnson went to work.

"Paterno played good defense, which denied me the ball," Johnson said. "But I knew I had to be more assertive. I just got the ball and shot it, and it went in."

The smooth UCLA team leader, who had 12 points at half-time, hit five of six field goal attempts in the second half, including consecutive baskets with less than two minutes remaining that put the Bruins ahead to stay at 64-63.

A three-point play by Jim Spillane and another free throw by Johnson iced the contest.

Williams led the Irish, now 8-5, with 19 points. Dave Batton added 13, all in the first half, and Paterno scored eight points, all on free throws during the second-half rally.

The victory gave UCLA, 14-2, a split in the annual two-game series with the Irish for the fourth year in a row, and Bruin Coach Gene Bartow called it "my biggest win since I've been at UCLA."

It was a game of changing momentum. Notre Dame jumped to an 8-2 lead before UCLA scored 10 straight points, six of them by Johnson.

Then the two teams traded baskets until a 10-2 burst put the Bruins ahead 32-24 late in the first half.

The Bruins opened the second period with a 10-3 burst and seemed to have the game under control until another 10-point surge brought the Irish back into contention.

"We started to slow down midway through the second half and that seemed to change things," said UCLA guard Roy Hamilton, who backed Johnson with 16 points. "They ran a trap at us at the guard position and kept us from getting the ball inside. We were free-lancing and that hurt us."

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps, recalling the long rivalry in general and the 71-70 Irish victory here three years ago that snapped UCLA's record 88-game winning string in particular, said Sunday's game "typifies the series that we've had. UCLA is a class team with class people."

Lancer Upset Plans 'Fouled' Up

St. Joe Uses Free Throws For 82-75 Victory

By JOHN VANDEN HEUVEL
Sports Editor

Lakeshore's plan to upset St. Joseph got "fouled" up Saturday night.

Coach George Gaunder's Bears took advantage of 29 Lakeshore fouls for a 19-point advantage in free throws and downed the Lancers 82-75 in non-league basketball action at the Lakeshore gym.

"I wanted that one tonight," declared Lakeshore coach Lloyd MacTavish. "At times we played as well as we can play, but there was one statistic (free throws) where the game was lost....or won."

St. Joseph meshed an excellent 28 of 40 free throws (70 per cent) while Lakeshore connected on only 9 of 24 (38 per cent).

Steve Ziebart added 13, including nine in the last quarter when St. Joe was holding off Lakeshore, and Herb Ross came off the bench to score 16.

"He came in and probably had his best ball game of the year," declared Gaunder. "He hit key free throws when we needed them."

Ross hit four of six field goals and eight of 10 free throws, including seven of eight the last half.

The victory was St. Joseph's second this season over Lakeshore and lifted the Bears' record to 5-8. St. Joe also won the first match in the neighborhood rivalry 78-56.

Toth hit seven of 11 field goal attempts and Brister five of nine as the Lancers meshed an excellent 33 of 69 overall (48 per cent). The Bears connected on 27 of 61 (44 per cent).

"I'm happy we took that one under the circumstances," continued Gaunder. "I was expecting it to be difficult, and it was a very physical game. There was not a great deal of finesse around the boards in rebounding."

The "physical" aspect of the game resulted in a total of 52 fouls, being called (three Lancer starters fouled out). Lakeshore won the rebounding battle, but not by enough to overcome St. Joe's free throw advantage.

Lakeshore posted a 44 to 35 board edge, with Mike Mason and Jager having 14 and 10, respectively. St. Joe's Wright had 10.

Gaunder noted that St. Joe gave up 14 points off Lakeshore's offensive rebounds. "That has happened all year," he declared. "That is one reason our defensive average is so pathetic."

Gaunder, along with MacTavish, also noted that Lakeshore's guards were able to penetrate with ease at times.

It was anybody's game until the last quarter. There were seven ties, 15 exchanges of the lead and never more than a seven-point difference through three periods.

St. Joe took the lead for good at 55-53 on a pair of free throws by Paul Knuth with 1:06 left in the third quarter.

The Bears went up by 10 twice in the last period for the biggest leads of the game.

Lakeshore had a chance to get back in the game after cutting the margin to five. It missed consecutive one-and-one free throw opportunities, including one when a Lancer player stepped out of the lane.

Another statistic in St. Joe's favor was turnovers. The Bears had just 14, compared to Lakeshore's 21.

St. Joseph also won the junior varsity preliminary 43-37. Jeff Curry and Carl Czirr netted 14 and 10, respectively, for 5-8 St. Joe. Lakeshore slipped to 11-3 while getting 11 from Joe Shafer, 10 from Greg Hupkins and 10 from Dave Goodwin.

Bisons' D'Amato Scores 36, But Eau Claire Wins

Eau Claire won the Red Arrow basketball game 71-67 while getting revenge for an early season 36-47 loss to the Bisons.

Coach Dave Gray's Beavers won the game while getting 25 points from Randy Grandberry, 20 from Brian Flowers and 13 from Chuck Hunter. But Gray had plenty of praise for D'Amato.

MARK D'AMATO

"He just did a super job," declared the Beaver coach, who noted that the 6-0 senior hit 14 of 22 field goals and 8 of 12 free throws.

Eau Claire led 19-11 after the first quarter and 34-31 at halftime, but New Buffalo went on top 52-51 after three quarters. D'Amato meshed a perfect eight-of-eight field goals and three-of-three free throws in the third frame.

D'Amato cooled down in the last quarter when Eau Claire came from behind for the victory. "We tried to concentrate on him a little more," noted Gray. "We put Randy Grandberry on him and held him to five points."

Gray also credited a half court press and the rebounding of Eric Newsome for pulling out the victory over the final eight minutes.

Jim Wold added 14 points to the New Buffalo cause as the Bisons slipped to 2-7 in the league and 2-10 overall. Eau Claire is now 5-4 in the conference and 6-5 on the season.

Eau Claire hit 27 of 75 field goals (36 per cent) and 17 of 23 free throws (74 per cent), including nine straight and an overall 11 of 12 by Grandberry.

"That is where we got it," declared Gray of the free throws. "We've been practicing a lot of free throws since Christmas."

New Buffalo had a two field goal edge while meshing an excellent 29 of 55 (53 per cent). The Bisons also made 9 of 17 at the line (53 per cent).

Eau Claire had a 44 to 30 rebounding edge, with Grandberry and Flowers having 14 and 12, respectively. Wold had 10 for New Buffalo.

Watson Captures Crosby Tourney

Tendency To Let Titles Escape Is Overcome

He tries to hide it, but his boyish face registers every emotion, from the dismay of the errant shot that caught the bunker and threw his victory in doubt to the total joy of his head-back shout: "Hot damn, I've won the Crosby."

For several seasons now, Tom Watson has had all the ingredients — save one — of a great, crowd-gathering golf champion. His freckles, red hair and infectious enthusiasm pull the galleries to him in growing numbers.

His obvious intelligence and honesty — at times painful honesty when he's talked with candor of how he lost — have endeared him to the media.

He calls older men "sir," is gracious to the ladies and endures with calm and courtesy the attention of over-zealous fans who approach his hotel dinner table seeking autographs or conversation.

His game shows the power of the rippling, muscular forearms. He's won $100,000 or more for three years, passing the strongest test of tour prowess. He's a consistent finisher in the top 10.

He once had the Byron Nelson in his grasp and hit a ball into the water. A couple of years ago he had a shot at the Crosby — and drove it into golf's largest [illegible], the Pacific Ocean. He twice had a shot at the U.S. Open, at Winged Foot and Medinah, and let them escape.

There have been many others.

But he overcame that tendency in his solid, front-running, record-setting, one-stroke victory over challenging Tony Jacklin of England in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

His lead dwindled to a single shot with a bogey six on the 14th. He putted a three-wood shot on the 16th, but saved par with an excellent trouble shot. He hit his second into trouble and bogeyed the 18th.

That one didn't matter, however. Jacklin, playing in front of him, had three-putted the same hole to give Tom breathing room. The bogey was good enough to win.

"With Tony and Lee Elder right there all day, it was a round that had a tremendous amount of pressure to it," the 28-year-old Stanford graduate said.

He finished with a one-under-par 71 over the crags and cliffs of the spectacularly beautiful Pebble Beach Golf Links and, blessed with gorgeous weather for four days, broke by four strokes the record in this tournament with a 14-under-par total of 273.

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Julius Erving is ready to bury the Boston Celtics, even though he has played against the National Basketball Association's defending champions only three times.

"The Celtics' domination seems over," the Philadelphia superstar said Sunday after the 76ers defeated Boston for the third time 91-83 before a capacity crowd of 15,040 and a regional television audience.

Although he was making his first Boston Garden appearance, the high-salaried refugee from the defunct American Basketball Association was not impressed by the Celtics' 13 NBA championship flags hanging from the rafters.

Elsewhere in the NBA Sunday, the San Antonio Spurs beat the Portland Trail Blazers 123-118, the Los Angeles Lakers defeated the Indiana Pacers 121-104, the Golden State Warriors topped the Atlanta Hawks 104-97, the New York Nets tripped the Chicago Bulls 95-86, the Phoenix Suns beat the Seattle SuperSonics 98-88, the Washington Bullets defeated the Detroit Pistons 119-108, and the Milwaukee Bucks downed the Kansas City Kings 119-111.

Erving topped Philadelphia with 19 points as the 76ers built an 18-point lead in the second period, then fought off repeated Boston challenges for their seventh consecutive victory and a sweep of a home-and-home weekend series.

Jo Jo White and Fred Saunders, filling in for injured Charlie Scott, led Boston with 18 points each.

San Antonio guard George Gervin had the kind of scoring day players dream about — 41 points on 14 of 15 shooting from the field, 13 of 14 from the free throw line.

Los Angeles posted its 16th consecutive home-court victory and 17th triumph in its last 21 games as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 25 points and reserves Earl Tatum and C.J. Kupec added career highs of 20 and 13 points, respectively.

Jamaal Wilkes scored 24 points and Phil Smith scored nine of Golden State's final 12, offsetting a brilliant effort by Atlanta's John Drew, who had a season-high 42 points and 18 rebounds despite being hampered by a bad back.

Ricky Sobers scored 11 points and Paul Westphal 10 in the fourth quarter as Phoenix broke away from the Sonics and posted its eighth straight victory. Westphal finished with a game-high 24 points.

The Nets snapped a 13-game losing streak, shooting 54 per cent from the field to 36 per cent for Chicago. The catalyst was reserve guard Bubbles Hawkins, who scored 18 points and hit all seven of his shots in the second quarter when New York outscored the Bulls 37-21. Hawkins led all scorers with 24 points.

Pete Maravich scored 38 points and reserve forward Nate Williams netted 10 in the fourth quarter as New Orleans handed the Knicks their fifth loss on the final stop of a six-game road trip. Bob McAdoo scored 36 points for New York.

Washington won its 11th game in the last 13 starts behind Elvin Hayes, who scored 30 points on 11-for-19 shooting. Phil Chenier added 23 points and Kevin Grevey, making only his second start, had a seasonhigh 18 points.

Milwaukee snapped a six-game losing streak behind Junior Bridgeman's 27 points and Fred Carter's 24. The Bucks built a 23-point lead in the second quarter, then held off a rally by the Kings behind Bill Robinzine, who scored a season-high 27 points.

UCLA Gets Even With Irish, 70-65

Johnson Hero This Time

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Marques Johnson, UCLA's classy forward, knew in the second half he was "either going to be the hero or the goat," in the Bruins' dramatic rematch with Notre Dame.

The 6-foot-7 senior blamed himself, in part, for the 10th-ranked Bruins' three-point loss to the Irish last month, and he was determined not to let it happen again in Sunday's nationally televised showdown.

"If I had asserted myself down the stretch like I did here, we might not have lost at home," he said after leading UCLA to a 70-65 victory, scoring 23 points and nearly single-handedly choking off a furious Irish rally.

Notre Dame trailed by 12 points midway through the final period but charged into the lead with three minutes to go as Duck Williams and Bill Paterno returned the momentum to the Irish.

At that point, Johnson went to work.

"Paterno played good defense, which denied me the ball," Johnson said. "But I knew I had to be more assertive. I just got the ball and shot it, and it went in."

The smooth UCLA team leader, who had 12 points at half-time, hit five of six field goal attempts in the second half, including consecutive baskets with less than two minutes remaining that put the Bruins ahead to stay at 64-63.

A three-point play by Jim Spillane and another free throw by Johnson iced the contest.

Williams led the Irish, now 8-5, with 19 points. Dave Batton added 13, all in the first half, and Paterno scored eight points, all on free throws during the second-half rally.

The victory gave UCLA, 14-2, a split in the annual two-game series with the Irish for the fourth year in a row, and Bruin Coach Gene Bartow called it "my biggest win since I've been at UCLA."

It was a game of changing momentum. Notre Dame jumped to an 8-2 lead before UCLA scored 10 straight points, six of them by Johnson.

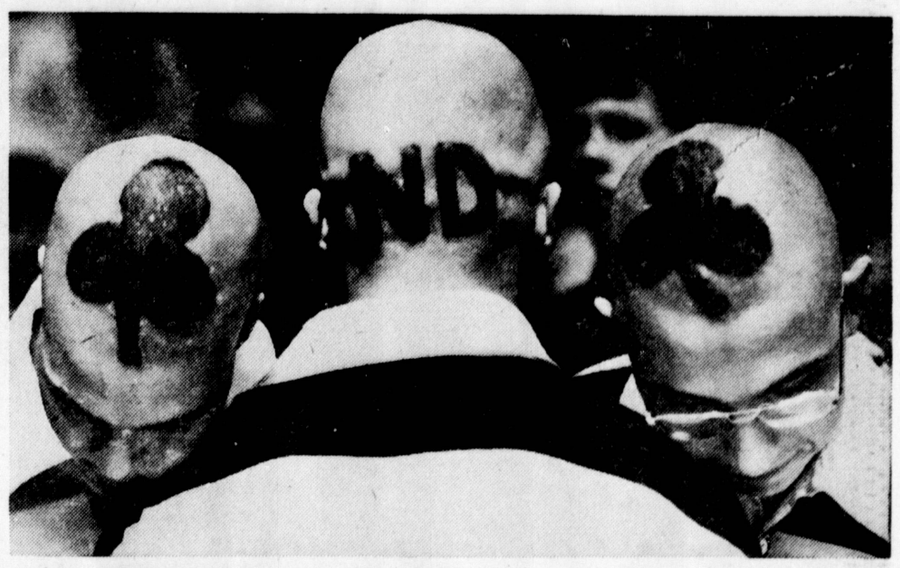

Then the two teams traded baskets until a 10-2 burst put the Bruins ahead 32-24 late in the first half.

The Bruins opened the second period with a 10-3 burst and seemed to have the game under control until another 10-point surge brought the Irish back into contention.

"We started to slow down midway through the second half and that seemed to change things," said UCLA guard Roy Hamilton, who backed Johnson with 16 points. "They ran a trap at us at the guard position and kept us from getting the ball inside. We were free-lancing and that hurt us."

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps, recalling the long rivalry in general and the 71-70 Irish victory here three years ago that snapped UCLA's record 88-game winning string in particular, said Sunday's game "typifies the series that we've had. UCLA is a class team with class people."

Lancer Upset Plans 'Fouled' Up

St. Joe Uses Free Throws For 82-75 Victory

By JOHN VANDEN HEEDE
Sports Editor

Lakeshore's plan to upset St. Joseph got "fouled" up Saturday night.

Coach George Gaunder's Bears took advantage of 29 Lakeshore fouls for a 19-point advantage in free throws and downed the Lancers 82-75 in non-league basketball action at the Lakeshore gym.

"I wanted that one tonight," declared Lakeshore coach Lloyd MacTavish. "At times we played as well as we can play, but there was one statistic (free throws) where the game was lost....or won."

St. Joseph meshed an excellent 28 of 40 free throws (70 per cent) while Lakeshore connected on only 9 of 24 (38 per cent).

Dale Wright again led the Bear attack, with his game-high 24 points marking his 15th consecutive game in double figures.

Steve Ziebart added 13, including nine in the last quarter when St. Joe was holding off Lakeshore, and Herb Ross came off the bench to score 16.

"He came in and probably had his best ball game of the year," declared Gaunder. "He hit key free throws when we needed them."

Ross hit four of six field goals and eight of 10 free throws, including seven of eight the last half.

The victory was St. Joseph's second this season over Lakeshore and lifted the Bears' record to 5-8. St. Joe also won the first match in the neighborhood rivalry 76-55.

Toth hit seven of 11 field goal attempts and Brister five of nine as the Lancers meshed an excellent 33 of 69 overall (48 per cent). The Bears connected on 27 of 61 (44 per cent).

"I'm happy we took that one under the circumstances," continued Gaunder. "I was expecting it to be difficult, and it was a very physical game. There was not a great deal of finesse around the boards in rebounding."

The "physical" aspect of the game resulted in a total of 52 fouls being called (three Lancer starters fouled out). Lakeshore won the rebounding battle, but not by enough to overcome St. Joe's free throw advantage.

Lakeshore posted a 44 to 35 board edge, with Mike Mason and Jager having 14 and 10, respectively. St. Joe's Wright had 10.

Gaunder noted that St. Joe gave up 14 points off Lakeshore's offensive rebounds. "That has happened all year," he declared. "That is one reason our defensive average is so pathetic."

Gaunder, along with MacTavish, also noted that Lakeshore's guards were able to penetrate with ease at times.

It was anybody's game until the last quarter. There were seven ties, 15 exchanges of the lead and never more than a seven-point difference through three periods.

St. Joe took the lead for good at 55-53 on a pair of free throws by Paul Knuth with 1:06 left in the third quarter.

The Bears went up by 10 twice in the last period for the biggest leads of the game.

Lakeshore had a chance to get back in the game after cutting the margin to five. It missed consecutive one-and-one free throw opportunities, including one when a Lancer player stepped out of the lane.

Another statistic in St. Joe's favor was turnovers. The Bears had just 14, compared to Lakeshore's 21.

St. Joseph also won the junior varsity preliminary 43-37. Jeff Curry and Carl Czirr netted 14 and 10, respectively, for 5-8 St. Joe. Lakeshore slipped to 11-3 while getting 11 from Joe Shafer, 10 from Greg Hopkins and 10 from Dave Goodwin.

Bisons' D'Amato Scores 36, But Eau Claire Wins

Eau Claire won the Red Arrow basketball game 71-67 while getting revenge for an early season 56-47 loss to the Bisons.

Coach Dave Gray's Beavers won the game while getting 25 points from Randy Grandberry, 20 from Brian Flowers and 13 from Chuck Hunter. But Gray had plenty of praise for D'Amato.

MARK D'AMATO

"He just did a super job," declared the Beaver coach, who noted that the 6-0 senior hit 14 of 22 field goals and 8 of 12 free throws.

Eau Claire led 19-11 after the first quarter and 34-31 at halftime, but New Buffalo went on top 52-51 after three quarters. D'Amato meshed a perfect eight-of-eight field goals and three-of-three free throws in the third frame.

D'Amato cooled down in the last quarter when Eau Claire came from behind for the victory. "We tried to concentrate on him a little more," noted Gray. "We put Randy Grandberry on him and held him to five points."

Gray also credited a half court press and the rebounding of Eric Newsome for pulling out the victory over the final eight minutes.

Jim Wold added 14 points to the New Buffalo cause as the Bisons slipped to 2-7 in the league and 2-10 overall. Eau Claire is now 5-4 in the conference and 6-5 on the season.

Eau Claire hit 27 of 75 field goals (36 per cent) and 17 of 23 free throws (74 per cent), including nine straight and an overall 11 of 12 by Grandberry.

"That is where we got it," declared Gray of the free throws. 'We've been practicing a lot of free throws since Christmas."

New Buffalo had a two field goal edge while meshing an excellent 29 of 55 (53 per cent). The Bisons also made 9 of 17 at the line (53 per cent).

Eau Claire had a 44 to 30 rebounding edge, with Grandberry and Flowers having 14 and 12, respectively. Wold had 10 for New Buffalo.

Green May Return Tonight

Hubbard Sparkles In U-M Win

He hopes to recoup some of it tonight in Columbus against Ohio State, if doctors say the Michigan basketball star can get back in the lineup.

The game will be the first for former Western Michigan coach Eldon Miller against Michigan since he took the Buckeye coaching job this season.

He could do without the presence of Green, who for the first time in his two-year career missed a game. Suffering from a strained muscle in his lower back, Green sat out the fifth-ranked Wolverines' 66-61 Big Ten triumph Saturday against Illinois.

His absence nearly made a difference. But Phil Hubbard decided to take command in the second half for Michigan. He scored a career high 29 points, 22 in the second half including 10 consecutive points to open the half and turn a 29-26 lead into a 39-26 bulge.

It was obvious the Wolverines were tired. They could be more tired tonight as they begin a three-game road trip with their fifth game in nine days.

Miller's Buckeyes have recovered well from a poor 1975-76 season and are now 7-7.

Michigan sure could use Green. He's the leading scorer with a 21-point average. He also is the top play-maker, with 55 assists and leads the squad with 29 steals.

"It's the first time I really sat out, and I don't like it too much," Green said Saturday, after his teammates raised their conference record to 6-0 and overall mark to 13-1. Illinois, which hosts Northwestern tonight, fell to 1-5 in the league and 9-9 overall.

"I'm gonna try and hurry and get myself well so I can get back," Green said. "I could have played (against Illinois) if I had to—but the way they were playing out there I might have re-sprung my back, the way they were tackling."

Illinois was given 28 personal fouls to just 11 for Michigan, which scored 20 points on free throws, while the Illini scored one. Audie Matthews led Illinois with 18 points, 14 in the second half, while Levi Cobb and Rich Adams added 16 and 11, respectively.

"We've been in foul trouble a lot," said Illinois coach Lou Henson. "We're not big, so we have to jump for rebounds. We're not that quick, so sometimes we're grabbing people."

He said Michigan was a little flat and, "when you're a great ball club, there's no way your going to get up for a team like us."

Coach Johnny Orr of the Wolverines said it was "a great victory without a guard like Rickey Green. He's the best guard in the country."

There were 15 ties or lead changes in the first half, with Michigan never ahead by more than four points and Illinois never in front by more than two.

But Hubbard's shooting led to a 14-point bulge early in the second half, and Illinois never got closer than the five-point final spread.

16-Year-Old 'Cool And Smart'

Jockey Is Boy Wonder

NEW YORK (AP) — The frail-looking youngster spread a newspaper over the top of a table and methodical tore out half a page, folding it neatly and putting it in his wallet.

One could catch only a part of the headline: "Apprentice Jockey Scores . . ."

The kid looked up only a moment, smiled faintly and went over to his locker to get a piece of gum.

Steve Cauthen, racing's new Boy Wonder, has become the brunt of a lot of kidding and an inordinate amount of attention around New York's frozen track these days. But he can take it.

"Sixteen year old and looks like he's going on 16," remarked Harold Carr, a weatherbeaten valet who once ran a car through a house and had to buy it.

"More like 16 going on 25," corrected Dick Meade, a slender gray-haired man who is currently serving as Cauthen's Man Friday. "Smart and cool — got a mind like a steel trap."

Hard boots, lacking in sentiment and not easily impressed, are calling the blacksmith's son from Kentucky potentially the finest rider to come along since Bill Shoemaker began his record skein of more than 7,000 victories 28 years ago.

Cauthen hit New York's big time like an exploding land mind in December, knocking off 12 winners in a 17-race stretch and capturing the $55,050 Gallant Fox Handicap with a 19-1 shot named Crompton.

He was immediately recognized by his more experienced peers as no flash in the pan. Accolades came from such proven riders as Ron Turcott, Angel Cordero and Jorge Velasquez.

"He sits so snug you think the horse has lost his rider." "He has one of those rare faculties for riding — he waits on the horse." He's a natural."

Turcotte, who rode Secretariat to the Triple Crown, paid the youngster an ultimate compliment after one of his victories. "What are you trying to do, Steve," he said, "Trying to break up racing?"

Steve just smiled. He doesn't talk much. When he does, he uses the fewest words possible. Often he answers questions in monosyllables.

Proving that he was more than a one-shot whiz, Cauthen carried his phenomenal streak into the new year, scoring on five mounts a week ago Saturday to raise his score to 23 in a week. By the middle of last week, he had raised his total to 35 and was still going.

This brought an avalanche pouring down on him from all directions. The news magazines grabbed him for cover stories. Newspapers sent in feature writers in clusters. Aqueduct was inundated with klieg lights and whirring cameras from the major networks.

"It's a terrible strain on the kid," said Lenny Goodman, the boy's agent. "People are bugging him from morning 'til night. He wants to be nice. But mainly he wants to be left alone so he can ride horses."

Goodman, who has handled such outstanding saddlesmiths as Bill Hartack, Bobby Ussery and Braulio Baeza, took over the apprentice after watching him ride at Saratoga last fall.

"I could tell by the way he sat on a horse that he had a rare gift," the agent said. "He could be one of the greats of all-time. He is cool and he is smart. He thinks."

Goodman was concerned at first about bringing the fuzz-faced teenager to New York but finally got the youngster a room with the family of a trainer, Chuck Taliaferro, living near Belmont Park.

Cauthen grew up in Walton, Ky., about 20 miles from Cincinnati. His father, Ronald (Tex) Cauthen, is a blacksmith. His mother trains horses.

Steve was asked when was the first time he got on a horse.

"When I was two," he said "A pony."

He started riding at the age of 12 and knew immediately that he wanted to be a jockey. He quit high school in his second year and began riding at the smaller tracks in Ohio. Racing became an obsession with him.

Asked who had the greatest influence on him, Cauthen replied: "My dad."

The elder Cauthen borrowed race films and projectors and showed them to his son by the hours, pointing out techniques and riding mistakes. Steve read every jockey book he could get his hands on. Before he came to New York, he knew more about Shoemaker, Eddie Arcaro and Bill Hartack than they probably knew about themselves.

Who was his idol?

"If anybody, maybe Shoemaker," he replies.

Young Cauthen is a mere slip of a boy — 5 feet, 1 inch tall, 95 pounds. He has legs that look like bowed match sticks and small, pointed features below short, slicked down hair.

Yet, as he goes about his daily chores — up at 6 in the morning, to the race track, quick changes between races, back home to study on correspondence courses until 9 — he displays a rare maturity.

"You know, Shoemaker won races worth more than $1 million as an apprentice," someone remarked to him.

"I already beat that," Cauthen said stonily. "I'm over $1.2 million." He has won 275 races.

"Amazing kid — great poise," says Meade. "Between races, he has about 3½ minutes to clean up. He watches TV of the last race, reads the racing form and answers questions without batting an eye."

"Bother him? Hell," said Meade, "if he'd broke it off, the kid would never have known it. He's all steel — lives, eats, sleeps horses."

Broncos Leading In MAC

Miami, Northern Illinois Close Second

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Western Michigan regained first place in the Mid-American Conference basketball standings by beating Central Michigan Saturday, but Miami and Northern Illinois stayed hot on the Broncos' heels.

"Nobody is tops because the league is so well balanced," Miami Coach Darrell Hedric observed after his Redskins downed Ohio University, 84-78.

Western Michigan's comefrom-behind 71-65 triumph over Central Michigan vaulted the Broncos back into the league lead with a 5-1 record. A half game back with 4-1 marks are Miami and Northern Illinois, a 54-51 victor over Toledo Saturday. Central dropped from first to a fourth-place tie with Bowling Green at 3-1.

Five of the 10 members have one loss and are within one game of each other before a round of games Wednesday night. The features will send Miami to Bowling Green and Northern Illinois to Central Michigan.

Western Michigan trailed the Chippewas 37-34 at halftime but opened the second period with nine straight points to move ahead for good. Central later closed to within one point but Western switched to a zone defense and forged ahead with six straight.

"We switched defense because we wanted them to go to a different attack," Broncos Coach Dick Shiltz said. Central was having success on its inside play.

Miami was led by Chuck Goodyear with a season-high 27 points in defeating a stubborn Ohio University squad.

"Goodyear has been his old self the last four games," said Hedric of the 6-foot-5 forward who this season had been averaging well below his 18-points-per-game clip last year.

Matt Hicks' two foul shots with two minutes to play put Northern Illinois ahead to stay. He had 17 points while Ted Williams had 16 for the Rockets, an expected contender now trouble with a 2-3 start.

Harris sank 16 of 21 floor shots and three-of-three at the foul line for Bowling Green, which shot 56 per cent. Robert Sims had 15 for the Cardinals, 2-4.

Eastern Michigan, dropping its seventh straight in the league, blew a 26-19 lead at Kent State (2-3). James Collins paced the Flashes with 23 points. Brian Schubert hit 22 for the Hurons.

Coach Optimistic After MSU Loss

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan State lost Saturday's Big Ten basketball battle with Purdue, but Spartan Coach Jud Heathcote is optimistic nevertheless.

"We're coming together finally; we're playing like a team with intensity," Heathcote said after the 76-70 loss to the Boilermakers. "It's team basketball — we've made progress, but we've a long way to go."

Heathcote said his squad has "something to look forward to in the future."

But he probably wasn't thinking of this week. The Spartans visit Minnesota tonight, head for Northwestern Thursday and drop in on the Wisconsin Badgers Saturday.

Michigan State fought to the bitter end against Purdue Saturday. MSU trailed 72-70 when substitute guard Jerry Sichting hit a driving layup and converted a one-and-one situation in the final seconds to seal Purdue's victory.

Purdue Coach Fred Schaus was quick to credit Michigan State.

"They have a lot of quickness and really come to the ball," Schaus said. "I like (Edgar) Wilson. He's not spectacular, just solid. He doesn't take bad shots.

"You know Keiser and (Bob) Chapman will hurt you because they're just fine players," Schaus added. "But the guy who almost beat us was Donnelly. He had a number of steals and played extremely well for a freshman."

Green May Return Tonight

Hubbard Sparkles In U-M Win

He hopes to recoup some of it tonight in Columbus against Ohio State, if doctors say the Michigan basketball star can get back in the lineup.

The game will be the first for former Western Michigan coach Eldon Miller against Michigan since he took the Buckeye coaching job this season.

He could do without the presence of Green, who for the first time in his two-year career missed a game. Suffering from a strained muscle in his lower back, Green sat out the fifth-ranked Wolverines' 66-61 Big Ten triumph Saturday against Illinois.

His absence nearly made a difference. But Phil Hubbard decided to take commnd in the second half for Michigan. He scored a career high 29 points, 22 in the second half including 10 consecutive points to open the half and turn a 29-26 lead into a 39-26 bulge.

It was obvious the Wolverines were tired. They could be more tired tonight as they begin a three-game road trip with their fifth game in nine days.

Miller's Buckeyes have recovered well from a poor 1975-76 season and are now 7-7.

Michigan sure could use Green. He's the leading scorer with a 21-point average. He also is the top play-maker, with 55 assists and leads the squad with 29 steals.

"It's the first time I really sat out, and I don't like it too much," Green said Saturday, after his teammates raised their conference record to 6-0 and overall mark to 13-1. Illinois, which hosts Northwestern tonight, fell to 1-5 in the league and 9-9 overall.

"I'm gonna try and hurry and get myself well so I can get back," Green said. "I could have played (against Illinois) if I had to—but the way they were playing out there I might have re-sprung my back, the way they were tackling."

Illinois was given 28 personal fouls to just 11 for Michigan, which scored 20 points on free throws, while the Illini scored one. Audie Matthews led Illinois with 18 points, 14 in the second half, while Levi Cobb and Rich Adams added 16 and 11, respectively.

"We've been in foul trouble a lot," said Illinois coach Lou Henson. "We're not big, so we have to jump for rebounds. We're not that quick, so sometimes we're grabbing people."

He said Michigan was a little flat and, "when you're a great ball club, there's no way your going to get up for a team like us."

Coach Johnny Orr of the Wolverines said it was "a great victory without a guard like Rickey Green. He's the best guard in the country."

There were 15 ties or lead changes in the first half, with Michigan never ahead by more than four points and Illinois never in front by more than two.

But Hubbard's shooting led to a 14-point bulge early in the second half, and Illinois never got closer than the five-point final spread.

YOUNG SENSATION MEETS SHOEMAKER: Steve Cauthen (right), the 16-year-old riding sensation, talks with veteran Bill Shoemaker in the jockeys' room at Santa Anita. Sunday. (AP Wirephoto)

16-Year-Old 'Cool And Smart'

Jockey Is Boy Wonder

NEW YORK (AP) — The frail-looking youngster spread a newspaper over the top of a table and methodical tore out half a page, folding it neatly and putting it in his wallet.

One could catch only a part of the headline: "Apprentice Jockey Scores . . ."

The kid looked up only a moment, smiled faintly and went over to his locker to get a piece of gum.

Steve Cauthen, racing's new Boy Wonder, has become the brunt of a lot of kidding and an inordinate amount of attention around New York's frozen track these days. But he can take it.

"Sixteen year old and looks like he's going on 10," remarked Harold Carr, a weatherbeaten valet who once ran a car through a house and had to buy it.

"More like 16 going on 25," corrected Dick Meade, a slender gray-haired man who is currently serving as Cauthen's Man Friday. "Smart and cool — got a mind like a steel trap."

Hard boots, lacking in sentiment and not easily impressed, are calling the blacksmith's son from Kentucky potentially the finest rider to come along since Bill Shoemaker began his record skein of more than 7,000 victories 28 years ago.

Cauthen hit New York's big time like an exploding land mind in December, knocking off 12 winners in a 17-race stretch and capturing the $55,050 Gallant Fox Handicap with a 19-1 shot named Frampton.

He was immediately recognized by his more experienced peers as no flash in the pan. Accolades came from such proven riders as Ron Turcott, Angel Cordero and Jorge Velasquez.

"He sits so snug you think the horse has lost his rider." "He has one of those rare faculties for riding — he waits on the horse." He's a natural."

Turcotte, who rode Secretariat to the Triple Crown, paid the youngster an ultimate compliment after one of his victories. "What are you trying to do, Steve," he said, "Trying to break up racing?"

Steve just smiled. He doesn't talk much. When he does, he uses the fewest words possible. Often he answers questions in monosyllables.

"If anybody, maybe Shemaker," he replies.

Young Cauthen is a mere slip of a boy — 5 feet, 1 inch tall, 95 pounds. He has legs that look like bowed match sticks and small, pointed features below short, slicked down hair.

Harris sank 16 of 21 floor shots and three-of-three at the foul line for Bowling Green, which shot 56 per cent. Robert Sims had 15 for the Cardinals, 2-4.

Eastern Michigan, dropping its seventh straight in the league, blew a 26-19 lead at Kent State (2-3). James Collins paced the Flashes with 23 points. Brian Schubert hit 22 for the Hurons.

Bees Beat Indians, Defense Is Tough

Best Effort In 111 Games

HARTFORD — Bridgman's big horses proved to be too much for Hartford to handle here Saturday night.

The Indians stayed with the Bees for the first half, but Bridgman pulled away in the second half to a 60-37 Red Arrow conference victory.

"I was real pleased with the kid's rebounding and defense in the first half," commented Indians' head coach Dick Pfeifer. "They got inside and started hitting from outside in the second and that was the key."

Howie Mutz led undefeated Bees, tied for second place on the Class D Associated Press poll, with 15 points. Bob Linke added 14 and Tom Meredith came through with 10.

Ken Lowe scored 15 points for the Indians, now 4-5 in the league and 5-7 overall, and was their only double figures scorer.

Hartford was actually lucky to get away with it's scalp after this weekend. The schedule makers outdid themselves when they set the Indians against the state's No. 12 ranked Class C team Friday (Watervliet) and then against the Bees, now 12-0 overall and 9-0 in the league, 24 hours later.

Lowe put the weekend in prespective best for Hartford by telling his coach after the game...."now we start playing some human beings again."

The contest was tied at 12-apiece after the first quarter, but the Bees took a 26-18 lead at the half, even though Linke and Wolf Wolf had three fouls.

Bridgman went out to a 42-24 lead after three quarters when the Bees outscored Hartford 16-6.

"In the third quarter we were only getting one shot and they played volleyball with it," Pfeifer said.

"I thought we did a super job on defense for the second game in a row," he added.

Bridgman hit 23 of 75 floor shots (30.7 per cent) while Hartford made 17 of 66 tries (25.8). The Bees also held a 47-23 rebound advantage.

The 37 points given up by the Bees was their best defensive effort since Jan. 21, 1972, when they beat Eau Claire 36-35. That was 111 games ago.

Prep Game Won 2-1!

CRANDON, Wis. —(AP)— Florence edged Crandon, 2-1, Friday night in a Wisconsin high school basketball game that included just seven field goal attempts and, except for the outcome, a very successful delay offense by Crandon.

Crandon broke to a 1-0 lead on a first-quarter free throw by Ben Samz, but Florence took the ball out of bounds and raced downcourt for the winning basket by Nick Baumgart.

Crandon missed all four of its basket attempts, while Florence made one of three. Crandon won the fourth-quarter tip, then held onto the ball until an unsuccessful attempt at the winning basket with four seconds left.

"A game like this sure shoots the heck out of our offensive average, but I guess it helps our defensive average," said Florence coach Stan Jesky.

No. 1 Class C Team Posts 86-65 Win

FENNVILLE — Fennville went up against Detroit St. Andrews, the state's No. 1 ranked Class C team, here Saturday night and made a game of it through three quarters.

St. Andrews, now 12-0, got 28 points in the last quarter for an 86-65 triumph in the non-league basketball encounter.

"They are a very disciplined and well coached team," said Fennville coach Larry Morse. "We didn't play too badly. We just didn't stay with them on the boards. They were too big for us."

Duane Glenn of St. Andrews led all scorers with 21 points, and Morse called him an "all-state candidate I'm sure. He can do what he wants to do."

John Bellzak added 13 points to the Detroit school's cause while Ken Przydzial and Rich Macek had 12 and 10, respectively.

Fennville got 18 from Kurt Bale and 13 from Terry Morse while slipping to 5-8.

Morse thought his team's chances for a possible upset were hurt in the third quarter when Schut suffered an ankle injury and had to leave the game. "He gave us a little punch in there," he explained.

Morse also used all of his players in the last quarter when St. Andrews was building up its large final margin.

Fennville hit on 26 of 60 field goals (43 per cent) and 13 of 20 free throws (65 per cent), pulled down 24 rebounds and made 16 turnovers. St. Andrews meshed 18 of 29 at the lines (62 per cent).

St. Andrew hit an excellent 34 of 62 from the floor for 55 per cent, pulled down 46 rebounds and turned the ball over 16 times.

Same Old Story.....Rocks Rip Lakers

BY PAUL MORGAN
Staff Sports Writer

It's getting to be an old, broken record for Lake Michigan Catholic's boys basketbal team — poor shooting, getting beat on the boards, crucial turnovers, etc.

Berrien Springs had four men in double figures as the Shamrocks downed the Lakers 75-58 in a Red Arrow league game at Catholic Saturday night.

Terry Hosbein did what's becoming expected of him for Berrien Springs. The senior forward hit 11 of 16 field goal tries and scored 22 points. "He's just been a stead Eddie for us all season," commented Shamrocks' head coach Connie Stover.

Tim Sunday added 16 points, Brian Evans had 13 and Jack Lewis 12 as the Shamrocks move up to a 5-4 league record and are 6-8 overall.

The Lakers, now 0-9 in the Red Arrow and 1-14 overall, had only Clancy Rose get into double figures, netting 11 points. Mike Masini and Mike McCrone each scored nine.

As in many games this season, the Lakers were their own worst enemy. They managed to hit just 22 of 77 shots from the field (28.6 per cent) and 14 of 31 from the free throw line (45.2).

On the other hand, Berrien Springs was hotter than fire. The Shamrocks hit over 50 per cent from the floor in three of the four quarters and ended up making 33 of 66 shots (50.0). From the charity stripe, they were nine of 16 (56.3).

The thing which didn't please Stover too much was the 29 turnovers his team committed, 26 of them coming in the last three quarters.

"We had a hard game against Bridgman Friday night and we weren't sharp tonight," he stated.

Lewis helped the Shamrocks gain a 58-50 rebounding edge as he pulled down 15 caroms and played most of the second half with four fouls on him. Stover pulled his center when he got his fourth violation, but put him back in a few minutes later because the Lakers were starting to get the boards.

"He ended up playing with four fouls on him the entire second half in the Christmas tourney game against Catholic, too," Stover commented.

Hosbein came away with eight rebounds while Sunday had seven and guards Tony Sammons and Evans each had six.

Sophomore Rose did a yeoman's job underneath, battling the taller and bigger Lewis. He led Catholic's rebounders with 14, six of them coming in the first quarter. Junior Masini pulled down nine boards and sophomore Andy Rodez, playing in just his second varsity game, came away with eight.

Catholic's coach Al Nixon was generally pleased with his team's play. "I was kind of impressed with the play of the kids compared to Friday night," he said. "I thought they executed very well and hustled the whole game."

But again, it was the missed shots which hurt. "The free throws and missed layups are the things that make the difference between a winning and losing season," he moaned.

The Lakers went out to an 11-6 lead in the middle of the first quarter but Berrien Springs scored the next 11 points to give the Shamrocks a 17-11 lead with 7:49 left in the first half. Catholic actually went four and a half minutes with out scoring a point.

The Lakers could have drawn closer to the Shamrocks in the second stanza, but they missed the front end of four bonus situations and hit on just two of eight tries.

Berrien Springs held a 33-25 halftime lead and immediately stretched that to 39-25 with 6:31 left in the third quarter.

"I thought that was the key of the game," Nixon said. "They got two quick baskets and had the ball back in the first 20 seconds of the second half."

In the first minute and a half of the last 16 minutes, Catholic brought the ball downcourt four times, but managed to get just one shot off.

At the end of the third quarter, Berrien held a 51-39 lead.

Besides losing the game, Catholic may have lost the services of guard Tony Wallace for a week or so. He reinjured an ankle hurt in practice two weeks ago.

The Lakers did win the junior varsity game 85-56 with Bryan Brown netting 25 for the winners, now 8-6 on the season. Brad Layman of the Shamrocks led all scorers with 26 points.

Defensive Switch Saves Watervliet From Upset

GALIEN — A change in defense by Watervliet prevented the Panthers from being upset Saturday night.

Watervliet switched to a half-court man-to-man defense and held Galien to just four points in the last four minutes of the game and pulled out a 51-46 Red Arrow conference win here in boys basketball.

At the end of the third quarter, Otto Parson and Brad Marshall each scored buckets to give the Gaels a 35-33 lead. Mike Heckathorn's crew then scored the first two buckets of the fourth quarter to go up by six points.

But with six minutes left, coach Gene Bednarowski changed into the half-court defense. "That got us out of doing anything team-wise," reported Heckathorn. "We were doing a lot of one-on-one stuff."

The Panthers, now 8-1 in the league and 11-1 overall, pulled into the lead at 43-42 and were never headed.

"The game just got out of control for us in the last few minutes," Heckathorn moaned. "We had played excellent ball up until then."

Matt Koziel came through for the Gaels, who slip to 4-5 in the Red Arrow and 4-9 overall, with 18 points. Marshall was the only other Gael in double figures, netting 13.

What pleased Heckathorn about Koziel's performance was his shooting. The forward hit nine of 15 after making 11 of 17 floor shots against New Buffalo Friday night.

"He's thinking offense more now," Heckathorn stated. "He took the shot when he had to.

"We also got some good defensive boards from Rick Kuntz, but offensively he hasn't been able to get the ball inside. They shut him off pretty well. He didn't score any points after the first quarter."

Tom Hutchinson led the 12th ranked Panthers with 14 points while Chuck Brock added 10. Pat Curtis only had eight points, "but he hit three-straight over our zone in the second half and that hurt us," Heckathorn said.

Galien canned 21 of 51 field goal attempts (41.2 per cent) and only four of 15 from the charity stripe (26.7). Watervliet made 23 of 66 floor shots (33.8) and just five of 13 free throws (38.5).

The Lakers, now 0-9 in the Red Arrow and 1-14 overall, had only Clancy Rose get into double figures, netting 11 points. Mike Masini and Mike McCrone each scored nine.

As in many games this season, the Lakers were their own worst enemy. They managed to hit just 22 of 77 shots from the field (28.6 per cent) and 14 of 31 from the free throw line (45.2).

On the other hand, Berrien Springs was hotter than fire. The Shamrocks hit over 50 per cent from the floor in three of the four quarters and ended up making 33 of 66 shots (50.0). From the charity stripe, they were nine of 16 (56.3).

The thing which didn't please Stover too much was the 29 turnovers his team committed, 26 of them coming in the last three quarters.

"We had a hard game against Bridgman Friday night and we weren't sharp tonight," he stated.

Lewis helped the Shamrocks gain a 58-50 rebounding edge as he pulled down 15 caroms and played most of the second half with four fouls on him. Stover pulled his center when he got his fourth violation, but put him back in a few minutes later because the Lakers were starting to get the boards.

"He ended up playing with four fouls on him the entire second half in the Christmas tourney game against Catholic, too," Stover commented.

Hosbein came away with eight rebounds while Sunday had seven and guards Tony Sammons and Evans each had six.

Sophomore Rose did a yeoman's job underneath, battling the taller and bigger Lewis. He led Catholic's rebounders with 14, six of them coming in the first quarter. Junior Masini pulled down nine boards and sophomore Andy Rodez, playing in just his second varsity game, came away with eight.

Catholic's coach Al Nixon was generally pleased with his team's play. "I was kind of impressed with the play of the kids compared to Friday night," he said. "I thought they executed very well and hustled the whole game."

But again, it was the missed shots which hurt "The free throws and missed layups are the things that make the difference between a winning and losing season," he moaned.

The Lakers went out to an 11-6 lead in the middle of the first quarter but Berrien Springs scored the next 11 points to give the Shamrocks a 17-11 lead with 7:49 left in the first half. Catholic actually went four and a half minutes with out scoring a point.

The Lakers could have drawn closer to the Shamrocks in the second stanza, but they missed the front end of four bonus situations and hit on just two of eight tries.

Berrien Springs held a 33-25 halftime lead and immediately stretched that to 39-25 with 6:31 left in the third quarter.

"I thought that was the key of the game," Nixon said. "They got two quick baskets and had the ball back in the first 20 seconds of the second half."

In the first minute and a half of the last 16 minutes, Catholic brought the ball downcourt four times, but managed to get just one shot off.

At the end of the third quarter, Berrien held a 51-39 lead.

Besides losing the game, Catholic may have lost the services of guard Tony Wallace for a week or so. He reinjured an ankle hurt in practice two weeks ago.

The Lakers did win the junior varsity game 85-56 with Bryan Brown netting 25 for the winners, now 8-6 on the season. Brad Layman of the Shamrocks led all scorers with 26 points.

Defensive Switch Saves Watervliet From Upset

GALIEN — A change in defense by Watervliet prevented the Panthers from being upset Saturday night.

Watervliet switched to a half-court man-to-man defense and held Galien to just four points in the last four minutes of the game and pulled out a 51-46 Red Arrow conference win here in boys basketball.

At the end of the third quarter, Otto Parson and Brad Marshall each scored buckets to give the Gaels a 35-33 lead. Mike Heckathorn's crew then scored the first two buckets of the fourth quarter to go up by six points.

But with six minutes left, coach Gene Bednarowski changed into the half-court defense. "That got us out of doing anything team-wise," reported Heckathorn. "We were doing a lot of one-on-one stuff."

The Panthers, now 8-1 in the league and 11-1 overall, pulled into the lead at 43-42 and were never headed.

"The game just got out of control for us in the last few minutes," Heckathorn moaned. "We had played excellent ball up until then."

Matt Koziel came through for the Gaels, who slip to 4-5 in the Red Arrow and 4-9 overall, with 18 points. Marshall was the only other Gael in double figures, netting 13.

What pleased Heckathorn about Koziel's performance was his shooting. The forward hit nine of 15 after making 11 of 17 floor shots against New Buffalo Friday night.

"He's thinking offense more now," Heckathorn stated. "He took the shot when he had to.

"We also got some good defensive boards from Rick Kuntz, but offensively he hasn't been able to get the ball inside. They shut him off pretty well. He didn't score any points after the first quarter."

Tom Hutchinson led the 12th ranked Panthers with 14 points while Chuck Brock added 10. Pat Curtis only had eight points, "but he hit three-straight over our zone in the second half and that hurt us," Heckathorn said.

Galien canned 21 of 51 field goal attempts (41.2 per cent) and only four of 15 from the charity stripe (26.7). Watervliet made 23 of 68 floor shots (33.8) and just five of 13 free throws (38.5).

The Panthers held a 36-34 rebounding edge, according to Galien's charts. Hutchinson had 11 for the winners and Kuntz 10 for the Gaels.

Watervliet won the junior varsity game 68-58.

Balanced Scoring Keys SMC Victory

LMC Tops Jackson To Stay In First

Lake Michigan College moved into sole possession of first place in the Western Collegiate Conference with a 90-82 victory over Jackson Community College Saturday night in the Napier Gym.

"We were a well-disciplined team Saturday night," beamed head coach Lou Harvey. "This was the best game we've played all year."

Freddie Walker led the Indians, now 12-8 on the season and 7-0 in the league, with 22 points. Greg Cole and Jerry McClinton each added 12 and Warren Harrison netted 10.

Brian Jurasek scored 22 for Jackson, now 6-1 in the league, while Len Williams notched 18 and Brian Brannick and Carl Maniscalco each added 10 points.

Lake Michigan College won the game from the free throw line as it netted an amazing 30 of 34 attempts (88.2 per cent). It was a foul-plagued game for the losers, who saw all five starters foul out.

Walker had 10 rebounds and Dwayne Wright eight as LMC pulled down 37 caroms.

Jackson got hot from the field in the first half and held a slim 41-39 margin at the half. LMC didn't take the lead until five minutes were left in the contest.

Walker then took an alley-oop pass, scored and was fouled. He converted on the three-point play and LMC was on top 71-70.

Jackson then turned the ball over and LMC went into its four-corner offense and Jackson had to foul to get the ball back.

Harvey felt a big key for his club was LMC's defense against Len Williams, a star prep player from Chicago who had been averaging way over 18 points per game.

"We started off in a trap defense against them instead of a man-to-man and they couldn't take the pressure," Harvey commented about his defense.

On offense, it was Walker who picked apart the inside of Jackson's defense. "He was hitting the 10-15 foot jump shots inside," Harvey said. "To me, Freddie is the best player in the conference.

Capitals Score Four Goals In 3:18, Defeat Blues

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

There are 60 minutes to a National Hockey League game. Once in a while, however, it takes just a few of those minutes to seal a victory.

The Washington Capitals proved that Sunday, scoring four goals in the final 3 minutes, 18 seconds and beating the St. Louis Blues 6-3.

"It did look like it was a planned attack to lull them to sleep for the first 55 minutes and then catch them while they were off guard in the last five minutes," said Capitals' Coach Tom McVie after his team's remarkable comeback. "There were a lot of guys out there who didn't do anything until the last five minutes of the game."

One player was rookie Bill Riley, who tied the score 3-3 at 16:42. Hartland Monahan then scored the game-winner at 18:52. That goal was quickly followed by Ace Bailey's tally at 19:24 and Gerry Meehan's score at 19:35.

In other NHL action, Cleveland surprised Buffalo 3-0, Vancouver blitzed the New York Rangers 6-2, Toronto topped Minnesota 5-2, Detroit held Montreal to a 2-2 deadlock, Boston blanked Atlanta 3-0, Philadelphia and Chicago skated to a 2-2 tie, and the New York Islanders overwhelmed Colorado 7-1.

Goaltender Gary Edwards, starting his first game for Cleveland since being acquired from Los Angeles two days ago, blanked Buffalo for his first shutout and first victory of the season. It was the Barons' — previously the California Golden Seals — first victory in Buffalo since Nov. 18, 1973. It was Buffalo's first shutout loss at home since Dec. 7, 1975, and also the Sabres' first loss to an Adams Division rival after six victories.

The Rangers showed up 55 minutes late for their game against the Canucks because of fog conditions at the Vancouver airport. Their offense did not show up until the third period, by which time the Canucks had grabbed a 4-0 lead.

Third period goals by Errol Thompson and Ian Turnbull powered Toronto to its victory over Minnesota.

The Red Wings had to be happy to leave Montreal with a tie against the powerful Canadiens, even though Detroit led with less than six minutes remaining in the game.

Montreal's Yvon Cournoyer tied the score with a power play goal at 14:20 of the third period.

Jimmy Watson's 45-foot slap shot slipped through a maze of bodies and into the net, giving the Flyers their tie with Chicago.

Bryan Trottier had a goal and three assists and linemates Ed Westfall and Garry Howatt each chipped in one goal and two assists as the Islanders increased their league-leading road record to 15-5-4. They also moved into a tie with the Flyers for the Patrick Division lead.

Criticism Doesn't Bother Tarkenton

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

But it's a tough hide, and the man who has passed the most and farthest of any quarterback in the history of the National Football League insists he doesn't feel a thing.

"Criticism doesn't bother me," the 36-year-old field general of the Minnesota Vikings said over the weekend. "Most criticism comes from people who don't know what they are talking about.

"I don't read sports sections in the off-season. I am a businessman. I am so totally out of football now I couldn't tell you who is where or when. I'll leave that to people in the taverns.

"I don't need to answer anybody."

The boyish-faced Georgian had no sooner reactivated the old cry of "He can't win the big one" by failing for the third time to engineer a Super Bowl victory than he stepped on another land mine by declining to play in the Pro Bowl.

Tarkenton's contemporaries weren't particularly happy, insisting that he owed it to the game to show up at the Pro Bowl, a sort of consolation which raises money for the players' pension fund.

Tarkenton can shrug off the Super Bowl disaster and his detractors as of no earth-shaking consequence. But there are deeper implications to the post-season drama.

Statistically, Tarkenton is pro football's No. 1 quarterback — King of the Hill, most pass attempts, most completions, most yardage, most everything. Yet he was more of a technician than an inspirational leader in the title shootout — tentative, at times frantic as the Oakland Raiders crushed the Vikings 32-14.

Tarkenton must have felt some humiliation although the defeat had to be shared by all the Vikings. If ever there was a chance for a guy to show the true temper of his mettle, it came afterward.

It's the code of the game — in sports as in life. Knocked down, get up and keep swinging. Fall off a horse or wreck a bike, arise immediately and remount. Don't hide. Snap back.

It may have been inexcusable for Stabler, the winner, and other healthy men to shun the Pro Bowl. For Tarkenton, the shattered Super Bowl loser, it was unthinkable. He should have shown up — even if on crutches. He could have thrown just one pass. Coach Chuck Knox would have insulated him from danger.

There are people in sports who seem to rise to "the big moment." Chris Evert says she wins in tennis because she is tougher on crucial points. Muhammad Ali may be a buffoon at times but he draws upon some hidden reservoir when faced with a tough foe.

Tarkenton, to crown his greatness, must prove he has fire as well as disdain and disability.

Wisconsin Widens WCHA Lead

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wisconsin continued to build its lead in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association (WCHA) with weekend victories over Colorado College at Colorado Springs.

The Badgers have 32 points for a six-point lead over second-place Notre Dame in the standings. The Irish won two from Michigan, which dropped from second to third.

The Minnesota Gophers swept their series at Michigan State, Minnesota-Duluth won two games from North Dakota and Michigan Tech split its series at Denver.

In Saturday night's games, Wisconsin beat Colorado College 4-1, Notre Dame dropped Michigan 7-3, Minnesota edged Michigan State 3-2 in overtime, Duluth upset North Dakota 7-3 and Michigan Tech defeated Denver 6-4.

Wisconsin is now 16-4 in the WCHA, while Colorado College fell to 8-13-1.

Paul Clarke scored Notre Dame's first two goals against Michigan, then the Irish blew the game open with four second-period tallies to improve their WCHA record to 13-7. Michigan fell into third place at 12-8.

Minnesota improved its WCHA position to sixth with a 9-9-2 record. Michigan State is ninth at 7-14-1.

Freshman Don Hedlund scored two goals and added two assists as Duluth overcame North Dakota. Mark Pavelich also had two goals and Dan Lempe had four assists for Duluth. Mark Taylor led North Dakota with two goals.

Duluth remains in the league cellar at 4-14-2, while North Dakota is fourth at 11-8.

Gordon Salt's goal midway through the second period snapped a 3-all tie and helped lift Michigan Tech to victory over Denver. Michigan Tech built its lead to 5-3 before the Pioneers were able to get on the scoreboard again.

Michigan Tech is now 8-11-1, while Denver fell to 10-9-1.

Next weekend, Michigan State is at Wisconsin, Notre Dame invades Colorado College, Michigan travels to North Dakota and Denver hosts Duluth Friday and Saturday nights. Minnesota is at Michigan Tech Saturday and Sunday.

IHL Leaders Play To Tie

Is the best of the North better than the best of the South in the two divisions of the International Hockey League, or vice versa?

In a game that seemed made to order to answer that question, Kalamazoo, leader of the North division, met Columbus, No. 1 in the South, and the result was a 2-2 tie.

Kalamazoo surged into a 2-0 lead in the first period, but Columbus came back with two of its own in the third. The second period was scoreless, and without penalties.

Kalamazoo is now 25-16-4 for the season, while Columbus is 19-21-9.

In other games Sunday, Flint blasted Dayton, 9-1, Toledo defeated Fort Wayne, 2-1, and Saginaw edged Muskegon, 4-3.

At Flint, Jim Koleff scored three goals and contributed three assists to lead the Generals to victory over the Gems. Mike Powers scored twice for Flint, which now has a 23-19-5 record, while Dayton dropped to 22-23-1.

Saginaw defenseman Marc Gaudreault scored at 15:35 of the third period to give his team its narrow victory over the Mohawks. Muskegon now is 21-19-8, and Muskegon 19-20-7.

LMC Tops Jackson To Stay In First

Lake Michigan College moved into sole possession of first place in the Western Collegiate Conference with a 90-82 victory over Jackson Community College Saturday night in the Napier Gym.

"We were a well-disciplined team Saturday night," beamed head coach Lou Harvey. "This was the best game we've played all year."

Freddie Walker led the Indians, now 12-8 on the season and 7-0 in the league, with 22 points. Greg Cole and Jerry McClinton each added 12 and Warren Harrison netted 10.

Brian Jurasek scored 22 for Jackson, now 6-1 in the league, while Len Williams notched 18 and Brian Brannick and Carl Maniscalco each added 10 points.

Lake Michigan College won the game from the free throw line as it netted an amazing 30 of 34 attempts (88.2 per cent). It was a foul-plagued game for the losers, who saw all five starters foul out.

Walker had 10 rebounds and Dwayne Wright eight as LMC pulled down 37 caroms.

Jackson got hot from the field in the first half and held a slim 41-39 margin at the half. LMC didn't take the lead until five minutes were left in the contest.

Walker then took an alley-oop pass, scored and was fouled. He converted on the three-point play and LMC was on top 71-70.

Jackson then turned the ball over and LMC went into its four-corner offense and Jackson had to foul to get the ball back.

Harvey felt a big key for his club was LMC's defense against Len Williams, a star prep player from Chicago who had been averaging way over 18 points per game.

"We started off in a trap defense against them instead of a man-to-man and they couldn't take the pressure," Harvey commented about his defense.

On offense, it was Walker who picked apart the inside of Jackson's defense. "He was hitting the 10-15 foot jump shots inside," Harvey said. "To me, Freddie is the best player in the conference.

Capitals Score Four Goals In 3:18, Defeat Blues

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

There are 60 minutes to a National Hockey League game. Once in a while, however, it takes just a few of those minutes to seal a victory.

The Washington Capitals proved that Sunday, scoring four goals in the final 3 minutes, 18 seconds and beating the St. Louis Blues 6-3.

"It did look like it was a planned attack to lull them to sleep for the first 55 minutes and then catch them while they were off guard in the last five minutes," said Capitals' Coach Tom McVie after his team's remarkable comeback. "There were a lot of guys out there who didn't do anything until the last five minutes of the game."

One player was rookie Bill Riley, who tied the score 3-3 at 16:42. Hartland Monahan then scored the game-winner at 18:52. That goal was quickly followed by Ace Bailey's tally at 19:24 and Gerry Meehan's score at 19:35.

In other NHL action, Cleveland surprised Buffalo 3-0, Vancouver blitzed the New York Rangers 6-2, Toronto topped Minnesota 5-2, Detroit held Montreal to a 2-2 deadlock, Boston blanked Atlanta 3-0, Philadelphia and Chicago skated to a 2-2 tie, and the New York Islanders overwhelmed Colorado 7-1.

Goaltender Gary Edwards, starting his first game for Cleveland since being acquired from Los Angeles two days ago, blanked Buffalo for his first shutout and first victory of the season. It was the Barons' — previously the California Golden Seals — first victory in Buffalo since Nov. 18, 1973. It was Buffalo's first shutout loss at home since Dec. 7, 1975, and also the Sabres' first loss to an Adams Division rival after six victories.

The Rangers showed up 55 minutes late for their game against the Canucks because of fog conditions at the Vancouver airport. Their offense did not show up until the third period, by which time the Canucks had grabbed a 4-0 lead.

Third period goals by Errol Thompson and Ian Turnbull powered Toronto to its victory over Minnesota.

The Red Wings had to be happy to leave Montreal with a tie against the powerful Canadiens, even though Detroit led with less than six minutes remaining in the game.

Montreal's Yvon Cournoyer tied the score with a power play goal at 14:20 of the third period.

Jimmy Watson's 45-foot slap shot slipped through a maze of bodies and into the net, giving the Flyers their tie with Chicago.

Bryan Trottier had a goal and three assists and linemates Ed Westfall and Garry Howatt each chipped in one goal and two assists as the Islanders increased their league-leading road record to 15-5-4. They also moved into a tie with the Flyers for the Patrick Division lead.

Criticism Doesn't Bother Tarkenton

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

But it's a tough hide, and the man who has passed the most-test and farthest of any quarterback in the history of the National Football League insists he doesn't feel a thing.

"Criticism doesn't bother me," the 36-year-old field general of the Minnesota Vikings said over the weekend. "Most criticism comes from people who don't know what they are talking about.

"I don't read sports sections in the off-season. I am a businessman. I am so totally out of football now I couldn't tell you who is where or when. I'll leave that to people in the taverns.

"I don't need to answer anybody."

The boyish-faced Georgian had no sooner reactivated the old cry of "He can't win the big one" by failing for the third time to engineer a Super Bowl victory than he stepped on another land mine by declining to play in the Pro Bowl.

Tarkenton's contemporaries weren't particularly happy, insisting that he owed it to the game to show up at the Pro Bowl, a sort of consolation which raises money for the players' pension fund.

Tarkenton can shrug off the Super Bowl disaster and his detractors as of no earth-shaking consequence. But there are deeper implications to the post-season drama.

Statistically, Tarkenton is pro football's No. 1 quarterback — King of the Hill, most pass attempts, most completions, most yardage, most everything. Yet he was more of a technician than an inspirational leader in the title shootout — tentative, at times frantic as the Oakland Raiders crushed the Vikings 32-14.

Tarkenton must have felt some humiliation although the defeat had to be shared by all the Vikings. If ever there was a chance for a guy to show the true temper of his mettle, it came afterward.

It's the code of the game — in sports as in life. Knocked down, get up and keep swinging. Fall off a horse or wreck a bike, arise immediately and remount. Don't hide. Snap back.

It may have been inexcusable for Stabler, the winner, and other healthy men to shun the Pro Bowl. For Tarkenton, the shattered Super Bowl loser, it was unthinkable. He should have shown up — even if on crutches. He could have thrown just one pass. Coach Chuck Knox would have insulated him from danger.

There are people in sports who seem to rise to "the big moment." Chris Evert says she wins in tennis because she is tougher on crucial points. Muhammad Ali may be a buffoon at times but he draws upon some hidden reservoir when faced with a tough foe.

Tarkenton, to crown his greatness, must prove he has fire as well as disdain and disability.

Wisconsin Widens WCHA Lead

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wisconsin continued to build its lead in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association (WCHA) with weekend victories over Colorado College at Colorado Springs.

The Badgers have 32 points for a six-point lead over second-place Notre Dame in the standings. The Irish won two from Michigan, which dropped from second to third.

The Minnesota Gophers swept their series at Michigan State, Minnesota-Duluth won two games from North Dakota and Michigan Tech split its series at Denver.

In Saturday night's games, Wisconsin beat Colorado College 4-1, Notre Dame dropped Michigan 7-3, Minnesota edged Michigan State 3-2 in overtime, Duluth upset North Dakota 7-3 and Michigan Tech defeated Denver 6-4.

Wisconsin is now 16-4 in the WCHA, while Colorado College fell to 8-13-1.

Paul Clarke scored Notre Dame's first two goals against Michigan, then the Irish blew the game open with four second-period tallies to improve their WCHA record to 13-7. Michigan fell into third place at 12-8.

Minnesota improved its WCHA position to sixth with a 9-9-2 record. Michigan State is ninth at 7-14-1.

Freshman Don Hedlund scored two goals and added two assists as Duluth overcame North Dakota. Mark Pavelich also had two goals and Dan Lempe had four assists for Duluth. Mark Taylor led North Dakota with two goals.

Duluth remains in the league cellar at 4-14-2, while North Dakota is fourth at 11-9.

Gordon Salt's goal midway through the second period snapped a 3-all tie and helped lift Michigan Tech to victory over Denver. Michigan Tech built its lead to 5-3 before the Pioneers were able to get on the scoreboard again.

Michigan Tech is now 8-11-1, while Denver fell to 10-9-1.

Next weekend, Michigan State is at Wisconsin, Notre Dame invades Colorado College, Michigan travels to North Dakota and Denver hosts Duluth Friday and Saturday nights. Minnesota is at Michigan Tech Saturday and Sunday.

CONCENTRATION: Bjorn Borg concentrates on his return against Adriano Panatta Saturday in the semifinals of a $200,000 Grand Slam tennis tournament in Boca Raton, Fla. Borg beat Panatta Saturday and then upset Jimmy Connors 6-4, 5-7, 6-3 Sunday for the big first prize money. (AP Wirephoto)

Borg Takes Step Toward Being No. 1

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

If Bjorn Borg intends to become the No. 1 tennis player in the world, he took a big step in that direction Sunday.

Borg, the defending Wimbledon and World Championship Tennis titleholder, defeated the current No. 1 men's player, Jimmy Connors, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3 in the final of the Grand Slam tennis tournament at Boca Raton, Fla. The victory was worth $100,000 to the Swedish sensation, buf there was more than monetary value in the triumph.

"This is really a big win for me," Borg said. "After all, I had lost seven straight matches to him."

Among the losses was the final of the U.S. Open at Forest Hills last September, a triumph that solidified Connors' claim to the top spot.

"This time, I knew I could beat him," Borg said after blowing three match points in the second set before recovering in the third set and winning the match. One of the match points Borg blew was an easy return with Connors out of position.

Another player bidding for the world's top ranking is equally stoic Brian Gottfried, who won the $20,000 first prize in the Baltimore International Indoor Championships with a 6-3, 7-6 victory over Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

"I used to go crazy in practice in high school and college," Gottfried admitted after beating Vilas, who disputed several calls and exhorted the crowd to take his side during protests. "But never in a tournament. I was brought up not to show emotions and let the opponent see what he's doing to you.

Also aiming for the world's No. 1 ranking — among the women — is Martina Navratilova. Miss Navratilova, the top seed at the Women's Pro Tournament in Houston, edged Sue Barker of Great Britain 7-6, 7-5.

Miss Navratilova, who defected from Czechoslovakia in 1975 and now lives in Dallas, rallied from 2-4 deficits in both sets. She won the first set tiebreaker 5-3, then saved three match points in the second set before pulling out the victory.

In Davis Cup play, Australia and New Zealand advanced to the Eastern Zone final. Australia blanked India 5-0, and New Zealand defeated Indonesia 5-0.

Cummings Keys Tulane Upset Of Cincinnati

Upsets continued to prevail in college basketball play Saturday. But none was bigger than Tulane's stunning 78-75 win over second-ranked Cincinnati.

After his rebound Cummings missed the tip in but got his own rebound and passed to Arthur Bibbs. Bibbs was fouled with seven seconds left and dropped in two free throws to clinch the upset.

In other college basketball games Saturday, No. 3 Alabama was beaten 102-93 by No. 14 Tennessee; No. 4 North Carolina defeated No. 13 Maryland 71-68; No. 5 Michigan stopped Illinois 86-61; No. 6 Kentucky blasted LSU 87-72; No. 7 Nevada-Las Vegus defeated Pepperdine 85-80; No. 8 Marquette walloped Xavier of Ohio 85-43, and No. 9 Wake Forest edged North Carolina-Charlotte 74-72.

Also, 11th-ranked Minnesota beat Wisconsin 82-64; 12th-rated Louisville routed St. Louis 74-55; No. 15 Providence trounced Boston University 83-68; No. 16 Arizona stopped Brigham Young 113-85; No. 17 Arkansas walloped Texas 86-58; No. 18 Memphis State turned back Brandeis 97-87; No. 19 Purdue whipped Michigan State 76-70, and No. 20 Syracuse outscored Pitt 96-74.

Borg Takes Step Toward Being No. 1

CONCENTRATION: Bjorn Borg concentrates on his return against Adriano Panatta Saturday in the semifinals of a $200,000 Grand Slam tennis tournament in Boca Raton, Fla. Borg beat Panatta Saturday and then upset Jimmy Connors 6-4, 5-7, 6-3 Sunday for the big first prize money. (AP Wirephoto)

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

If Bjorn Borg intends to become the No. 1 tennis player in the world, he took a big step in that direction Sunday.

Borg, the defending Wimbledon and World Championship Tennis titleholder, defeated the current No. 1 men's player, Jimmy Connors, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3 in the final of the Grand Slam tennis tournament at Boca Raton, Fla. The victory was worth $100,000 to the Swedish sensation, but there was more than monetary value in the triumph.

"This is really a big win for me," Borg said. "After all, I had lost seven straight matches to him."

Among the losses was the final of the U.S. Open at Forest Hills last September, a triumph that solidified Connors' claim to the top spot.

"This time, I knew I could beat him," Borg said after blowing three match points in the second set before recovering in the third set and winning the match. One of the match points Borg blew was an easy return with Connors out of position.

Another player bidding for the world's top ranking is equally stoic Brian Gottfried, who won the $20,000 first prize in the Baltimore International Indoor Championships with a 6-3, 7-6 victory over Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

"I used to go crazy in practice in high school and college," Gottfried admitted after beating Vilas, who disputed several calls and exhorted the crowd to take his side during protests. "But never in a tournament. I was brought up not to show emotions and let the opponent see what he's doing to you.

Also aiming for the world's No. 1 ranking — among the women — is Martina Navratilova. Miss Navratilova, the top seed at the Women's Pro Tournament in Houston, edged Sue Barker of Great Britain 7-6, 7-5.

Miss Navratilova, who defected from Czechoslovakia in 1975 and now lives in Dallas, rallied from 2-4 deficits in both sets. She won the first set tiebreaker 5-3, then saved three match points in the second set before pulling out the victory.

In Davis Cup play, Australia and New Zealand advanced to the Eastern Zone final. Australia blanked India 5-0, and New Zealand defeated Indonesia 5-0.

Cummings Keys Tulane Upset Of Cincinnati

Upsets continued to prevail in college basketball play Saturday. But none was bigger than Tulane's stunning 78-75 win over second-ranked Cincinnati.

Jeff Cummings scored 18 points and grabbed a clutch rebound in the final seconds to spark Tulane. The 6-11 Cummings picked off his 15th rebound of the game with 19 seconds left when teammate Marc Fletcher missed a free throw with Tulane leading 76-75.

After his rebound Cummings missed the tip in but got his own rebound and passed to Arthur Bibbs. Bibbs was fouled with seven seconds left and dropped in two free throws to clinch the upset.

In other college basketball games Saturday, No. 3 Alabama was beaten 102-93 by No. 14 Tennessee; No. 4 North Carolina defeated No. 13 Maryland 71-68; No. 5 Michigan stopped Illinois 66-61; No. 6 Kentucky blasted LSU 87-72; No. 7 Nevada-Las Vegas defeated Pepperdine 85-80; No. 8 Marquette walloped Xavier of Ohio 85-43, and No. 9 Wake Forest edged North Carolina-Charlotte 74-72.

Also, 11th-ranked Minnesota beat Wisconsin 82-64; 12th-rated Louisville routed St. Louis 74-55; No. 15 Providence trounced Boston University 83-68; No. 16 Arizona stopped Brigham Young 113-85; No. 17 Arkansas walloped Texas 86-58; No. 18 Memphis State turned back Brandeis 97-87; No. 19 Purdue whipped Michigan State 76-70, and No. 20 Syracuse outscored Pitt 96-74.

Bernard King scored 26 points, Mike Jackson 24 and Ernie Grunfeld 22, leading Tennessee over Alabama. The victory gave the Vols the undisputed lead in the Southeastern Conference with a 7-0 record.

Phil Ford scored five points in the last four minutes and conducted North Carolina's famed "Four Corner Offense" as the Tar Heels beat Maryland. Phil Hubbard's 29 points led Michigan over Illinois.

Lanier May Remain With Quiet Pistons

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — If things stay quiet in the Detroit Pistons' clubhouse, its likely star center Bob Lanier will stick around and not take an unscheduled vacation.

Lanier was very much on the job Sunday when he scored 30 points for the Pistons in a losing effort against the Washington Bullets. The Bullets won their fifth straight game with a 119-108 victory over Detroit.

Lanier had said nearly a month ago he could be ready for a vacation from the National Basketball Association grind.

Lanier had said his "peace of mind" was at stake. "If I keep going like this, I might have a nervous breakdown," he said.

But he says now if clubhouse arguments are kept to a minimum, it's likely he will keep playing.

"The aspect that bothers me is the hassles — people bitching at one another," Lanier explained. "That's what I can't take.

"But we had a team meeting and we talked about it. We're trying to stop all the unnecessary rhetoric and win some games ... and hopefully win a championship."

Lanier found himself keeping the peace against Washington Sunday when he came to the rescue of teammate Chris Ford after Ford had fouled Washington's Leonard Gray on his way to the basket in the final quarter.

Gray responded by giving Ford a hefty shove, but before he could do anything else, he found himself confined by a Lanier bear hug. Gray was tossed out of the game following the incident.

The Pistons kept things close in the first half, but faded during the second. They never led after the Bullets broke a 28-28 tie with the last four points of the first quarter.

Lanier hit 14 of 19 shots to share the scoring honors with Elvin Hayes at 30 points. Hayes sank 11 of 19 shots and scored 17 points in the second half when the Bullets pulled away from a 55-51 halftime edge.

Sleepy Foreman Pounds Agosto

"I really couldn't get awake until the last round," said Foreman. "I just couldn't wake up."

While Foreman certainly didn't give the impression of a man fighting in his sleep, he did at times seem bored with the proceedings as he knocked down Agosto five times and stopped him in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round bout Saturday.

But Foreman was satisfied with his shorter punching to the head, with his keeping in position to punch and with his body punches, which he said were harder than the shots he bounced off Agosto's head.

And it was a chance to fight, even though Agosto was outmanned by 23 pounds, three inches in height and nine inches in reach.

"Making challenges don't do any good," said Foreman, who has adopted the attitude that it is better to fight than to just sit and wait for an opportunity to regain the heavyweight championship from Muhammad Ali.

Foreman's next opportunity will be a scheduled 12-rounder March 17 at Landover, Md., against clever Jimmy Young, who went 15 rounds in losing a decision to Ali last April 30 and who in his last fight beat Ron Lyle, a man who had Foreman down twice before being knocked out in the fifth round last year.

The 28-year-old Agosto, a Puerto Rican who holds a $230-a-week job as a maintenance worker for the city of Oradell, N.J., said simply, "I did the best I could."

Area Wrestlers Take Top Honors

A trio of southwestern Michigan wrestling teams came home with first place hardware in invitational action Saturday.

Lakeshore won the title in the Gull Lake Kiwanis Invitational team tourney, defeating Marshall 45-24. Gull Lake 39-17 and Coldwater in the finals 35-23. Eau Claire outpointed eight other schools to win the Decatur tourney and Brandywine won the Culver Military Invitational.

Four Lancers were declared winners of their weight classes after winning all three of their matches. Doug Smith pinned all three foes to win the 105-pound division, Jamie Lingle, not known for his pinning effectiveness, amassed three falls to win the 138 category. Terry Runge had two pins and a decision in the 112 division and Frank Pitts won it all at 155 with three decisions.

In the tourney, Coloma came in eighth place.

Eau Claire had four champions in taking the Decatur JC Invitational. Getting firsts for the Beavers were Kevin Rice (98), Bill Simaz (105), Dave Yicott (138) and Joe Simaz (145).

Cassopolis also had four champs — Earl Sorsby (155), Vince Weatherspoon (178), Mark Williams (191) and Wendall Mitchum (Hwt.).

Vic Vukorpo of Paw Paw won the 112-pound class while Mark Maysiek of Berrien Springs took top honors in the 119-pound class.

While Eau Claire was the big winner, Cassopolis was second, Berrien Springs third, Decatur fifth, Watervliet sixth and Paw Paw eighth.

Brandywine's team total was 143½, far outdistancing second place Haslet which had 119. Niles was seventh in the eight-team tourney with 59½.

In the Union City Invitational, Noel Rodriguez of Fennville took a third place by beating Joe Roberts of Manchester 3-2. Also, Blackhawk Joe Maslanka had to settle second place, losing to Brad McCaskey of Hudson 3-2 in the finals.

Hudson won the team trophy as Fennville finished with 40 points, good for 10th place in the 14-team tourney.

Lanier May Remain With Quiet Pistons

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — If things stay quiet in the Detroit Pistons' clubhouse, its likely star center Bob Lanier will stick around and not take an unscheduled vacation.

Lanier was very much on the job Sunday when he scored 30 points for the Pistons in a losing effort against the Washington Bullets. The Bullets won their fifth straight game with a 119-108 victory over Detroit.

Lanier had said nearly a month ago he could be ready for a vacation from the National Basketball Association grind.

Lanier had said his "peace of mind" was at stake. "If I keep going like this, I might have a nervous breakdown," he said.

But he says now if clubhouse arguments are kept to a minimum, it's likely he will keep playing.

"The aspect that bothers me is the hassles — people bitching at one another," Lanier explained. "That's what I can't take.

"But we had a team meeting and we talked about it. We're trying to stop all the unnecessary rhetoric and win some games ... and hopefully win a championship."

Lanier found himself keeping the peace against Washington Sunday when he came to the rescue of teammate Chris Ford after Ford had fouled Washington's Leonard Gray on his way to the basket in the final quarter.

Gray responded by giving Ford a hefty shove, but before he could do anything else, he found himself confined by a Lanier bear hug. Gray was tossed out of the game following the incident.

The Pistons kept things close in the first half, but faded during the second. They never led after the Bullets broke a 28-28 tie with the last four points of the first quarter.

Lanier hit 14 of 19 shots to share the scoring honors with Elvin Hayes at 30 points. Hayes sank 11 of 19 shots and scored 17 points in the second half when the Bullets pulled away from a 55-51 halftime edge.

Sleepy Foreman Pounds Agosto

"I really couldn't get awake until the last round," said Foreman. "I just couldn't wake up."

While Foreman certainly didn't give the impression of a man fighting in his sleep, he did at times seem bored with the proceedings as he knocked down Agosto five times and stopped him in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round bout Saturday.

But Foreman was satisfied with his shorter punching to the head, with his keeping in position to punch and with his body punches, which he said were harder than the shots he bounced off Agosto's head.

And it was a chance to fight, even though Agosto was outmanned by 23 pounds, three inches in height and nine inches in reach.

"Making challenges don't do any good," said Foreman, who has adopted the attitude that it is better to fight than to just sit and wait for an opportunity to regain the heavyweight championship from Muhammad Ali.

Foreman's next opportunity will be a scheduled 12-rounder March 17 at Landover, Md., against clever Jimmy Young, who went 15 rounds in losing a decision to Ali last April 30 and who in his last fight beat Ron Lyle, a man who had Foreman down twice before being knocked out in the fifth round last year.

The 28-year-old Agosto, a Puerto Rican who holds a $250-a-week job as a maintenance worker for the city of Oradell, N.J., said simply, "I did the best I could."

Area Wrestlers Take Top Honors

A trio of southwestern Michigan wrestling teams came home with first place hardware in invitational action Saturday.

Lakeshore won the title in the Gull Lake Kiwanis Invitational team tourney, defeating Marshall 45-24, Gull Lake 39-17 and Coldwater in the finals 35-23. Eau Claire outpointed eight other schools to win the Decatur tourney and Brandywine won the Culver Military Invitational.

Four Lancers were declared winners of their weight classes after winning all three of their matches. Doug Smith pinned all three foes to win the 105-pound division, Jamie Lingle, not known for his pinning effectiveness, amassed three falls to win the 138 category. Terry Runge had two pins and a decision in the 112 division and Frank Pitts won it all at 155 with three decisions.

In the tourney, Coloma came in eighth place.

Eau Claire had four champions in taking the Decatur JC Invitational. Getting firsts for the Beavers were Kevin Rice (98), Bill Simaz (105), Dave Yicott (138) and Joe Simaz (145).

Cassopolis also had four champs — Earl Sorsby (155), Vince Weatherspoon (178), Mark Williams (191) and Wendall Mitchum (Hwt.).

Vic Vukorpa of Paw Paw won the 112-pound class while Mark Maysick of Berrien Springs took top honors in the 119-pound class.

While Eau Claire was the big winner, Cassopolis was second, Berrien Springs third, Decatur fifth, Watervliet sixth and Paw Paw eighth.

Brandywine's team total was 143½, far outdistancing second place Haslet which had 119. Niles was seventh in the eight-team tourney with 59½.

In the Union City Invitational, Noel Rodriguez of Fennville took a third place by beating Joe Roberts of Manchester 3-2. Also, Blackhawk Joe Maslanka had to settle second place, losing to Brad McCaskey of Hudson 3-2 in the finals.

Hudson won the team trophy as Fennville finished with 40 points, good for 10th place in the 14-team tourney.

It is quite possible to humanize the presidency of the United States without destroying certain traditions and rituals that are essential to any ordered polity. Jimmy Carter is not just one of the boys; he has been elected the only President of the greatest Republic on earth, the incarnation of our collective aspirations. Sure, he is my age, puts his pants on one leg at a time, and is an equal in both law and the sight of God. But should I have the opportunity to meet him, I would naturally address him as "Mr. President."

This is said against a background of rumors that an age of asceticism is in the works, that everybody is going to have access to everybody, and that once a month — like a medieval Carolingian king — President Carter will sit under a tree in Lafayette Square and hear petitions from the people. Several commentators have been suggesting he travel tourist, or even hitchhike, and some of his early "Northern populist" supporters are already looking for a new 1980 nominee because Jimmy was tickled pink by Air Force 1.

It must be my natural perversity but the first time I really felt Carter was a spontaneous human being, not a political robot, was when he did that joyful little dance, and let me explain to some of my "virtuous" brethren that the American people do not want their President wandering around the world in a DC-6. They certainly don't want him wearing a crown, or requiring staff to kneel in his presence, but they want him to look good out there.

Too many critics confuse justified deference with sycophancy. The fact that you stand when the President stands, walk on his left, and fulfill trivial protocol details, rather than sitting with your feet on his desk, has nothing to do with the substance of the relationship. Indeed, nothing could demonstrate this more graphically than the Nixon tapes: In a demeaningly familiar fashion, all hands were busily engaged in knifing each other.

Finally on access to the President: it's all very well to have "open" lines of communication. But, as the President-elect has surely learned by now, there are only 24 hours in the day and most people who want to communicate haven't anything to say — except later to say, "As I told the President..." Somebody has to guard the gate and screen the calls, but this person should not have the final say. He or she should put through those obviously vital ex officio, and at the end of each day give the President a list of those put on "hold." It's not hard, and it keeps the gatekeeper from playing President.

BH Peace Temple Damaged By Fire

BY TOM SAWYER
Staff Writer

Benton Harbor firemen responded to five fires over the weekend including one Saturday that caused an estimated $5,000 to $6,000 damage to Peace Temple United Methodist Church, 275 Pipestone street.

Firemen were called to the church about 1 p.m. on a report of smoke and found a stairway to the church basement completely burned away.

The blaze spread to nearby doors and damaged trim, walls and floor joists under the upper level of stairs, firemen reported. The fire melted a copper water line causing a leak that was credited with checking the spread of the fire into the rest of the basement, according to Fire Capt. Robert Jones.

Sunday school classes were called off yesterday because of the fire, but the regular church service was held.

Deputy Fire Chief John Billups, who made the damage estimate, reported his investigation revealed the cause of the blaze was an electrical short in the wiring.

In other fires:

Firemen Leonard Guess, 29, was injured while fighting a fire in the basement apartment of Rochelle Kirkland, 518 Catalpa avenue, early Sunday morning.

Guess was released after treatment for a dislocated shoulder at Mercy hospital. He will remain off-duty for an undetermined length of time, Capt. Jones reported.

Guess was injured when he slipped while carrying hose down stairs to the apartment. The fire was caused by a short in a coffee pot left on a small table. The fire was confined to the table and coffee pot. No one was home at the time the fire was reported, 12:24 a.m.

A fire Saturday about 5 p.m. is under investigation by Benton Harbor police. The blaze damaged the kitchen area of the Willie Mae Hurse residence, 1275 Columbus avenue, firemen reported. City police said the fire was discovered by Willie Mae Hurse and is believed to have started in trash. The home's back door and a window were found open, police reported.

A dog and puppy died in a Sunday fire in the basement at the Ulysses Walker residence, 480 Edwards avenue, about 7:25 p.m.

Firemen reported the "probable cause" of the fire was children playing with matches. The fire started in a sofa under a stairway in the home's basement causing an estimated $4,000 damage to the home. The fire was confined to the basement and no one in the family, which was home at the time, was injured. Breed of the dogs was not reported.

Firemen used carbon dioxide extinguishers to put out a fire in a fuse box at the Audrey Hansom residence, 191 Clay street at 4:12 p.m. Sunday. Damage was confined to the fuse box.

Niles Twp. Dwelling Destroyed By Blaze

NILES — Niles township firemen said the James Hargreaves home, 305 Knott road east of here, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin about 9 Saturday night. Firemen said they were called back to the scene twice yesterday when smouldering debris burst into flames.

The house was listed as a total loss, but no damage estimate was available. Firemen said the family was not living in the two-story, frame structure when the fire occurred, because of a malfunctioning furnace. Firemen from the Eau Claire fire department assisted in fighting the blaze.

Senator Abouerzk Won't Run In 1978

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Sen. James Abouerzk, D-S.D., said today he would not seek re-election in 1978.

The first-term senator cited family reasons for not running again.

"I came into politics with the idea that I had a contribution to make," Abourezk said in a statement prepared for delivery at a news conference. "I never had the idea that I should perpetuate myself in office.

"I realize that it has become normal procedure for those successfully elected to office to run term after term. The temptation is great, and few are able to resist it. But I've never believed that I am indispensable."

"While I consider it the public duty and responsibility of every citizen to work for the benefit of others within our society, I have another duty, a duty which I have neglected, and that duty is to my family.

"I have had, to my sorrow, to watch my children grow up from a distance," he said. "I have seen my wife and children endure, in silence, while my work has kept me from fulfilling my responsibilities to my family."

Musical Equipment Is Stolen

WATERVLIET — Police here said nearly $1,800 in musical equipment was reported stolen from the locked car of a Watervliet man outside a Watervliet township tavern early today.

Joe Hyde, John Goff road, told police he parked his auto outside the Rainbow Lounge, Red Arrow highway, about 9 p.m. Sunday and discovered the equipment gone shortly after 1 a.m. Reported stolen were an electric guitar, guitar amplifier and several accessories for the guitar. Entry into the auto was made by prying open a front vent window, police said.

MONDALE SAYS U.S. MAY HIKE AID

NATO Forces Reported Flimsy

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — NATO's armed forces are in such disarray and poor condition that they possibly could not withstand an attack by the Warsaw Pact nations of Eastern Europe, says a new Senate report.

In an unusually grim report to the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Dewey Bartlett, ROkla., said Soviet forces in Eastern Europe have the capability to launch, with little warning, a "potentially devastating" attack in central Europe.

"The significance of a Pact capability to launch such an attack from virtually a standing start cannot be exaggerated," said the report, released as the Armed Services Committee prepared to open annual hearings on U.S. military posture and weapons needs.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale told the North Atlantic Alliance today that President Carter is considering increases in the U.S. contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization despite his plans to cut the Pentagon budget.

He indicated, however, that the United States expects European allies to increase their own spending for the alliance.

Mondale, in a speech to the North Atlantic Council in Brussels, said the new President is determined to reduce waste and inefficiency in U.S. military spending.

"His new budget and these efficiencies will not result in any decrease in planned investments in NATO defense, and these plans involve some growth," Mondale said.

The speech, a highlight of the first stop on Mondale's 10-day tour of America's leading allies, was made behind closed doors, but copies were made available later.

The head of a French think tank, meanwhile, said in an interview that the debate in the United States about the possibility of the Soviet Union having achieved military superiority is a false one and U.S. forces are still "clearly dominant."

The statement came from Gen. George Buis, who retired in 1972 as director of the French armed forces' Center for Superior Military Studies. He is now president of the Foundation for National Defense Studies, a three-year-old organization partly financed by the French government.

Buis said recent comments by American military and political leaders that the favorable balance of power was slipping away from the United States were part of "an old operation that we've seen before.

"The facts don't back up the statements of alarm," he said.

"They happen, though, every year when they're about to vote on the U.S. military budget and right on schedule with the NATO annual general meeting."

It said U.S. strategic planning assumptions concerning the likely warning time and duration of a European war must be revised, while NATO forces undergo extensive overhaul and modernization to give them a "quantum jump" in conventional firepower.

U.S. military policy in Europe assumes three weeks' warning of any major attack and that NATO's forward defenses, by falling back to absorb the impact, could be reinforced in time to halt the onslaught.

The Senate study said NATO deficiencies would cut the time to prepare a defense and ability to maintain it. It said that could mean the loss of so much German territory that civilian and military authority could be demoralized, and the country lost.

And it said Soviet tactical nuclear forces exceed NATO's in range and destructive force, meaning the Soviet force would be more effective if used after NATO conventional units had been driven back.

A Pentagon-authorized study last year by former Gen. James L. Hollingsworth urged that NATO forces be deployed farther forward and that they be prepared to fight a short war. Last week, outgoing Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld warned that the Soviets could commit half a million men, all in armored or other mobile units, to a "blitzkreig" type of surprise attack against NATO.

The new Senate report included these key points:

—Recently-enlarged Soviet forces now are being upgraded with modern tanks, troop carriers and self-propelled artillery. NATO, on the other hand, is equipped with fewer outmoded or inferior vehicles.

—NATO air forces are superior, but Soviet air power has undergone a "dramatic transformation," shifting away from a purely defensive role toward support of offensive action. NATO air defenses are dangerously thin in some areas and Soviet defenses possibly could inflict severe losses on NATO air forces in the start of a war.

—NATO's southern flank in the Mediterranean is "little more than a shambles," and NATO governments there "appear to be abdicating their responsibilities" while Soviet naval presence grows.

—The plan under which NATO decisions are collectively made is "so complex and cumbersome that it raises the catastrophic prospect of hostilities preceding even a NATO decision to mobilize." That is "clearly unacceptable against the threat of unexpected attack."

Thieves Hit Niles Store Second Time

Police said they were on patrol shortly before 5 a.m. when they discovered a rear door to the firm had been forced open. Clothing items were believed taken but police said an estimate of the loss had not yet been determined by store owners.

On Oct. 23, police said $3,500 worth of clothing was taken in a break-in that also caused $2,500 in damage to the building when a hole cut in the roof allowed water to seep into the store.

On The Auction Block

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The Grand River Queen, a sidewheel steamer, goes on the auction block Tuesday in Grand Rapids. Gerald R. Elmer, who bought the cruise boat in 1975, said he still owes about $5,000 on it. He said his river excursion business lost $14,000 the first year. Capital Financial Services of Grand Rapids, which holds title to the 10-year-old vessel, set up the auction. Elmer said he paid slightly less than $35,000 for the vessel.

Crash Puts Bangor Woman In Hospital

BERRIEN SPRINGS — A Bangor woman was hospitalized as the result of a two-car crash at the intersection of Shawnee road and Red Bud trail west of here yesterday afternoon.

Listed in stable condition this morning at Berrien General hospital, Berrien Center, was Mrs. Beatrice Lemon, 54, a passenger in an auto driven by her husband, Glenn Lemon, 72, route 2, Bangor.

Lemon and three people in the other auto were also injured, but were released after treatment at Berrien General. Driver of the other auto was identified by Berrien Springs village-Oronoko township police as Frederick Contreras, 26, Mt. Tabor road, Buchanan. His wife Candy, 28, and son Cruz, 4 months, were passengers.

Police said the Contreras auto, headed east on Shawnee, pulled into the path of the Lemon auto headed south on Red Bud. Police reported they ticketed Contreras for failure to yield the right-of-way at a stop sign.

Police Will Seek Three Warrants

COLOMA — Coloma township police said they will seek warrants today for the arrest of those believed involved in the theft Jan. 4 of a snowmobile from the home of Mrs. Thelma Zoschke, 6154 Johnson road.

The 1973 snowmobile was recovered yesterday near Blatchford road and M-140 in Watervliet township by Coloma township deputies who had received a tip on where the vehicle could be found.

Mrs. Zoschke is deputy township clerk for Coloma township.

Woman Found Lying In Snow

A Benton township woman was hospitalized with frostbite after she was found lying in snow just off Carmody road in Bainbridge township early Sunday, according to Berrien sheriff's officers who are investigating.

The woman, identified as Eula Fay Campbell, 40, of 1730 Crystal court, was reported in "serious" condition today at Mercy hospital where a spokeswoman said she was suffering effects of exposure and frostbite.

Sheriff's Capt. Ronald Immoos said passers-by reported finding the woman east of Boyer road about 6:30 a.m.

Immoos said a man is being questioned in connection with the incident, but that no charges have been filed.

Immoos said he has not been able to talk with the woman and it has not yet been determined if she was sexually assaulted. He said the matter remains under investigation.

Bomb Scare Really Nutty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When Mayor George Moscone found a box inside a paper bag on his front steps, he quickly called the police bomb squad. Officers gingerly placed the package into a special bomb truck Sunday and took it to a disposal center for examination. The contents? Assorted nuts, a gift to the mayor from an unidentified source. The mayor said he wasn't hungry.

BH Peace Temple Damaged By Fire

BY TOM SAWYER
Staff Writer

Benton Harbor firemen responded to five fires over the weekend including one Saturday that caused an estimated $5,000 to $6,000 damage to Peace Temple United Methodist Church, 275 Pipestone street.

Firemen were called to the church about 1 p.m. on a report of sG oke and found a stairway to the church basement completely burned away.

The blaze spread to nearby doors and damaged trim, walls and floor joists under the upper level of stairs, firemen reported. The fire melted a copper water line causing a leak that was credited with checking the spread of the fire into the rest of the basement, according to Fire Capt. Robert Jones.

Sunday school classes were called off yesterday because of the fire, but the regular church service was held.

Deputy Fire Chief John Billups, who made the damage estimate, reported his investigation revealed the cause of the blaze was an electrical short in the wiring.

In other fires:

Firemen Leonard Guess, 29, was injured while fighting a fire in the basement apartment of Rochelle Kirkland, 518 Catalpa avenue, early Sunday morning.

treatment for a dislocated shoulder at Mercy hospital. He will remain off-duty for an undetermined length of time, Capt. Jones reported.

Guess was injured when he slipped while carrying hose down stairs to the apartment. The fire was caused by a short in a coffee pot left on a small table. The fire was confined to the table and coffee pot. No one was home at the time the fire was reported, 12:24 a.m.

A fire Saturday about 5 p.m. is under investigation by Benton Harbor police. The blaze damaged the kitchen area of the Willie Mae Hurse residence, 1275 Columbus avenue, firemen reported. City police said the fire was discovered by Willie Mae Hurse and is believed to have started in trash. The home's back door and a window were found open, police reported.

A dog and puppy died in a Sunday fire in the basement at the Ulysses Walker residence, 480 Edwards avenue, about 7:25 p.m.

Firemen reported the "probable cause" of the fire was children playing with matches. The fire started in a sofa under a stairway in the home's basement causing an estimated $4,000 damage to the home. The fire was confined to the basement and no one in the family, which was home at the time, was injured. Breed of the dogs was not reported.

Firemen used carbon dioxide extinguishers to put out a fire in a fuse box at the Audrey Ransom residence, 191 Clay street at 4:12 p.m. Sunday. Damage was confined to the fuse box.

Niles Twp. Dwelling Destroyed By Blaze

NILES — Niles township firemen said the James Hargreaves home, 305 Knott road east of here, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin about 9 Saturday night. Firemen said they were called back to the scene twice yesterday when smouldering debris burst into flames.

The house was listed as a total loss, but no damage estimate was available. Firemen said the family was not living in the two-story, frame structure when the fire occurred, because of a malfunctioning furnace. Firemen from the Eau Claire fire department assisted in fighting the blaze.

Senator Abouerzk Won't Run In 1978

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Sen. James Abouerzk, D-S.D., said today he would not seek re-election in 1978.

The first-term senator cited family reasons for not running again.

"I came into politics with the idea that I had a contribution to make," Abourezk said in a statement prepared for delivery at a news conference. "I never had the idea that I should perpetuate myself in office.

"I realize that it has become normal procedure for those successfully elected to office to run term after term. The temptation is great, and few are able to resist it. But I've never believed that I am indispensable."

"While I consider it the public duty and responsiblity of every citizen to work for the benefit of others within our society, I have another duty, a duty which I have neglected, and that duty is to my family.

"I have had, to my sorrow, to watch my children grow up from a distance," he said. "I have seen my wife and children endure, in silence, while my work has kept me from fulfilling my responsibilities to my family."

Musical Equipment Is Stolen

WATERVLIET — Police here said nearly $1,800 in musical equipment was reported stolen from the locked car of a Watervliet man outside a Watervliet township tavern early today.

Joe Hyde, John Goff road, told police he parked his auto outside the Rainbow Lounge, Red Arrow highway, about 9 p.m. Sunday and discovered the equipment gone shortly after 1 a.m. Reported stolen were an electric guitar, guitar amplifier and several accessories for the guitar. Entry into the auto was made by prying open a front vent window, police said.

MONDALE SAYS U.S. MAY HIKE AID

NATO Forces Reported Flimsy

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — NATO's armed forces are in such disarray and poor condition that they possibly could not withstand an attack by the Warsaw Pact nations of Eastern Europe, says a new Senate report.

In an unusually grim report to the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Dewey Bartlett, ROkla., said Soviet forces in Eastern Europe have the capability to launch, with little warning, a "potentially devastating" attack in central Europe.

"The significance of a Pact capability to launch such an attack from virtually a standing start cannot be exaggerated," said the report, released as the Armed Services Committee prepared to open annual hearings on U.S. military posture and weapons needs.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale told the North Atlantic Alliance today that President Carter is considering increases in the U.S. contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization despite his plans to cut the Pentagon budget.

He indicated, however, that the United States expects European allies to increase their own spending for the alliance.

Mondale, in a speech to the North Atlantic Council in Brussels, said the new President is determined to reduce waste and inefficiency in U.S. military spending.

"His new budget and these efficiencies will not result in any decrease in planned investments in NATO defense, and these plans involve some growth," Mondale said.

The speech, a highlight of the first stop on Mondale's 10-day tour of America's leading allies, was made behind closed doors, but copies were made available later.

The head of a French think tank, meanwhile, said in an interview that the debate in the United States about the possibility of the Soviet Union having achieved military superiority is a false one and U.S. forces are still "clearly dominant."

The statement came from Gen. George Buis, who retired in 1972 as director of the French armed forces' Center for Superior Military Studies. He is now president of the Foundation for National Defense Studies, a three-year-old organization partly financed by the French government.

Buis said recent comments by American military and political leaders that the favorable balance of power was slipping away from the United States were part of "an old operation that we've seen before.

"The facts don't back up the statements of alarm," he said.

"They happen, though, every year when they're about to vote on the U.S. military budget and right on schedule with the NATO annual general meeting."

It said U.S. strategic planning assumptions concerning the likely warning time and duration of a European war must be revised, while NATO forces undergo extensive overhaul and modernization to give them a "quantum jump" in conventional firepower.

U.S. military policy in Europe assumes three weeks' warning of any major attack and that NATO's forward defenses, by falling back to absorb the impact, could be reinforced in time to halt the onslaught.

The Senate study said NATO deficiencies would cut the time to prepare a defense and ability to maintain it. It said that could mean the loss of so much German territory that civilian and military authority could be demoralized, and the country lost.

And it said Soviet tactical nuclear forces exceed NATO's in range and destructive force, meaning the Soviet force would be more effective if used after NATO conventional units had been driven back.

A Pentagon-authorized study last year by former Gen. James L. Hollingsworth urged that NATO forces be deployed farther forward and that they be prepared to fight a short war. Last week, outgoing Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld warned that the Soviets could commit half a million men, all in armored or other mobile units, to a "blitzkreig" type of surprise attack against NATO.

The new Senate report included these key points:

—Recently-enlarged Soviet forces now are being upgraded with modern tanks, troop carriers and self-propelled artillery. NATO, on the other hand, is equipped with fewer outmoded or inferior vehicles.

—NATO air forces are superior, but Soviet air power has undergone a "dramatic transformation," shifting away from a purely defensive role toward support of offensive action. NATO air defenses are dangerously thin in some areas and Soviet defenses possibly could inflict severe losses on NATO air forces in the start of a war.

—NATO's southern flank in the Mediterranean is "little more than a shambles," and NATO governments there "appear to be abdicating their responsibilities" while Soviet naval presence grows.

—The plan under which NATO decisions are collectively made is "so complex and cumbersome that it raises the catasrophic prospect of hostilities preceding even a NATO decision to mobilize." That is "clearly unacceptable against the threat of unexpected attack."

Thieves Hit Niles Store Second Time

Police said they were on patrol shortly before 5 a.m. when they discovered a rear door to the firm had been forced open. Clothing items were believed taken but police said an estimate of the loss had not yet been determined by store owners.

On Oct. 23, police said $3,500 worth of clothing was taken in a break-in that also caused $2,500 in damage to the building when a hole cut in the roof allowed water to seep into the store.

On The Auction Block

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The Grand River Queen, a sidewheel steamer, goes on the auction block Tuesda in Grand Rapids. Gerald R. Elmer, who bought the cruise boat in 1975, said he still owes about $5,000 on it. He said his river excursion business lost $14,000 the first year. Capital Financial Services of Grand Rapids, which holds title to the 10-year-old vessel, set up the auction. Elmer said he paid slightly less than $35,000 for the vessel.

The night before, the old track is nearly deserted with only an occasional lion's cough of an engine getting a last minute adjustment down in the rickety row garages of Gasoline Alley.

But at daybreak a signal rocket spurts into the gray dawn and Middle America storms through the opened gates.

The Indianapolis 500 says it is the world's largest spectator event, and as the cars whip through the underpasses to break into the infield with a fanfare of horns and blatting mufflers, it's hard to believe the whole country hasn't showed up.

They come for as many reasons as the means of their arrival. Hot-rodders gunning their motorcycles in anticipation of watching the ultimate speed. Families in station wagons setting up picnic hampers under a tree while Dad, in line all night, naps in the growing heat. College kids, sweatshirts labeled in gothic letters, lug in the beer, drinking what they can't carry on the way.

The ghosts are there, too, over on the back turn or there on the home stretch where the jaunty bright colors of a racer suddenly became mangled tin.

Death is a fact of life at Indianapolis, though few who come will admit that's what draws them there. But then, on Memorial Day, 1960, the crowd brings death with it.

J. Parke Randall, a young architect, is a professional photographer only one day a year. Race day at the 500. A racing car buff, he works for the Indianapolis news at the northeast corner of the track, the fastest turn. On the pace lap this day, when upwards of 175,000 fans have turned out for the big race, he begins shooting his Leica as the cars blur past. Then he hears screams behind him where 125 people have paid $5 to $10 to clamber up a 30-foot temporary scaffold of wood and aluminum for a better view.

As the tower begins falling under the weight of jostling spectators, Randall snaps off frame after frame to catch a classic sequence, and 2 more deaths and 70 injured are added to the bloody toll of the Indy 500.

Automakers To Boost Seat Belts

DETROIT (AP) — The nation's four major auto manufacturers have formed a nonprofit educational corporation called Motorists Information Inc., and officials say its first effort will be a heavy educational campaign to increase use of seat belts.

The corporation, which will be headquartered in Detroit, will use advertising and a public education campaign to accomplish its goals.

Louis Bridenstine Jr., executive director, says it also may consider other auto-related public service campaigns of an educational nature.

Hearings On Niles Road Jobs Slated

By JOHN DYE
South Berrien Bureau

NILES — The state highway department has scheduled two meetings here in connection with the proposed widening of a section of US-31-33 and the relocation of a portion of M-51, both in the city.

On Tuesday, Feb. 22, the department will hold an informal meeting on both proposals in the Niles city hall from 2 to 4 p.m., and again from 7 to 9 p.m.

A public hearing has been set for Tuesday, March 1, at 8 p.m. in the Niles community library to hear formal testimony on the US-31-33 (Main street) proposal alone.

Fred Russell, senior district engineer with the department's Portage office, said February's informal meeting will be an effort to explain the state's proposals and to answer any questions about them.

Controversy has arisen over the US-31-33 project, while city officials have long sought the relocation of M-51, Mayor Robert Woodbridge said.

In the case of the Main street project, the city originally asked that the road be resurfaced from Fifth to Ninth streets, the mayor said. Protests surfaced, however, when the state proposed widening the four-block section from its current three lanes to five lanes, he said.

At present four lanes, two north and two south, merge into three lanes at Fifth street, two north and one south. At Ninth, the road widens to five lanes south to state line.

Russell said the state proposed widening to five lanes to help ease a traffic bottleneck and to allow for local traffic left turns.

Niles school officials, Niles Chamber of Commerce and some city council members feel five lanes would eat up valuable business frontage in the four-block area; would pose a potential threat to children attempting to cross the street on their way to school, and would mean the loss of several old trees.

Turning to M-51, Russell said the state has not yet selected a definite route for the proposed relocation.

Currently, M-51 is Fifth street from the north city limits to its end at Main street. City officials would like to see it move to the east, and the state has considered using sections of 12th and 13th streets from Main street to near Pucker street north of the city, Russell said.

By moving M-51 east, motorists could avoid downtown traffic, Russell said.

Written statements or exhibits to be entered at the March public hearing may be sent to Jack Morgan, Manager Public Involvement Section, Mich. Dept. of Highways and Transportation, Lansing, 48909. Written testimony may also be sent to the department within 15 days of the hearing.

Indictment Due, Newspaper Says

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Justice Department has approved prosecution of convicted insurance racketeer Louis C. Ostrer for selling a controversial severance pay-life insurance plan to Teamster locals, says The Des Moines Register.

The Detroit organized crime strike force and U.S. Atty. Philip Van Dam had recommended indictment of Ostrer and others nearly two months ago.

They come for as many reasons as the means of their arrival. Hot-rodders gunning their motorcycles in anticipation of watching the ultimate speed. Families in station wagons setting up picnic hampers under a tree while Dad, in line all night, naps in the growing heat. College kids, sweatshirts labeled in gothic letters, lug in the beer, drinking what they can't carry on the way.

The ghosts are there, too, over on the back turn or there on the home stretch where the jaunty bright colors of a racer suddenly became mangled tin.

Death is a fact of life at Indianapolis, though few who come will admit that's what draws them there. But then, on Memorial Day, 1960, the crowd brings death with it...

J. Parke Randall, a young architect, is a professional photographer only one day a year. Race day at the 500. A racing car buff, he works for the Indianapolis news at the northeast corner of the track, the fastest turn. On the pace lap this day, when upwards of 175,000 fans have turned out for the big race, he begins shooting his Leica as the cars blur past. Then he hears screams behind him where 125 people have paid $5 to $10 to clamber up a 30-foot temporary scaffold of wood and aluminum for a better view.

As the tower begins falling under the weight of jostling spectators, Randall snaps off frame after frame to catch a classic sequence, and 2 more deaths and 70 injured are added to the bloody toll of the Indy 500.

Automakers To Boost Seat Belts

DETROIT (AP) — The nation's four major auto manufacturers have formed a nonprofit educational corporation called Motorists Information Inc., and officials say its first effort will be a heavy educational campaign to increase use of seat belts.

The corporation, which will be headquartered in Detroit, will use advertising and a public education campaign to accomplish its goals.

Louis Bridenstine Jr., executive director, says it also may consider other auto-related public service campaigns of an educational nature.

Hearings On Niles Road Jobs Slated

By JOHN DYE
South Berrien Bureau

NILES — The state highway department has scheduled two meetings here in connection with the proposed widening of a section of US-31-33 and the relocation of a portion of M-51, both in the city.

On Tuesday, Feb. 22, the department will hold an informal meeting on both proposals in the Niles city hall from 2 to 4 p.m., and again from 7 to 9 p.m.

A public hearing has been set for Tuesday, March 1, at 8 p.m. in the Niles community library to hear formal testimony on the US-31-33 (Main street) proposal alone.

Fred Russell, senior district engineer with the department's Portage office, said February's informal meeting will be an effort to explain the state's proposals and to answer any questions about them.

Controversy has arisen over the US-31-33 project, while city officials have long sought the relocation of M-51, Mayor Robert Woodbridge said.

In the case of the Main street project, the city originally asked that the road be resurfaced from Fifth to Ninth streets, the mayor said. Protests surfaced, however, when the state proposed widening the four-block section from its current three lanes to five lanes, he said.

At present four lanes, two north and two south, merge into three lanes at Fifth street, two north and one south. At Ninth, the road widens to five lanes south to state line.

Hussell said the state proposed widening to five lanes to help ease a traffic bottleneck and to allow for local traffic left turns.

Niles school officials, Niles Chamber of Commerce and some city council members feel five lanes would eat up valuable business frontage in the four-block area; would pose a potential threat to children attempting to cross the street on their way to school, and would mean the loss of several old trees.

Turning to M-51, Russell said the state has not yet selected a definite route for the proposed relocation.

Currently, M-51 is Fifth street from the north city limits to its end at Main street. City officials would like to see it move to the east, and the state has considered using sections of 12th and 13th streets from Main street to near Pucker street north of the city, Russell said.

By moving M-51 east, motorists could avoid downtown traffic, Russell said.

Written statements or exhibits to be entered at the March public hearing may be sent to Jack Morgan, Manager Public Involvement Section, Mich. Dept. of Highways and Transportation, Lansing, 48909. Written testimony may also be sent to the department within 15 days of the hearing.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar.

But longer cigarettes usually have more tar. Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.

So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar. Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.

New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.

Legislature Set For Real Work

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan Legislature, coming off a year that prompted much self-congratulation, will try to emulate the 78th two-year session when the 79th starts work in earnest this week.

Most of the action will be in committee, where major bills on political reform, a "sunset" measure, probate and health care reform and others will be sent within the next 10 days.

Most are drafted or are being drafted right now, said House Speaker Bobby D. Crim, D-Davison.

It will take several weeks for those complex, high-priority items to make their way through committee and floor debate and between the House and Senate, Crim predicts.

Committee assignments are slated to be handed down, with no big surprises expected. The Republican-Democratic House committee ratio will tip several seats further in favor of Democrats, who have opened up a 68-42 edge in the chamber.

Crim must fill a slot on the House Appropriations Committee, and indicated he'll do it on the basis of seniority. Two years ago, some low-seniority members got the coveted assignments to ensure representation for the city of Detroit.

"You have to recognize seniority to some extent," Crim said.

The Senate is 23-13 Democratic, with two vacancies, giving Republican Gov. William Milliken an overwhelmingly Democratic legislature to deal with.

The Senate is in the middle of its four-year term, and did not face elections last year. But several events have caused a minor internal upheaval in Democratic ranks.

Two members — one Democrat — were elected to Congress, opening up two slots on the powerful Appropriations Committee.

Sen. Joseph Mack, D-Ironwood, has indicated under pressure he'll give up one of his two key posts — an appropriations position or chairmanship of the Conservation Committee.

And Sen. John Bowman, D-Roseville, is expected to announce soon his resignation from the legislature, vacating the chairmanship of the Taxation Committee.

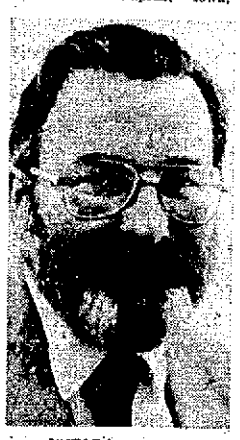

Faust's job is to dole out those crucial spots to members who want them on the basis of seniority while still tying to place talent in the right places.

The internal reorganizations in both chambers will set the stage to deal with Milliken's proposed 1977-78 fiscal year budget, slated to be introduced Monday.

The governor has already declared he will not ask for a general tax increase, and Democrats are not likely to push for one on their own.

Only Two Die On State Roads

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two persons were killed in Michigan traffic accidents this weekend, a record low for the state, according to state police.

Sgt. Jack Warder of the Safety and Traffic Department said the total was the lowest he could remember.

Warder said better road conditions around the state this weekend were largely responsible for the reduced number of deaths. He said there were no bad storms in the state and roads were clear and dry most of the weekend.

Keith Loveille, 15, of Gladstone, was killed Friday night when he was struck by three cars while crossing U.S. 2-U.S. 41 in Delta County's Wells Township.

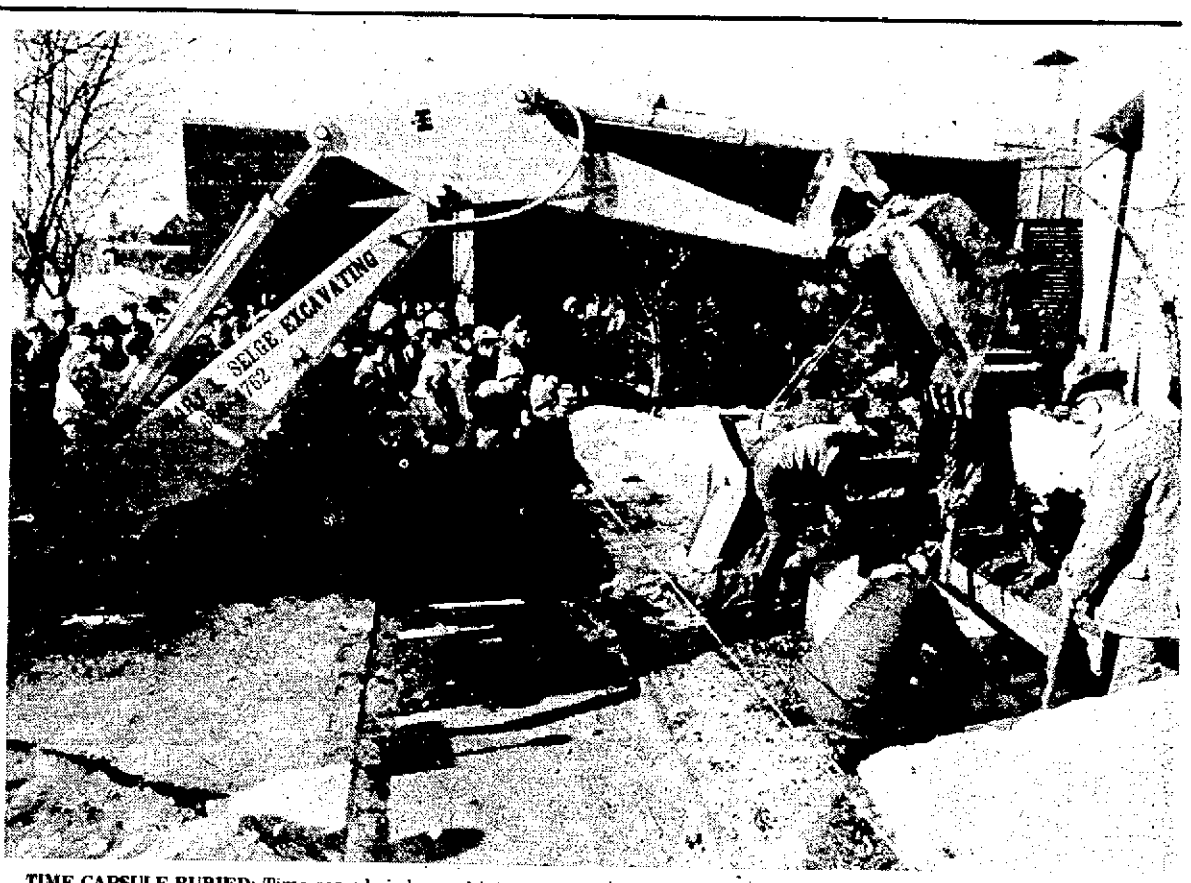

Julie Ann Sunblad, 37, of Southgate, died Saturday when the car she was riding in was involved in a two-car broadside collision.

Police said there was one non-highway fatality. Stella Faulkenber, 56, Rochester, died when her snowmobile collided with another machine on the frozen surface of Houghton Lake on Saturday.

Police said Carol Ann Elliot, 23, Novi, who was driving the other snowmobile, was reported in good condition.

General Phone May Be Told To Trim Rates

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Rates for some 371,000 customers of the General Telephone Co. may be ordered cut back by the state Public Service Commission.

Such action would mark the first time in a decade that telephone rates have been reduced for any Michigan company.

The PSC has been advised by both its staff and an administrative law judge that rates for the state's second largest phone company should be cut, not hiked as the company asked.

The three-man commission could reach a decision today.

While the Muskegon-based utility is seeking a 16 per cent or $10.6 million rate hike, the PSC staff is recommending that rates by cut back by $8.6 million. The proposal from the law judge who reviewed all sides of the question was more modest, suggesting a $200,000 rate reduction.

Customers with single-party service now pay from $7.45 to $10.25 a month.

The company's customers are scattered throughout the state, from Three Rivers in the southwest corner to L'Anse in the Upper Peninsula.

Robert Olstot, head of the PSC's telephone section, said the last rate cuts ordered for telephone companies were in the mid-1960s when the economy was on the upswing and rates were reduced for a series of small companies.

Meanwhile, the PSC also was expected to tell Michigan Bell officially it must refund millions of dollars to its customers because its last rate hike was too high.

The refund action results from some $6 million in arithmetic errors by the commission staff: a multiplication mistake of $2.2 million, and $3.8 million that was left out entirely.

A Bell spokesman said the exact amount has not yet been computed, but the utility probably will have to refund about $2.6 million to customers who paid inflated rates for their phone service between May and November last year.

The refund, averaging less than $1 each to Bell's three million customers, is expected to be in the form of a bill credit to current customers, plus checks to former customers.

If undetected, the errors would have given the company $6 million more a year than it should have received. But Bell customers have paid only part of that in their bills so far.

$3.6 To $3.8 Billion

Milliken Budget May Be Looser

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan's economic horizons appear to be brightening as Gov. William Milliken submits his proposed 1977-78 budget to the legislature today.

The budget, for the 12-month fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, is not expected to be as bare-bones as the one approved for the current year.

Spending will not take a leap forward, however, because Milliken has ruled out a general tax increase, and the economy still is picking up slowly.

Milliken is expected to propose a general fund spending plan of roughly $3.6 billion to $3.8 billion. The addition of restricted money and federal funds will double that figure.

If tradition holds, the legislature will enact the bulk of Milliken's budget in a raucous last-day session next summer.

Last year, Milliken unveiled the tightest state budget in more than a decade — a 4.2 per cent increase to $3.159 billion. The Democratic legislature finally enacted a budget of $3.439 billion, and Milliken's vetoes cut that to $3.389 billion.

Lawmakers are expected once again to increase the governor's proposals. But since the constitution requires balanced books, the legislature must stay within agreed-upon revenue estimates.

Milliken's 1976-77 budget recommendations followed by only weeks his declaration that the state faced a $300 million deficit in the 1975-76 budget. Bargaining with Democrats cut that shortfall to $280 million and lawmakers spent a large part of last year trying to stay in the black.

The legislature finally agreed to accept Milliken's plans for cutting spending, borrowing money from restricted funds and extending the fiscal year three months to pick up some extra cash — at least on paper.

The state also had cut spending in 1975 after enacting its budget.

But there appears to be some relief this time around. Budget Director Gerald Miller reported a slim, but unexpected $28 million surplus for the 15-month fiscal year ending Sept. 30, and budget officials say cutbacks should not be necessary to end the current year in balance — unless the unexpected occurs.

The unexpected could come in the form of a Supreme Court ruling that the state cannot sell bonds to finance construction programs, instead of paying cash, as planned. And the legislature must repeal a slated rollback in the state income tax from 4.6 per cent to 4.4 per cent to avoid losing millions of dollars.

Milliken's opposition to a tax increase will lead some Democrats to say state programs are funded inadequately. But their leaders will not push for a tax hike unless Milliken does.

Other taxes may go up, however. Milliken's message to the legislature will include some sort of tax hike to fund transportation plans. The most likely candidates are the gas tax and license plate fees. Others include taxing cars as personal property and raising the existing weight tax, title transfer tax and a tax on diesel fuel used by railroads.

The gas tax probably would be a two-cent-a-gallon increase.

The single business tax apparently is not pulling in the $900 million to $915 million expected. But Miller says he has figured the $50 million shortage into the new budget and the business tax need not be raised to make the difference.

It might be increased slightly, however, as lawmakers tinker with it in an attempt to ease the burden on small businesses.

Among other items the governor has considered:

—Sunset laws to require periodic justification of state programs.

—New or increased spending for state police patrols on city freeways.

—More money for the arts, the Civil Rights Department, urban grants and transportation.

By SCIENCE RESEARCH ASSOCIATES

Already, new highway signs are telling American drivers it is seven miles or 11.3 kilometers from the airport to downtown Atlanta.

Already, a new car owner discovers that his pride and joy was built in metric units and his speedometer shows both miles per hour and kilometers per hour.

In a school in upstate New York, children weigh themselves in kilograms. A TV meteorologist in Chicago warns that the temperature will rise to 38 degrees Celsius, and that's hot, but sounds cool.

Americans can now order wine by the liter, and for a long time have been taking drugs measured by the milligram, and buying movie film measured by the millimeter — eight or 16.

Much of this quiet revolution began before Dec. 23, 1975, when President Ford signed into law a bill calling for voluntary conversion to metric measures by Americans.

There is no deadline, but things are proceeding millimeter by millimeter, which is slowly.

Many Americans wonder why the change is necessary at all. Many feel wedded to the inch and the mile, familiar with the pound and the quart. They resent strange measures coming into their lives.

But what they fail to realize is that the United States is at least a yard (or maybe a meter?) behind the rest of the world. It is the last large nation to announce that it is converting to metrics.

American scientists, dealing with the rest of the metric world, have been speaking the metric language for a long time. Drug manufacturers switched to metric measures some 20 years ago — and found that staff training was easier, errors less frequent and manufacturing less expensive. The U.S. space agency changed to metric measures in 1970, the first nation to land a man on the moon agreeing finally that the distance should be measured in kilometers.

And finally, in 1971, the U.S. Department of Commerce issued a landmark study that concluded that conversion to metric measures was "a decision whose time had come." It warned that failure to convert would leave the United States isolated in a metric world and at a disadvantage in world trade.

The report called for a coordinated national program and urged "early priority be given to educating every American schoolchild and the public at large to think in metric terms."

How long? The study recommended 10 years, but the final version of the bill passed by Congress gave no time period. Capital observers saw this as a concession to organized labor, protecting its veteran labor, protecting its veteran workers against a "loss of experience" to newly trained workers using metrics. Labor also was said to be concerned over the expense to its members for tools and training.

But one way or another, it would seem that the change is inevitable, for international trade purposes, if no other.

Suppose a foreign customer buys a U.S. car and has to replace a bolt. The bolts in his country have thread spacings in millimeters, and just won't fit as replacements for U.S. bolts measured in threads per inch.

The same is true if a U.S. owner of a foreign car needed millimeter-measured bolts. It's all that simple, a matter of nuts and bolts in the end.

Naturally, a foreign customer is going to think twice about buying a U.S. car, or anything else, if he's likely to end up on a country road somewhere with only millimeter-measured bolts available.

Since the metric system is decimalized, figuring things out is easier than dealing with eighths and sixteenths of an inch. All the metrician has to do is add a zero or move a decimal point.

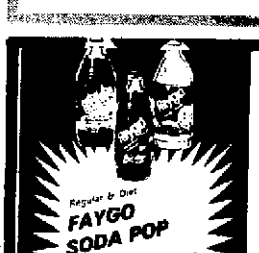

For instance, to change 27 yards to inches, you have to multiply by 36. But to change 27 meters to centimeters, just add two zeroes.

It makes things easier for everyone. Manufacturers can rethink sizes and specifications more easily, leading to lower costs. And it gives everyone, from scientists to the housewife, a common, precise language of measurement.

First In A 10-Part Series

Metric measure, the coming standard in the United States, is outlined in a 10-part series starting today in The Herald-Palladium. Read on, and learn why many people consider the change necessary. In later parts you'll learn basic units of metric measure, and some handy rules of thumb for coping with metrics.

U.S. Is Last Big Nation Converting To Metrics

By SCIENCE RESEARCH ASSOCIATES

Already, new highway signs are telling American drivers it is seven miles or 11.3 kilometers from the airport to downtown Atlanta.

Already, a new car owner discovers that his pride and joy was built in metric units and his speedometer shows both miles per hour and kilometers per hour.

In a school in upstate New York, children weigh themselves in kilograms. A TV meteorologist in Chicago warns that the temperature will rise to 38 degrees Celsius, and that's hot, but sounds cool.

Americans can now order wine by the liter, and for a long time have been taking drugs measured by the milligram, and buying movie film measured by the millimeter — eight or 16.

Much of this quiet revolution began before Dec. 23, 1975, when President Ford signed into law a bill calling for voluntary conversion to metric measures by Americans.

There is no deadline, but things are proceeding millimeter by millimeter, which is slowly.

Many Americans wonder why the change is necessary at all. Many feel wedded to the inch and the mile, familiar with the pound and the quart. They resent strange measures coming into their lives.

But what they fail to realize is that the United States is at least a yard (or maybe a meter?) behind the rest of the world. It is the last large nation to announce that it is converting to metrics.

American scientists, dealing with the rest of the metric world, have been speaking the metric language for a long time. Drug manufacturers switched to metric measures some 20 years ago — and found that staff training was easier, errors less frequent and manufacturing less expensive. The U.S. space agency changed to metric measures in 1970, the first nation to land a man on the moon agreeing finally that the distance should be measured in kilometers.

And finally, in 1971, the U.S. Department of Commerce issued a landmark study that concluded that conversion to metric measures was "a decision whose time had come." It warned that failure to convert would leave the United States isolated in a metric world and at a disadvantage in world trade.

The report called for a coordinated national program and urged "early priority be given to educating every American schoolchild and the public at large to think in metric terms."

NAACP Request Rejected

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. District Judge Robert E. DeMascio has rejected a request from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that he remove himself from the Detroit school integration case. "We are not surprised at his insensitivity," said an unhappy Louis R. Lucas, chief attorney for the NAACP. Lucas said he would ask the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati to force DeMascio to step aside. In a 26-page opinion, DeMascio said neither he nor three experts who worked for him in the case "committed any improprieties." The NAACP contended DeMascio erred Aug. 15, 1975 when he gave an attorney for the Detroit school board a copy of his opinion in the Detroit school busing case a day before it was made available to other attorneys or the press.

Hubby Fires Her

LONDON (AP) — Broadway star Donna McKechnie won't be performing the lead role in the British production of "A Chorus Line" here after all — she's been fired by her husband, American director Michael Bennett.

NAACP Request Rejected

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. District Judge Robert E. DeMascio has rejected a request from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that he remove himself from the Detroit school integration case. "We are not surprised at his insensitivity," said an unhappy Louis R. Lucas, chief attorney for the NAACP. Lucas said he would ask the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati to force DeMascio to step aside. In a 26-page opinion, DeMascio said neither he nor three experts who worked for him in the case "committed any improprieties." The NAACP contended DeMascio erred Aug. 15, 1975 when he gave an attorney for the Detroit school board a copy of his opinion in the Detroit school busing case a day before it was made available to other attorneys or the press.

NEWS OF MARKETS

Market Moves Ahead

NEW YORK (AP) — A letup in concern over the interest rate outlook helped the stock market move ahead today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose about a point at the outset, and gainers took a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

After the NYSE closed Friday, the Federal Reserve reported a decline in the basic measure of the money supply.

Analysts said that news eased fears that the Fed might soon tighten up a bit on credit by fostering a rise in short term interest rates.

Another plus was a published report that President Carter's plan for economic stimulus might include an increase in the investment tax credit.

American Airlines reported a $56 million profit for 1976 against a $22.4 million loss in 1975

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average posted a 3.40 gain to 962.43, reducing its loss for the week to 9.73 points.

Advances outnumbered declines by about a 5-3 margin on the NYSE.

Bendix May Build Plant In Russia

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — The Bendix Corp. says it is negotiating with the Russians to build a spark plug plant in the Soviet Union.

A company spokesman said some of the negotiations were conducted by W. Michael Blumenthal, who was chairman of the firm before being selected by President Carter as treasury secretary.

The spokesman said discussions with the Russians about the spark plug facility have been going on for about a year, he said, but details on the project cannot yet be made public.

The discussions, he added, include having the plant produce spark plugs for export as well as for internal Soviet needs.

Earnings Up Sharply For AMC

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors reported first-quarter earnings today of $1.2 million, up substantially from the record losses in the final quarter of the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30.

The October-December earnings, equal to four cents a share, is down from first quarter earnings of $7.5 million, or 25 cents a share, in the 1976 fiscal year.

AMC reported sales for the first quarter of 1977 were $550 million, compared with $615 million in 1976.

AMC has lost $73.8 million dollars in the past two fiscal years.

Company Chairman Roy Chapin Jr. and President William Luneburg said the $1.2 million profit was the result of continued cost reduction programs to lower the automotive break even point and continued profitability of various subsidiaries.

Chapin and Luneburg cited profits from AM General Corp., which produces trucks, postal service vehicles and buses, and from lawn and garden tractor and plastics industries. They also reported $800,000 of net gains from the company's foreign operations as a result of currency fluctuations.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Financial Adviser Has Rocks In Head

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I was advised by an insurance agent-financial adviser to increase my mortgage by $10,000 to $37,000 at 8 per cent interest and invest the $10,000 in 10 per cent commercial paper. I'm 35, married, with two children, and earn $22,000.

A. Big deal! The $10,000 in commercial paper will earn you $1,000 a year from what I must assume is a risky investment. The new, higher mortgage will cost you $309.49 a month, or $3,713.88 a year for the next 20 years (as against the present mortgage cost of $225.84 a month, or $2,610.68 a year). So you are paying out more than $1,000 a year extra to service the new higher mortgage. Part of that, of course (a couple of hundred dollars), is amortization or "forced savings."

The income tax advantage is less than "nonexistent" since you would be getting an additional deduction of $800 (8 per cent on the increased $10,000 debt) but paying taxes on $1,000 interest income. And for that you would be saddling yourself with $10,000 more of very real debt, offset by a risky investment. That's what I would describe as a healthy body crawling into a sickbed. The guy has rocks in his head.

+ + +

Q. Could you please tell me whether the Treasury 3½ per cent of '85 and the 4 per cent of '80 bonds will pay my Federal estate taxes at par?

A. Yes, they are both on the "flower" bond list.

+ + +

Q. Where can one invest money at interest for 100 per cent safety?

A. Insured savings institutions, Treasury bonds or bills.

+ + +

Q. We are $5 with savings of $25,000 realized from the sale of our home. What would be the wisest way to invest it to work for our retirement — savings, E or H bonds? We'd like to leave it undisturbed until retirement.

A. There is no "wisest" way — anymore than there is a "best" car for you to buy, or a "best" TV set.

You could put the money into insured savings accounts at, say, 7½ per cent for a 6- or 7-year term and you would now know — to the penny — how much money you will have when you retire at age 62. What you won't know until 1984 is how much money you will need to live on in retirement.

The same would be true of E bonds — which will grow at 6 per cent a year with (if you so elect) all income taxes on that annual accrual deferred until you redeem the bonds, or the H bonds for which your may exchange them. (H bonds wouldn't be the answer now, since you're "putting" into your retirement nest egg, not "taking.") Both programs — savings and E bonds — could, of course, be left "undisturbed."

If you want to attempt to build a retirement nest egg which, you hope, will bear some relationship to the cost of living in 1984 and thereafter, you will have to go into the very "disturbing" world of common shares (or real estate) or whatever property you hope will grow in market price as the dollar shrinks. I doubt that you can leave such a program "undisturbed" for that length of time... or that you can know now how much money you will accumulate when you come to retirement day.

+ + +

MR. SHULSKY welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

For information on retirement, and pre-retirement planning, please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address your requests to Sam Shulsky, care of this newspaper.

Carson Files Suit Over Other 'John'

DETROIT (AP) — Talk-show host Johnny Carson may use a little off-color humor now and then, but he doesn't see anything funny about his name being stamped on the side of a portable toilet.

Last year the self-proclaimed King of the Porta-Johns, brought out a new line of low-cost latrines called "Here's Johnny!" — the words used by announcer Ed McMahon to announce Carson each night.

Braxton said he had attorneys research the slogan, and even got approval from the U.S. patent office before using it.

But lawyers for Carson and for Johnny Carson Apparel, Inc., in Buffalo, N.Y., are charging "trademark infringement, invasion of privacy and unfair competition." The suit asks for $1.1 million in damages, as well as all the profits Braxton's firm has realized from the new line.

Cleared In Decapitations

DETROIT (AP) — A former assistant Wayne County medical examiner has been cleared of charges he decapitated 11 bodies. The charges against Dr. Millard Bass were dismissed Saturday following testimony by a Wayne State University professor that he directed the heads be removed from six of the bodies for further study. Nicholas J. Mizeres, head of the university's anatomy department, said the heads were from bodies donated for research. Mizeres said he discovered the heads were in Bass' possession when he accompanied police with a search warrant to a room on the Wayne campus last May. Bass still faces charges he mutilated corpses by stripping the flesh from 14 bodies donated to the university. Mutilating a corpse is a felony punishable by 10 years' imprisonment in Michigan. He also faces charges of decapitating a 24-year-old Detroit woman whose body has since been exhumed from a cemetery near Ann Arbor.

Foreigners Buy Many U.S. Plants

NEW YORK (AP) — Volkswagen's decision to build an auto factory in Pennsylvania was one of the major developments in a year in which foreign companies built, expanded or bought up 250 manufacturing facilities in the United States last year, a private economic research group said Sunday.

The 250 investments during 1976 was the second biggest number by foreign companies in the nine years that the the research group, the Conference Board, has been keeping records.

In 1975, the board said, there were 150 investments announced. The year before saw the greatest number, 252.

Spending figures were available for 132 of last year's transactions and they totaled $1.7 billion, the board said.

In about 43 per cent of the investments, the foreign company acquired an existing American company. Forty per cent of the deals involved constructing new facilities here and 17 per cent were expansions of existing foreign facilities here.

Canada was the most active, accounting for 61 of the investments, followed by West Germany with 39, United Kingdom with 36, France, 25 and Japan 18.

New York was the favored site, drawing 48 of the investments. California was next with 17; then New Jersey, 15; Michigan and Pennsylvania, 12 each; Illinois, 10; South Carolina and Virginia, nine each and Georgia, eight.

The VW commitment in Pennsylvania was for more than $200 million.

Stock Market 'Biggies' Taper Off

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Stock Exchange has found what it wanted to find in its latest examination of public trading, that the growth of institutional activity might have slowed.

Not that it doesn't want the business of these money-rich organizations, but it also wants the business of individuals, who provide the random activity that enables the exchange to match buy with sell orders.

Institutions are bad for liquidity. They tend to think alike. They analyze the same companies in the same manner, and so they tend to buy and sell the same stocks at the same time.

Moreover, they seem inclined to buy and sell merely because the other institutions are buying and selling. Sometimes they analyze their competitors more than they analyze the stocks in their own portfolios.

This being so, there is a tendency for institutions such as mutual and pension funds, insurers, commercial banks and trust companies, to gather on one side or the other, to congregate as buyers or sellers.

You can see, therefore, why the Big Board, which likes to think of itself as the world's most important daily auction, likes those individuals who do their own thinking and thus provide a random assortment of orders.

An auction market with all buyers or all sellers doesn't work very well. But an auction market that has a great variety of buy orders at assorted prices, and a variety or sell orders at assorted prices, can get the job done.

During the 1950s and the 1960s, the growth of institutions was swift, transforming the market in the process. By the 1970s the mix of activity had become 60 per cent institutional, 40 per cent individual.

But this told only part of the story. These institutions accounted for even more of daily activity when that activity was measured in dollar terms. Sometimes the percentage rose to 80 per cent or more.

Now the exchange reports that there has been little change in the volume percentages in the past few years. The latest study shows 57 per cent of activity accounted for by institutions, 43 per cent by individuals.

Nevertheless, the dollar figures remain very high. Seventy per cent of the estimated daily average in dollar terms was accounted for by institutions, and only 30 per cent by individuals.

The exchange, therefore, is still an auction market dominated by the big money, and the big money game often is not the place for individuals. Big money accounts for big and sudden price changes, and that means the potential is still there for the individual being stripped of his wealth before he can act.

But in that case, you might say, the individual doesn't belong in the market, and that really might be the most important point to be gained from this latest study.

But there are other points to be made too: The stock market needs individuals if it is to maintain orderly prices; and secondly, the individual has a perfect right to seek his fortune in the market, no matter the risks.

In fact, a good many individuals are a match for the institutions. They are knowledgeable both about the companies in which they invest and the eccentricities of the stock market. They know how to invest. They know how to trade.

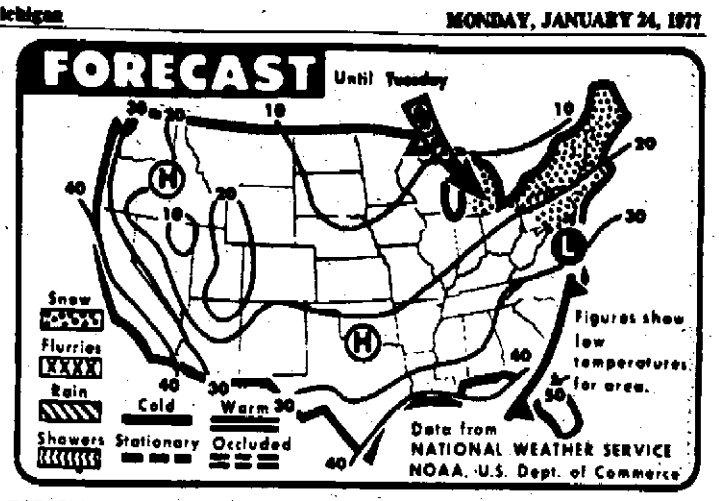

But for the millions of uninformed individuals who look upon the market as a great gambling casino, those 70-30 percentages should serve as a warning about the dangers.

QUESTIONS FOR SPECULATORS

As our economy expands at an accelerating pace to new peaks in coming months and confidence in the nation's economic health grows, speculative ventures and mergers will multiply. And as always, countless numbers of you will be lured into risking part or all of your nestegg in enterprises which are questionable at best. This has been the traditional pattern of the past. This will be the pattern of the near future.

What are the odds that you will find a successful speculative investment?

In fact, you should be prepared to investigate as many as 100 new business proposals to uncover one venture that could eventually "pay off," adds Oakland's president. Oakland is among the nation's largest independent financial counseling firms for executives and professionals, offering counseling services only and selling no "product," such as insurance or investments.

The speculative scene is still quiet, tthe excitement has not yet come, there certainly is no blow-off going on in new stock issues, and any flood of "garbage" deals has not developed to date. Now, therefore, is the time for you to prepare a checklist of what Gatewood calls "hard-nosed questions" to ask yourself before you go into any speculative enterprise. Among them:

(1) What is your personal liability if the deal collapses? "Limit your liability to your investment," Gatewood cautions.

(2) How much control over the enterprise do you, the investors, exercise? Little or no investor control is a sure danger signal — and a signal you can easily read.

(3) How much commission, if any, is paid to company officers and to salesmen? If commissions routinely run more than 10 per cent, that too should be a red flag to you.

(4) Are you, personally, comfortable with this type of investment? Is it too speculative? Or is it too ordinary? Is the company or product one that you would find an embarrassment, should your association become known? Say, an X-rated film distribution company or a firm specializing in pornographic magazines?

(5) What kind of financial track record does the management have? What is the financial history and background of key officials of the company? Have any of them been involved in any previous ventures that went bankrupt?

And if the vaenture in which you are innvesting really equivalent to going into business for yourself, heed these warnings on top of all the other cautions:

— Even when the U.S. is in a phase of major, pervasive prosperity, the odds that a new business will survive for even two years are only 50-50.

— Each year, hundreds of thousands of small businesses go bankrupt. The apparent causes may be: heavy operating expenses, a poor location, a rise in competition, excessive fixed assets, an unanticipated slump in sales.

— But the underlying causes of "business failures in an overwhelming nine cases out of 10 are: the management's incompetence, inexperience, ineptitude. All the other causes of business failures can be bunched into that minor 10 per cent, including neglect, fraud and disaster.

Saks Faces Charges Of Price Fixing

DETROIT (AP) — Saks Fifth Avenue, a fashionable department store, was accused Friday in a federal court suit of fixing prices on its women's clothing line.

The suit asked for a court order to stop the alleged price fixing and for payment of damages, but set no dollar amount.

The suit charges that Saks has conspired with other stores and clothing wholesalers to "raise, fix, stabilize and maintain retail prices of women's clothing."

Attorneys said the suit is much like one filed against Saks and two other stores in New York in 1974. Saks and the other stores settled that suit for $5.2 million.

Saks attorney, Eugene Gordon said the 1974 suit was settled without admitting guilt because "anti-trust cases involve a tremendous amount of attorney fees and executive time.

The class action suit was filed on behalf of Carolyn Campbell and all other charge account customers of the store. She was identified only as a Detroit resident attending law school outside the Detroit area.

Breakfast Study Has Laid Egg

WASHINGTON (AP) — Do you know how long it takes to break an egg so you can cook it for breakfast?

The Department of Agriculture does, and Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., says the department has been wasting your money to find out. Proxmire gave the department his monthly "Golden Fleece" award today for the first of three studies designed to determine how long it takes to prepare breakfasts, lunches and dinners.

The department said the information would help restaurants schedule employes and control labor costs. Department officials said the studies of all three meals would cost $45,000, but the National Taxpayers' Union said the breakfast study alone would come to $46,000.

Either way, Prommire said he's against it. "If members of the food service industry can use this information, let them pay for it," he said.

To get back to that egg, in case you were wondering, the department calculated it would take just a shade over half a second to break it against the bowl.

Market Moves Ahead

NEW YORK (AP) — A letup in concern over the interest rate outlook helped the stock market move ahead today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose about a point at the outset, and gainers took a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

After the NYSE closed Friday, the Federal Reserve reported a decline in the basic measure of the money supply.

Analysts said that news eased fears that the Fed might soon tighten up a bit on credit by fostering a rise in short term interest rates.

Another plus was a published report that President Carter's plan for economic stimulus might include an increase in the investment tax credit.

American Airlines reported a $56 million profit for 1976 against a $22.4 million loss in 1975

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average posted a 3.40 gain to 962.43, reducing its loss for the week to 9.73 points.

Advances outnumbered declines by about a 5-3 margin on the NYSE.

Stock Market 'Biggies' Taper Off

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Stock Exchange has found what it wanted to find in its latest examination of public trading, that the growth of institutional activity might have slowed.

Not that it doesn't want the business of these money-rich organizations, but it also wants the business of individuals, who provide the random activity that enables the exchange to match buy with sell orders.

Institutions are bad for liquidity. They tend to think alike. They analyze the same companies in the same manner, and so they tend to buy and sell the same stocks at the same time.

Moreover, they seem inclined to buy and sell merely because the other institutions are buying and selling. Sometimes they analyze their competitors more than they analyze the stocks in their own portfolios.

This being so, there is a tendency for institutions such as mutual and pension funds, insurers, commercial banks and trust companies, to gather on one side or the other, to congregate as buyers or sellers.

You can see, therefore, why the Big Board, which likes to think of itself as the world's most important daily auction, likes those individuals who do their own thinking and thus provide a random assortment of orders.

An auction market with all buyers or all sellers doesn't work very well. But an auction market that has a great variety of buy orders at assorted prices, and a variety or sell orders at assorted prices, can get the job done.

During the 1950s and the 1960s, the growth of institutions was swift, transforming the market in the process. By the 1970s the mix of activity had become 60 per cent instututional, 40 per cent individual.

But this told only part of the story. These institutions accounted for even more of daily activity when that activity was measured in dollar terms. Sometimes the percentage rose to 80 per cent or more.

Now the exchange reports that there has been little change in the volume percentages in the past few years. The latest study shows 57 per cent of activity accounted for by institutions, 43 per cent by individuals.

Nevertheless, the dollar figures remain very high. Seventy per cent of the estimated daily average in dollar terms was accounted for by institutions, and only 30 per cent by individuals.

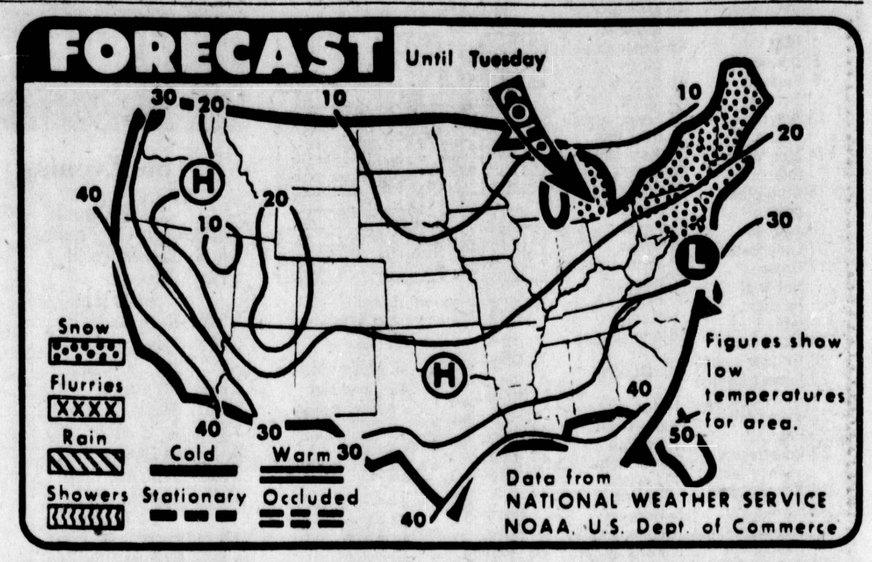

The exchange, therefore, is still an auction market dominated by the big money, and the big money game often is not the place for individuals. Big money accounts for big and sudden price changes, and that means the potential is still there for the individual being stripped of his wealth before he can act.

But in that case, you might say, the individual doesn't belong in the market, and that really might be the most important point to be gained from this latest study.

But there are other points to be made too: The stock market needs individuals if it is to maintain orderly prices; and secondly, the individual has a perfect right to seek his fortune in the market, no matter the risks.

In fact, a good many individuals are a match for the institutions. They are knowledgeable both about the companies in which they invest and the eccentricites of the stock market. They know how to invest. They know how to trade.

But for the millions of uninformed individuals who look upon the market as a great gambling casino, those 70-30 percentages should serve as a warning about the dangers.

Foreigners Buy Many U.S. Plants

NEW YORK (AP) — Volkswagen's decision to build an auto factory in Pennsylvania was one of the major developments in a year in which foreign companies built, expanded or bought up 250 manufacturing facilities in the United States last year, a private economic research group said Sunday.

The 250 investments during 1976 was the second biggest number by foreign companies in the nine years that the the research group, the Conference Board, has been keeping records.

In 1975, the board said, there were 150 investments announced. The year before saw the greatest number, 252.

Spending figures were available for 132 of last year's transactions and they totaled $1.7 billion, the board said.

In about 43 per cent of the investments, the foreign company acquired an existing American company. Forty per cent of the deals involved constructing new facilities here and 17 per cent were expansions of existing foreign facilities here.

Canada was the most active, accounting for 61 of the investments, followed by West Germany with 39, United Kingdom with 36, France, 25 and Japan 18.

New York was the favored site, drawing 48 of the investments. California was next with 17; then New Jersey, 15; Michigan and Pennsyulvania, 12 each; Illinois, 10; South Carolina and Virginia, nine each and Georgia, eight.

The VW commitment in Pennsylvania was for more than $200 million.

Bendix May Build Plant In Russia

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — The Bendix Corp. says it is negotiating with the Russians to build a spark plug plant in the Soviet Union.

A company spokesman said some of the negotiations were conducted by W. Michael Blumenthal, who was chairman of the firm before being selected by President Carter as treasury secretary.

The spokesman said discussions with the Russians about the spark plug facility have been going on for about a year, he said, but details on the project cannot yet be made public.

The discussions, he added, include having the plant produce spark plugs for export as well as for internal Soviet needs.

Earnings Up Sharply For AMC

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors reported first-quarter earnings today of $1.2 million, up substantially from the record losses in the final quarter of the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30.

AMC lost $51.1 million in the July-September period to finish in the red for the second consecutive fiscal year.

The October-December earnings, equal to four cents a share, is down from first quarter earnings of $7.5 million, or 25 cents a share, in the 1976 fiscal year.

AMC reported sales for the first quarter of 1977 were $559 million, compared with $615 million in 1976.

AMC has lost $73.8 million dollars in the past two fiscal years.

Company Chairman Roy Chapin Jr. and President William Luneburg said the $1.2 million profit was the result of continued cost reduction programs to lower the automotive break even point and continued profitability of various subsidiaries.

Chapin and Luneburg cited profits from AM General Corp., which produces trucks, postal service vehicles and buses, and from lawn and garden tractor and plastics industries. They also reported $600,000 of net gains from the company's foreign operations as a result of currency fluctuations.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Financial Adviser Has Rocks In Head

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I was advised by an insurance agent-financial advisor to increase my mortgage by $10,000 to $37,000 at 8 per cent interest and invest the $10,000 in 10 per cent commercial paper. I'm 35, married, with two children, and earn $22,000.

A. Big deal! The $10,000 in commercial paper will earn you $1,000 a year from what I must assume is a risky investment. The new, higher mortgage will cost you $309.49 a month, or $3,713.88 a year for the next 20 years (as against the present mortgage cost of $225.84 a month, or $2,610.68 a year). So you are paying out more than $1,000 a year extra to service the new higher mortgage. Part of that, of course (a couple of hundred dollars), is amortization or "forced savings."

The income tax advantage is less than "nonexistent" since you would be getting an additional deduction of $800 (8 per cent on the increased $10,000 debt) but paying taxes on $1,000 interest income. And for that you would be saddling yourself with $10,000 more of very real debt, offset by a risky investment. That's what I would describe as a healthy body crawling into a sickbed. The guy has rocks in his head.

+ + +

Q. Could you please tell me whether the Treasury 3¼ per cent of '85 and the 4 per cent of '80 bonds will pay my Federal estate taxes at par?

A. Yes, they are both on the "flower" bond list.

+ + +

Q. Where can one invest money at interest for 100 per cent safety?

A. Insured savings institutions, Treasury bonds or bills.

+ + +

Q. We are 55 with savings of $25,000 realized from the sale of our home. What would be the wisest way to invest it to work for our retirement — savings, E or H bonds? We'd like to leave it undisturbed until retirement.

A. There is no "wisest" way — anymore than there is a "best" car for you to buy, or a "best" TV set.

You could put the money into insured savings accounts at, say, 7½ per cent for a 6- or 7-year term and you would now know — to the penny — how much money you will have when you retire at age 62. What you won't know until 1984 is how much money you will need to live on in retirement.

The same would be true of E bonds — which will grow at 6 per cent a year with (if you so elect) all income taxes on that annual accrual deferred until you redeem the bonds, or the H bonds for which your may exchange them. (H bonds wouldn't be the answer now, since you're "putting" into your retirement nest egg, not "taking.") Both programs — savings and E bonds — could, of course, be left "undistrubed."

If you want to attempt to build a retirement nest egg which, you hope, will bear some relationship to the cost of living in 1984 and thereafter, you will have to go into the very "disturbing" world of common shares (or real estate) or whatever property you hope will grow in market price as the dollar shrinks. I doubt that you can leave such a program "undisturbed" for that length of time... or that you can know now how much money you will accumulate when you come to retirement day.

+ + +

MR. SHULSKY welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

For information on retirement, and pre-retirement planning, please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address your requests to Sam Shulsky, care of this newspaper.

Carson Files Suit Over Other 'John'

DETROIT (AP) — Talk-show host Johnny Carson may use a little off-color humor now and then, but he doesn't see anything funny about his name being stamped on the side of a portable toilet.

Braxton, 36, has been in the outdoor latrine business for nearly six years.

Last year the self-proclaimed King of the Porta-Johns, brought out a new line of low-cost latrines called "Here's Johnny!" — the words used by announcer Ed McMahon to announce Carson each night.

Braxton said he had attorneys research the slogan, and even got approval from the U.S. patent office before using it.

But lawyers for Carson and for Johnny Carson Apparel, Inc., in Buffalo, N.Y., are charging "trademark infringment, invasion of privacy and unfair competition." The suit asks for $1.1 million in damages, as well as all the profits Braxton's firm has realized from the new line.

Cleared In Decapitations

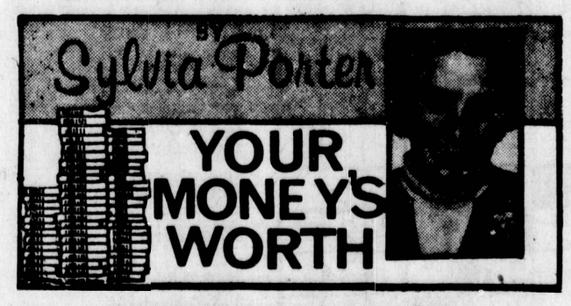

DETROIT (AP) — A former assistant Wayne County medical examiner has been cleared of charges he decapitated 11 bodies. The charges against Dr. Millard Bass were dismissed Saturday following testimony by a Wayne State University professor that he directed the heads be removed from six of the bodies for further study. Nicholas J. Mizeres, head of the university's anatomy department, said the heads were from bodies donated for research. Mizeres said he discovered the heads were in Bass' possession when he accompanied police with a search warrant to a room on the Wayne campus last May. Bass still faces charges he mutilated corpses by stripping the flesh from 14 bodies donated to the university. Mutilating a corpse is a felony punishable by 10 years' imprisonment in Michigan. He also faces charges of decapitating a 24-year-old Detroit woman whose body has since been exhumed from a cemetery near Ann Arbor

QUESTIONS FOR SPECULATORS

As our economy expands at an accelerating pace to new peaks in coming months and confidence in the nation's economic health grows, speculative ventures and mergers will multiply. And as always, countless numbers of you will be lured into risking part or all of your nesteggs in enterprises which are questionable at best. This has been the traditional pattern of the past. This will be the pattern of the near future.

What are the odds that you will find a successful speculative investment?

In fact, you should be prepared to investigate as many as 100 new business proposals to uncover one venture that could eventually "pay off," adds Oakland's president. Oakland is among the nation's largest independent financial counseling firms for executives and professionals, offering counseling services only and selling no "product," such as insurance or investments.

The speculative scene is still quiet, tthe excitement has not yet come, there certainly is no blow-off going on in new stock issues, and any flood of "garbage" deals has not developed to date. Now, therefore, is the time for you to prepare a checklist of what Gatewood calls "hard-nosed questions" to ask yourself before you go into any speculative enterprise. Among them:

(1) What is your personal liability if the deal collapses? "Limit your liability to your investment," Gatewood cautions.

(2) How much control over the enterprise do you, the investors, exercise? Little or no investor control is a sure danger signal — and a signal you can easily read.

(3) How much commission, if any, is paid to company officers and to salesmen? If commissions routinely run more than 10 per cent, that too should be a red flag to you.

(4) Are you, personally, comfortable with this type of investment? Is it too speculative? Or is it too ordinary? Is the company or product one that you would find an embarrassment, should your association become known? Say, an X-rated film distribution company or a firm specializing in pornographic magazines?

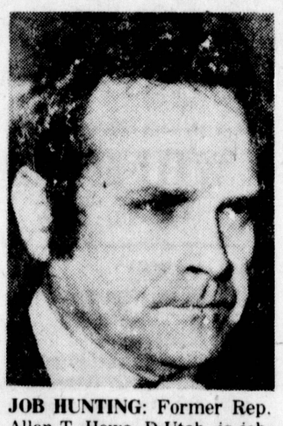

(5) What kind of financial track record does the management have? What is the financial histtory and background of key officials of the company? Have any of them been involved in any previous ventures that went bankrupt?

And if the vaentture in which you are innvesting really equivalent to going into business for yourself, heed these warnings on top of all the other cautions:

— Even when the U.S. is in a phase of major, pervasive prosperity, the odds that a new business will survive for even two years are only 50-50.

— Each year, hundreds of thousands of small businesses go bankrupt. The apparent causes may be: heavy operating expenses, a poor location, a rise in competition, excessive fixed assets, an unanticipated slump in sales.

— But the underlying causes of business failures in an overwhelming nine cases out of 10 are: the management's incompetence, inexperience, ineptitude. All the other causes of business failures can be buncoed into ihat minor 10 per cent, including neglect, fraud anu disaster.

Saks Faces Charges Of Price Fixing

DETROIT (AP) — Saks Fifth Avenue, a fashionable department store, was accused Friday in a federal court suit of fixing prices on its women's clothing line.

The suit asked for a court order to stop the alleged price fixing and for payment of damages, but set no dollar amount.

The suit charges that Saks has conspired with other stores and clothing wholesalers to "raise, fix, stablilize and maintain retail prices of women's clothing."

Attorneys said the suit is much like one filed against Saks and two other stores in New York in 1974. Saks and the other stores settled that suit for $5.2 million.

Saks attorney, Eugene Gordon said the 1974 suit was settled without admitting guilt because "anti-trust cases involve a tremendous amount of attorney fees and executive time.

The class action suit was filed on behalf of Carolyn Campbell and all other charge account customers of the store. She was identified only as a Detroit resident attending law school outside the Detroit area.

Breakfast Study Has Laid Egg

WASHINGTON (AP) — Do you know how long it takes to break an egg so you can cook it for breakfast?

The Department of Agriculture does, and Sen. William Proximire, D-Wis., says the department has been wasting your money to find out. Proxmire gave the department his monthly "Golden Fleeee" award today for the first of three studies designed to determine how long it takes to prepare breakfasts, lunches and dinners.

The department said the information would help restaurants schedule employes and control labor costs. Department officials said the studies of all three meals would cost $45,000, but the National Taxpayers' Union said the breakfast study alone would come to $46,000.

Either way, Prommire said he's against it. "If members of the food service industry can use this information, let them pay for it," he said.

To get back to that egg, in case you were wondering, the department calculated it would take just a shade over half a second to break it against the bowl.

MILAN, Mich. (AP) — Edward C. Wasem might be called Michigan's Apple Man of 1977. He certainly will be one of the busiest fruit farmers in the state this year. The 63-year-old Wasem is chairman of the Michigan Apple Committee and a director of the International Apple Institute. He also is president of the Michigan State Horticultural Society. A native of Ohio, and trained as an engineer, Wassem and his wife, Leola, moved to the Milan area in 1942 when he went to work for a camera company in Ann Arbor.

After World War II, Wasem decided he wanted to be his own boss, so he and his wife went into truck farming fulltime. The switch to fruit took place during the 1950s. Wasem, who also raises peaches and cherries, was the first grower in the state to plant semidwarf trees in large numbers. Until he tried it, the area was not considered suitable for growing apples because of its lack of hills.

Wasem markets his apple crop several ways. There's a retail store selling apples and cider on the farm, and customers can pick their own apples if they wish. His apples and cider also are sold at the farmers' market in Ann Arbor.

About 80 per cent of the crop is packaged and sold in the eastern U.S. through a Maryland-based broker. He also packages and delivers some apples under his own name for stores in the Hillsdale and Hudson area.

The aim of the apple committee is to sell more apples. For that purpose, it usually spends about $140,000 a year on advertising and promotion. The committee is supported by a mandatory assessment paid by growers of one cent per 100 pounds of cider, eight cents per 100 pounds of fresh apples and four cents per 100 pounds of processed apples.

In normal times, that brings in about $300,000 a year from about 15 million bushels of apples. But drought reduced this year's crop, and income will only be about $200,000. As a result, there will be a big cut in the advertising budget. Michigan ranks third in apple production. Washington State produces about 50 million bushels and New York State some 23 million bushels.

Auto Antitrust Suit Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal antitrust complaint is expected to be filed against the auto industry within a year, according to Booth Newspapers Inc. The washington bureau of the newspaper group reported Sunday that Federal Trade Commission lawyers probing anticompetitive practices are moving faster than at first expected.

Industry and economic sources were quoted as saying the broad investigation of the auto companies which began Aug. 3 originally had been expected to take two years.

But the probe is moving so rapidly that it could reach the complaint stage in half that time, Booth reported.

Ford Motor Co. is so worried about the investigation that No. 2 automaker has started recuriting antitrust lawyers and economists in preparation for a prolonged fight, Booth reported. Refusing comment were Ford lawyers and Rod Markley, Ford's chief Washington lobbyist.

The auto companies are increasingly worried by the nature and volume of records being subpoenaed by the FTC, Booth also reported. The industry fears the once-broad probe is focusing on the fact that GM and Ford control more than 80 per cent of the nation's auto sales.

When the probe is finished, the FTC staff will present recommendations to the agency's five commissioners. It takes a majority vote to adopt a formal complaint.

Auto executives greeted news of the FTC probe last August with a "here-we-go-again" reaction. They contended that repeated investigations by government agencies had failed to turn up evidence of antitrust violations.

But the FTC is drawing on voluminous files turned over to the agency by the U.S. Justice Department, which has kept the industry under almost continual surveillance since the 1950s. The Justice Department wanted to file suit against the auto industry a decade ago, but the Johnson administration vetoed the move.

Last July, the Justice Department suspended its own probe and gave its files to the FTC. They contain data on anto pricing, profits, unit-cost economies and distribution practices.

Antitrust lawyers maintain there is no ture price competition in the auto industry. If they can show this came about because of the existence of a "shared monopoly," they could call for breaking up the auto industry into a large number of smaller companies.

Other less drastic remedies include limiting divestiture of supplier affiliates; consent orders to halt any price-fixing activity; and agreeneints to end exclusionary practices involving dealer franchises and the availability of parts.

The probe is the FTC's first full-scale examination of the auto industry in more than 30 years.

Area Arrests And Other Police News

Police said they found several people fighting about 1:10 a.m. and made the arrests while breaking up the disturbance.

A 16-year-old girl was released to the custody of her parents after treatment for a cut sustained in the scuffle. She also was petitioned to juvenile court on a charge of drunk and disorderly and disorderly person. Booked at the Berrien county jail on the same charges was a man identified as Ester L. Guilty, 32, of Chicago.

A Benton Harbor man was hospitalized Saturday with a gunshot wound in the foot, and another Benton Harbor man was arrested on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder, city police reported.

Reported in "good" condition today at Mercy hospital was Frank Joshua, 43, of 365 Territorial road. Booked at the Berrien county jail was Jessie James Jones, for whom police listed two ages, 39 and 37, also of 365 Territorial.

Police said a .22 caliber rifle believed used in the shooting was confiscated. The shooting followed an apparent argument at 365 Territorial, police said.

Sgt. James Bale and Deputy Tom Page said a man attempted to flee after they stopped a car on Fair avenue for a defective exhaust system.

Hatten was booked on charges of resisting arrest, driving with a suspended operator's license, and possession of open intoxicants in an auto, and an outstanding traffic warrant held by Covert township police.

Also booked on a charge of possession of open intoxicants in an auto was a man identified as Seccell Jones, 22, Benton Harbor, a passenger in Hatten's car.

State police of the Benton Harbor post reported Larry Howard, 25, Chicago, was arrested Sunday on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. Troopers said they stopped a car for speeding on I-94 in Benton township about 8:15 p.m. and seized an allegedly loaded .38 caliber pistol.

Trooper Ralph Drumm said the arrest followed an investigation into the robbery of Michael Lewis Neubauer, 2068 East Empire avenue. Neubauer reported he robbed of $163 in cash and a $150 stereo at his home after three men gave him a ride then followed him into his home. He was not hurt, troopers said.

Bloody Day In Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Northern Ireland had its bloodiest day so far this year on Sunday, when a British soldier was shot to death and the bodies of two murdered men were found in a burned-out car in Belfast. George Mitchell, the 19-year-old soldier, was killed by a sniper while he walked a patrol in Belfast's Markets section Sunday night. The bodies of the two murdered men were so badly burned they could not identified immediately. Police said one had been shot in the chest and his throat had been cut. This raised the 1977 death toll in the Roman Catholic-Protestant war to 11. Since the war started seven and a half years ago, 1,697 persons have been reported killed.

Measles Shot Study Out

CHICAGO (AP) — Some children get measles after being vaccinated against the disease because they were immunized too young, a medical study in California has found. Because of that, medical researchers now recommend revaccination for children who received their shots before the age of 13 months. The California study appears in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. It involved blood sampling of 465 children in the Stanford, Calif., area. Dr. Anne Yeager of Stanford University's school of medicine, along with several colleagues, found that about 15 per cent of children inoculated at age 12 months were not adequately protected against the disease. In contrast, only about 5 per cent of these immunized at 13 months or older failed to develop adequate immunity.

Police Casualties Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley says he is hopeful that the nation can continue to reduce the number of law enforcement officers killed in the line of duty. The FBI reported Sunday that 109 local, state and federal law enforcement officers died at the hands of criminals in 1976, 20 fewer than in 1975. Kelley said he hopes police departments, by closely examining the circumstances in which their men die, can reduce the number of killings in the future. A statistical breakdown of the 1976 deaths shows several patterns. Most of the officers were shot, and the weapon most often used was the handgun. More died in the South than in any other region. In 13 of the handgun cases, the officers were slain with their own weapons.

The committee is supported by a mandatory assessment paid by growers of one cent per 100 pounds of cider, eight cents per 100 pounds of fresh apples and four cents per 100 pounds of processed apples.

In normal times, that brings in about $300,000 a year from about 15 million bushels of apples. But drought reduced this year's crop, and income will only be about $200,000. As a result, there will be a big cut in the advertising budget. Michigan ranks third in apple production. Washington State produces about 50 million bushels and New York State some 23 million bushels.

Auto Antitrust Suit Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal antitrust complaint is expected to be filed against the auto industry within a year, according to Booth Newspapers Inc. The washington bureau of the newspaper group reported Sunday that Federal Trade Commission lawyers probing anticompetitive practices are moving faster than at first expected.

Industry and economic sources were quoted as saying the broad investigation of the auto companies which began Aug. 3 originally had been expected to take two years.

But the probe is moving so rapidly that it could reach the complaint stage in half that time, Booth reported.

Ford Motor Co. is so worried about the investigation that No. 2 automaker has started recuriting antiturst lawyers and economists in preparation for a prolonged fight, Booth reported. Refusing comment were Ford lawyers and Rod Markley, Ford's chief Washington lobbyist.

If a complaint is filed and upheld in the courts, remedies could range from a breakup of General Motors, and possibly Ford, Booth reported.

The auto companies are increasingly worried by the nature and volume of records being subpoenaed by the FTC, Booth also reported. The industry fears the once-broad probe is focusing on the fact that GM and Ford control more than 80 per cent of the nation's auto sales.

When the probe is finished, the FTC staff will present recommendations to the agency's five commissioners. It takes a majority vote to adopt a formal complaint.

Auto executives greeted news of the FTC probe last August with a "here-we-go-again" reaction. They contended that repeated investigations by government agencies had failed to turn up evidence of antitrust violations.

But the FTC is drawing on voluminous files turned over to the agency by the U.S. Justice Department, which has kept the industry under almost continual surveillance since the 1950s. The Justice Department wanted to file suit against the auto industry a decade ago, but the Johnson administration vetoed the move.

Last July, the Justice Department suspended its own probe and gave its files to the FTC. They contain data on anto pricing, profits, unit-cost economies and distribution practices.

Antitrust lawyers maintain there is no ture price competition in the auto industry. If they can show this came about because of the existence of a "shared monopoly," they could call for breaking up the auto industry into a large number of smaller cbmpanies.

Other less drastic remedies include limiting divestiture of supplier affiliates; consent orders to halt any price-fixing activity; and agreements to end exclusionary practices involving dealer franchises and the availability of parts.

The probe is the FTC's first full-scale examination of the auto industry in more than 30 years.

Window Shattered, Watches Are Gone

A display case containing 48 Timex watches valued at about $900 was reported stolen early today from Talbot's Drug store, 481 Pipestone street, Benton Harbor police said.

Patrolwoman C.J. Medders discovered a broken window at the front of the store about 3 a.m. and the watches missing. She said a brick is believed to have been used to break the window. Nothing else was believed missing. The watches were reported valued at between $12 and $30 apiece.

Benton Harbor police said three people were arrested early Sunday after police were called to a fight in the 200 block of Territorial road.

Police said they found several people fighting about 1:10 a.m. and made the arrests while breaking up the disturbance.

A 16-year-old girl was released to the custody of her parents after treatment for a cut sustained in the scuffle. She also was petitioned to juvenile court on a charge of drunk and disorderly and disorderly person. Booked at the Berrien county jail on the same charges was a man identified as Ester L. Guilty, 32, of Chicago.

A Benton Harbor man was hospitalized Saturday with a gunshot wound in the foot, and another Benton Harbor man was arrested on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder, city police reported.

Reported in "good" condition today at Mercy hospital was Frank Joshua, 43, of 365 Territorial road. Booked at the Berrien county jail was Jessie James Jones, for whom police listed two ages, 39 and 37, also of 365 Territorial.

Police said a .22 caliber rifle believed used in the shooting was confiscated. The shooting followed an apparent argument at 365 Territorial, police said.

Berrien county sheriff's officers reported David L. Hatten, 21, of 227 North Fair avenue, Benton Harbor, was booked at the county jail Sunday on four charges after allegedly struggling with two officers.

Sgt. James Bale and Deputy Tom Page said a man attempted to flee after they stopped a car on Fair avenue for a defective exhaust system.

Hatten was booked on charges of resisting arrest, driving with a suspended operator's license, and possession of open intoxicants in an auto, and an outstanding traffic warrant held by Covert township police.

Also booked on a charge of possession of open intoxicants in an auto was a man identified as Seccell Jones, 22, Benton Harbor, a passenger in Hatten's car.

State police of the Benton Harbor post reported Larry Howard, 25, Chicago, was arrested Sunday on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. Troopers said they stopped a car for speeding on I-94 in Benton township about 8:15 p.m. and seized an allegedly loaded .38 caliber pistol.

Saturday, troopers arrested a man on charges of carrying a concealed weapon and possession of marijuana and also arrested two other men on charges of possession of marijuana after stopping a car for speeding on I-94 in St. Joseph township. Troopers said they seized an allegedly loaded .32 caliber revolver and nearly an ounce of suspected marijuana.

Booked at the Berrien county jail on the two charges was Richard Eugene Walker, 23, and booked on charges of possession of marijuana were Joe R. Temple, 34, and Michael Sanders, 24, all of Hammond, Ind.

St. Joseph township police said an undetermined amount of valuables were reported stolen Sunday from the home of James Hand, 211 Windsor road, Fairplain.

Police said they followed tracks in the snow a short distance and found an empty rifle case, believed taken from the residence. Hand told police he was gone between 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. when he returned home and discovered the burglary. An inventory of missing items was to be made today, police said.

Area Arrests And Other Police News

Police Arrest Robbery Suspect

State police of the Benton Harbor post said Frank Eddie Lewis, Benton Township, was arrested Sunday on a charge of unarmed robbery of a Benton township man Jan. 15. Trooper Ralph Drumm said the arrest followed an investigation into the robbery of Michael Lewis Neubauer, 2088 East Empire avenue. Neubauer reported he robbed of $163 in cash and a $150 stereo at his home after three men gave him a ride then followed him into his home. He was not hurt, troopers said.

Lewis, 31, of 1825 Crystal court, was booked at Berrien county jail. Troopers said two other men were questioned and then released.

It's News TODAY

Bloody Day In Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Northern Ireland had its bloodiest day so far this year on Sunday, when a British soldier was shot to death and the bodies of two murdered men were found in a burned-out car in Belfast. George Mitchell, the 19-year-old soldier, was killed by a sniper while he walked a patrol in Belfast's Markets section Sunday night. The bodies of the two murdered men were so badly burned they could not identified immediately. Police said one had been shot in the chest and his throat had been cut. This raised the 1977 death toll in the Roman Catholic-Protestant war to 11. Since the war started seven and a half years ago, 1,697 persons have been reported killed.

Measles Shot Study Out

CHICAGO (AP) — Some children get measles after being vaccinated against the disease because they were immunized too young, a medical study in California has found. Because of that, medical researchers now recommend revaccination for children who received their shots before the age of 13 months. The California study appears in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. It involved blood sampling of 465 children in the Stanford, Calif., area. Dr. Anne Yeager of Stanford University's school of medicine, along with several colleagues, found that about 15 per cent of children inoculated at age 12 months were not adequately protected against the disease. In contrast, only about 5 per cent of these immunized at 13 months or older failed to develop adequate immunity.

Police Casualties Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kellee says he is hopeful that the nation can continue to reduce the number of law enforcement officers killed in the line of duty. The FBI reported Sunday that 109 local, state and federal law enforcement officers died at the hands of criminals in 1976, 20 fewer than in 1975. Kelley said he hopes police departments, by closely examining the circumstances in which their men die, can reduce the number of killings in the future. A statistical breakdown of the 1976 deaths shows several patterns. Most of the officers were shot, and the weapon most often used was the handgun. More died in the South than in any other region. In 13 of the handgun cases, the officers were slain with their own weapons.

Will Gov. Milliken Run Again -- With Jim Damman?

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — One of the hot items of gossip in Republican circles right now is: "What's going to happen to Jim Damman if Gov. Milliken runs again?"

The question ranks right up there with: "Is Gov. Milliken going to run again?"

Lt. Gov. James Damman's future is under debate because some Republican insiders feel he will be a liability to Milliken if the pair seeks re-election.

But nobody can put a finger on an organized effort to persuade Damman to step aside, or to persuade Milliken to dump him. Republicans all say

No One Knows, But That Doesn't Stop Hot Gossip In GOP Circles

They all hasten to confirm that Milliken will get his choice as a running mate, no matter how many within the GOP oppose Damman. And they all claim Milliken has not made up his mind, either about running or keeping Damman on the ticket.

Damman himself acknowledges he is aware "of an awful lot of speculation, but I'm not sure of any substantial basis to it."

The issue goes back to the 1974 election, when controversy over Damman's land dealings in Troy almost torpedoed Milliken's re-election bid. After the election, Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley issued a report saying Damman, as a city commissioner, voted on land use plans which affected his land holdings. But he found no criminal wrongdoing.

Many Republicans fear the issue will be raised again in 1978 if Milliken runs and keeps Damman on the ticket.

"The talk is, 'We need all the help we can get. Is Damman any sort of liability?' " said Senate Minority Leader Robert Davis of Gaylord.

"He knows there are good people who don't like him, who feel he's a liability on the ticket," said Michael Dively, state energy administrator and former GOP lawmaker.

GOP insiders also worry about the image of dumping a running mate before an election. "We have enough problems," Davis said. Dively added: "There's no way it could be resolved to everyone's satisfaction."

And others point out that despite the controversy, Milliken-Damman did win in 1974. And most political experts in both parties give Milliken an overwhelming early edge for re-election if he runs.

Most Republicans also believe Damman will try to stay on the ticket. "He's not even considering not running," Davis. "He has earned a lot of chits around the state and is well-liked." state Sen. Robert VanderLaan, R-Kentwood, a former majority leader. VanderLaan, R-Kentwood, a former majority leader. VanderLaan said he gets "nothing but good reports" from his district about Damman's appearances.

Backers also point out that Milliken has given Damman several major chores to reduce the doldrums of the second-in-command. And Damman has been actively traveling the state, meeting and speaking to organizations.

Will Gov. Milliken Run Again -- With Jim Damman?

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — One of the hot items of gossip in Republican circles right now is: "What's going to happen to Jim Damman if Gov. Milliken runs again?"

The question ranks right up there with: "Is Gov. Milliken going to run again?"

Lt. Gov. James Damman's future is under debate because some Republican insiders feel he will be a liability to Milliken if the pair seeks re-election.

But nobody can put a finger on an organized effort to persuade Damman to step aside, or to persuade Milliken to dump him. Republicans all say

No One Knows, But That Doesn't Stop Hot Gossip In GOP Circles

"there's a lot of talk," but nobody admits to doing the talking.

They all hasten to confirm that Milliken will get his choice as a running mate, no matter how many within the GOP oppose Damman. And they all claim Milliken has not made up his mind, either about running or keeping Damman on the ticket.

Damman himself acknowledges he is aware "of an awful lot of speculation, but I'm not sure of any substantial basis to it."

The issue goes back to the 1974 election, when controversy over Damman's land dealings in Troy almost torpedoed Milliken's re-election bid. After the election, Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley issued a report saying Damman, as a city commissioner, voted on land use plans which affected his land holdings. But he found no criminal wrongdoing.

Many Republicans fear the issue will be raised again in 1978 if Milliken runs and keeps Damman on the ticket.

"The talk is, 'We need all the help we can get. Is Damman any sort of liability?' " said Senate Minority Leader Robert Davis of Gaylord.

"He knows there are good people who don't like him, who feel he's a liability on the ticket," said Michael Dively, state energy administrator and former GOP lawmaker.

GOP insiders also worry about the image of dumping a running mate before an election. "We have enough problems," Davis said. Dively added: "There's no way it could be resolved to everyone's satisfaction."

And others point out, that despite the controversy, Milliken-Damman did win in 1974. And most political experts in both parties give Milliken an overwhelming early edge for re-election if he runs.

Most Republicans also believe Damman will try to stay on the ticket. "He's not even considering not running," Davis. "He has earned a lot of chits around the state and is well-liked." state Sen. Robert VanderLaan, R-Kentwood, a former majority leader. VanderLaan, R-Kentwood, a former majority leader. VanderLaan said he gets "nothing but good reports" from his district about Damman's appearances.

Backers also point out that Milliken has given Damman several major chores to reduce the doldrums of the second-in-command. And Damman has been actively traveling the state, meeting and speaking to organizations.
